ROUT WHOLE GERMAN ARMY; GREAT LOSS

PEACE PLAN OF WILSON TAKEN UP BY KAISER

Proposal in Balance as Washington Awaits Reply.

SAID TO BE WILLING

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—Emperor William has had under consideration for several days, it was learned tonight, an informal inquiry from the United States government as to whether Germany desires to discuss terms of peace with its foes.

Up to a late hour tonight the reply had not come, but on its tenor depends to some extent whether or not the informal peace movement inaugurated just a week ago tonight can be pursued further with Great Britain, France, and Russia.

The inquiry was not a formal one, such as President Wilson's original tender of good offices, but was an effort of an official character to determine whether Germany's reported willingness to talk peace was based on fact.

The chronology of the peace movement was revealed tonight after a canvass of officials, diplomatists, and others directly concerned in the incident.

Seven Days' Peace Moves.

The story of the seven days of peace talk, as told by some of the principals, is substantially as follows:

Saturday, Sept. 5, Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, dined with James Speyer, the banker, at the latter's residence in New York. Oscar Straus, American member of The Hague tribunal and former cabinet officer, was present. During the evening, as the conversation turned to the subject of peace in Europe, the German ambassador said that while he had had no advices from his government since leaving Berlin he recalled a conversation with the imperial chancellor there in which the latter said he believed the emperor would be willing to discuss measures of peace through mediation. Previous to the ambassador's conversation with the chancellor Emperor William had already acknowledged President Wilson's tender of good offices, but had been noncommittal as to its acceptance. Mr. Straus immediately asked the German ambassador for permission to repeat the conversation to Secretary Bryan at Washington. Count von Bernstorff gave his consent.

Gerard Told Developments.

Sunday, Sept. 6, Mr. Straus arrived in Washington and went to the home of Secretary Bryan, where they conferred. The secretary communicated later with President Wilson. It was decided to get the German ambassador's consent to forward a report of the incident to Ambassador Gerard for discussion with the German foreign office. In the meantime Mr. Straus was advised to talk the situation over with the British and French ambassadors here. He saw each that day.

Inquiry Sent to Kaiser.

Monday, Sept. 7.—The German ambassador reached Washington and conferred privately with Mr. Bryan. As a result of the conference the secretary cabled Ambassador Gerard to convey to Emperor William an inquiry from the American government as to whether he desired to confirm the statement reported to have been made by him to the imperial chancellor and repeated by the chancellor to Count von Bernstorff in private conversation. Copies of the message to Ambassador Gerard were sent by Secretary Bryan to Ambassador Page at London and Ambassador Herrick at Paris. Meanwhile Mr. Straus had talked with the British and French ambassadors, both of whom said they could make no definite statement without instructions, as they had heard nothing from their governments on the subject of peace. They were acquainted by Mr. Straus with what had occurred at the dinner in New York. Both the French and British ambassadors reported the incident unofficially to their respective foreign offices.

Tuesday, Sept. 8.—Secretary Bryan told the British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, what had occurred in detail and learned that the ambassador similarly had made inquiry of his government to learn its attitude toward peace.

Entente Stands Together.

Wednesday, Sept. 9.—Sir Edward Grey discussed with Ambassador Page the inquiry which the latter had received from Secretary Bryan. On the same day Sir Edward Grey cabled the British ambassador here that as Great Britain, France, and Russia had in the preceding week agreed not to make peace without common consent, the position of the triple entente was unanimous on the question of terms. Sir Edward said what the powers wanted was no temporary truce, but a permanent peace in Europe so that the Americans Urged to Offer Prayers for Peace Today.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 12.—That the influence and power of America, if steadily and consistently exerted, can bring peace to warring Europe is the pronouncement of the American Peace society. That a propaganda launched unitedly by the nation also could have the effect of eventually abolishing all war and bring about universal acceptance of the principle of arbitration also is set forth.

To this end the society today issued a message calling on peace loving people throughout the land to unite in prayer tomorrow and to continue their supplications each succeeding day until world peace is restored.

The message, which is signed by Senator Theodore F. Burton, president of the society, and Arthur D. Call, director, follows:

"The frightful consequences of the present European conflict are likely to be beyond the wildest conjectures. Never before in the history of the world have such large numbers of men and such quantities of armament been engaged in mortal combat; never before have such deadly machines of warfare been loosed in the destruction of man and property.

"Many thousands of lives are being sacrificed daily and will continue to be until this terrible conflict is stopped.

"The causes of the war are not hard to understand nor difficult to explain. The maintenance of enormous military and naval armaments by the nations of Europe, costing no less than $2,000,000,000 annually, and a compulsory military service have inevitably stimulated a warlike spirit.

"Again, certain sovereigns have had an insatiable ambition to increase their personal power and to extend the territorial limits of their country, regardless of the cost in men or money.

"Then, too, there have been the intolerable secret alliances founded upon an outgrown conception of effective statecraft. Added to these causes are racial and religious animosities which have existed for centuries, and trade rivalries and jealousies which have been constantly growing more acute.

"The burdens and miseries of the war will fall not so much upon the sovereigns of the nations engaged in it as upon the millions of men who are fighting in the ranks, upon the widows and orphans in the homes which are made desolate, and upon the generations yet unborn. The wheels of industry are still, commerce is paralyzed, thousands of lives which can never be restored are being sacrificed, and civilization is turned back a hundred years.

"In the midst of this distressing calamity the peace loving people of America have no small responsibility. The president of the United tSates has just asked that the 4th day of October be spent in prayer and supplication for a speedy termination of this bloodshed and woe.

"Ministers might well deliver sermons calling attention to the utter follies and irreparable losses of war, not only on Oct. 4 but next Sunday and on every possible occasion. A similar responsibility rests upon lecturers and upon the press.

"The various peace societies should, with renewed vigor, bend their energies toward creating a universal sentiment for international right-reason.

"Peace efforts, exerted by a people of a great nation whose neutrality and good faith is undoubted, cannot fail to have a salutary effect. The time must inevitably come when the peoples of the world will demand that the controversies between nations shall be settled by some form of judicial procedure similar to that now used in the settlement of controversies between individuals.

"Therefore, we urge upon peace loving people the country over the importance of immediately discussing among themselves this terrible situation, and of uniting in prayer and supplication today, and tomorrow, and of continuing their efforts on each succeeding day until world peace is restored."

BRITISH CAPTURE SOLOMON ISLANDS

Occupy, After Fight, Land Held 30 Years by Kaiser; Battle On in Baltic?

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The admiralty announced this afternoon that the British fleet has occupied Herbertshoehe, on Blanche bay, the seat of government of the German Bismarck archipelago and the Solomon islands.

The Bismarck archipelago, with an area of 18,000 square miles and a population of 200,000, is off the north coast of Australia and southeast of the Philippine islands. The group was assigned to the German sphere of influence by an agreement with Great Britain in 1885. German New Guinea is included in the jurisdiction.

Occupied on Friday.

The official press bureau gave out the following statement regarding the occupation this afternoon:

"A telegram has been received from Rear Admiral Sir George E. Patey, commanding the Australian navy, announcing the occupation at 7 a. m. Sept. 11 of the town of Herbertshoehe in the island of New Pommern (late New Britain).

"The British flag was hoisted without opposition.

Germans Fight Landing Party.

"A naval landing party under Commander J. A. Beresford of the Australian navy, established themselves on shore at dawn without the knowledge of the enemy, but stout resistance was offered while the force was destroying the wireless telegraph apparatus and the landing party had to force its way for a distance of four miles through the bush—the road in several parts being mined.

Plan to Capture Station.

"Guns have been landed and steps have been taken to capture the station.

"The casualties are: Killed, Lieutenant Commander Charles B. Elwell and two seamen of the Australian naval reserve; wounded, ten seamen.

"The German casualties are not known, but two German officers, five non-commissioned officers, and thirteen native policemen were taken prisoners."

Naval Fight Off Sweden?

A Copenhagen dispatch to the Times says it is reported from Sandhamm, Sweden, a town twenty-nine miles northeast of Stockholm, that a German fleet consisting of twenty-nine vessels has been sighted between Gotska Sandoen island, in the Baltic, and Kopparstenarne, nine miles north.

The Swedish newspaper reports that a tremendous cannonading has been heard on the line between Gotska Sandoen island and Nymo.

WIRES IN SLANG; HELD AS A SPY

"Kale Gone; Send Me Thirty Beans" Lands American in a German Jail.

New York, Sept. 12.—[Special.]—A story of how a telegram for financial assistance couched in typical American slang landed a manual training high school instructor in a German prison under suspicion of being a conspirator against the government was told today upon the arrival of the Italian liner Ancona from Naples.

Dr. Alexander Becker of this city was the man who had to occupy a cell for thirty hours as a result of the inability of German officials to fathom the Yankee vernacular, and his fellow teacher, Prof. Edouard San Giovanni, was the one who sent the wire that caused all the trouble.

The message was as follows: "Kale all gone. Wire thirty beans at once."

Beard Made Yankee Suspected.

One of the arrivals on the Ancona was Prof. W. A. Oldfather of the University of Illinois, who got into trouble in Italy for an equally harmless cause. He let his beard grow because it was too much trouble to shave, and the Italians arrested him seven times as a German spy because he was making maps and taking photographs in Calabria. They said no American wore a beard, and they would not believe he wasn't German.

The Ancona had 465 passengers, of whom 134 were Americans.

Sees Fighting in France.

The French liner La France arrived from Havre. Among the passengers was Frederic R. Coudert, a lawyer of international reputation. In Paris Mr. Coudert registered his automobile at the American embassy, flew the American flag on his machine and started on a tour through districts where fighting was in progress. He was present at the battle of Amiens.

"We saw a battery going into action and you cannot imagine the enthusiasm of those Frenchmen who seemed to be going to certain death," Mr. Coudert said. "They had been marching three days. They had fought engagement after engagement."

Sees German Flier Brought Down.

"I saw four French soldiers walking toward me," he added. "They had a German prisoner. He proved to be an aeroplane pilot who had just been shot out of his machine by a sharpshooter. He was badly injured and they were taking him to a hospital."

Arrivals and sailings of transatlantic steamships today were almost normal. Nearly 4,000 passengers, a majority of them American refugees, reached here from British, French, and Italian ports on four steamships.

WAR BROKE THIS MOTHER'S HEART

Berkeley, Cal., Woman Loses Two of Three Children on a Russian Battlefield.

BOY DIED IN HER ARMS.

After Refuge in Trench Little Girl Also Succumbed to Exposure During Flight.

New York, Sept. 12.—The Cunarder Campania, which docked tonight after an uneventful voyage from Liverpool, brought home the most sorrowful of all the women refugees who were stranded on foreign soil.

She is Mrs. Hannah Gibbs of Berkeley, Cal. Three months ago Mrs. Gibbs and her three children—Curtis, 7; Orlena Anna, 4, and Martha, 3—arrived at Wirballen, a Russian frontier town, to visit her husband's brother.

They passed the time visiting in this town and with relatives in a village several miles distant. Then came the war.

"See, see," Mrs. Gibbs said to reporters, as she pointed to the sole survivor of her little flock, "Martha is all I've got to take home to my husband. My poor babes, Orlena, Anna, and Curtis are buried in Russian fields without a stone over them."

Curtis died in his mother's arms in a Russian trench in the midst of a fierce battle between the troops of the czar and the allied armies of Germany and Austria-Hungary.

"Aug. 1," Mrs. Gibbs said, "I was with my brother-in-law at Wirballen. The children were playing in the yard, very, very happy. We heard only casually of the fighting. Toward night, when my brother-in-law did not come home, I became alarmed. When the children were asleep I heard reports, like gunshots.

Boy Becomes Ill.

"The next morning I gathered the three children and started to walk to the village where my relatives live. During the night Curtis, who was never strong, took a fit of coughing.

"We walked, or, rather, dragged ourselves along. Suddenly I found myself in the middle of Rusian troops hidden in trenches, and they were shooting rapidly. We tried to turn in another direction, but I got confused.

"A soldier jumped up from the trench and huddled all four of us into it. We lay in it all day, expecting every moment to die there. The soldiers were very kind, and said: 'Never fear; we'll not let any harm come to you, anyhow.'

Boy Dies in Her Arms.

"The fight kept on furiously until dark. Martha and Orlena Anna slept, but Curtis kept coughing and coughing. Day had hardly broken when the firing began again. Little Curtis grew weaker and weaker. Then he fell asleep on my bosom. I knew he was dead. In about three hours a lull came in the fighting. A soldier lifted me out of the trench with my dead boy in my arms, then lifted the others.

"I ran back to the village. Not a soul was in it. I knew where the undertaker lived. I took a coffin, put my boy in it and was carrying it along the road when two villagers met me and took the burden. Orlena Anna had caught a cold in the trenches and was coughing violently, so I had to carry her.

Girl Succumbs to Illness.

"Outside the village the men dug a grave and I put my boy in it. The men had to leave us and we went on. At night we slept in deserted houses until we reached Vilna. Orlena Anna died a few hours afterward.

"I had no money, but kind persons gave us some and I walked toward the old capital of Finland, where I met Mrs. Louise Bruce of Hoboken, N. J., who is with us. She advanced me money to get to Stockholm.

FRENCH AVIATOR KILLS TWO GERMANS IN BATTLE.

Chases Foe Fifteen Miles After Latters' Attack on Troyes—Precipitates Craft to Earth.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—News has just been received here of an exciting air battle in the vicinity of Troyes. A German aeroplane threw several bombs into the city and a French machine arose and gave chase. After a thrilling pursuit of fifteen miles the French aeroplane overtook the German aircraft near Piney, where an engagement ensued.

The French machine soon secured the advantage in position. Immediately afterward the German aeroplane was precipitated to earth and the two officers on board were killed.

AUSTRIA NEAR FINAL DEFEAT; ARMY CUT OFF

Russians Surround Retreating Forces Routed at Tomaszow.

PLAN BLOW AT KAISER

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The fate of the northern Austro-German army which was badly routed by the Russian forces during the fierce battle at Tomaszow, Russian Poland, remains in doubt. A Central News dispatch from Rome says:

"A telegram received here by the Messagero from Petrograd states that the second battle in Galicia resulted even more satisfactorily to the Russians than the first. The losses of the Austrians are estimated at 130,000, of whom 90,000 are prisoners."

Other dispatches from Petrograd tend to indicate that the Austrians and their German reinforcements have not yet met this crowning disaster, but are in the most desperate straits.

Retreating Austrians Hemmed In.

"The large Austrian forces which were engaged in defending Tomaszow have added their numbers to the fugitives, whose arrival on the left flank of the Austrian armies operating from the neighborhood of Rawaruska to the River Dniester during the last ten days distinctly favors the Russian attack.

"The Austro-German forces, which now are herded in an impossible country with the Rivers San and Vistula before them and the victorious Russian armies behind them, number more than a full army corps. According to the Austrian reckoning that is over 60,000 men. Their surrender is hourly expected. Russian cavalry guns are across their line of retreat on the other bank of the Vistula river and presumably also on the San river."

Flanking Movement Proceeds.

In a dispatch from Petrograd the correspondent of the Reuter Telegram company announces that the German soldiers are at present in the Grodek district of the Austrian theater of war. [Grodek is about sixteen miles west of Lemberg.]

The operations of the Russian troops on the two wings in the rear of the western Austrian army, the correspondent continues, are favorable to the Russian arms. Near Rawa-ruska, thirty-two miles to the west of Lemberg, the turning movement against the Austrian flank is proceeding successfully.

Situation in East Prussia.

Concerning German claims of successes against the Russians in East Prussia, the Morning Post correspondent says:

"The Germans have now moved up reinforcements of first line troops from Belgium and the French frontier into East Prussia. Presumably the reinforced armies have completed their concentration on the eastern front, as news comes of an attack in the direction of the Mazur lakes country, apparently in one wide front. The Germans thus are endeavoring now to force their way through their own fortified places which the Russians took some weeks ago.

"The success of the movement begun at Osterode and Allenstein, which places the Russians' advanced cavalry sections had seized a fortnight ago, is shown by the fact that the Russian line of defense in this region now is almost on its own territory again. The German attack is being driven back on the twenty mile front between Myschinez and Chorzle.

German Attack Not Menacing.

"Whether this German dash in force towards the base of the Russian forces in northwest Poland is anything more than an attempt to effect a diversion in aid of the sorely pressed Austrians is not clear. In any case it has no effect on the Russian occupation of East Prussia and the investment of Koenigsberg.

"Nor can the German advances in this region be credited by them as military successes, for the territory now regained merely was held by the Russian cavalry screen, which fell back fighting on its main bodies as the Germans advanced.

"Russia cannot advance with her main forces westward from Poland until the Austrians finally are accounted for."

Close In on Austrians.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 12.—The Russian troops are drawing nearer the San river, according to the official announcement made tonight. The Austrian army is in retreat and is being closely pursued by the Russians.

Gen. Ruzsky and Gen. Plehve have got behind the outermost Austrian army, whose position is hopeless—between the army from central Poland and victors of Lemberg, now well to the westward of

GREATEST STORY SINCE WAR BEGAN

E. Alexander Powell Cables Wonderful Description from German Front. Gen. von Boehn, Commander, Tells Correspondent Men Were Driven to Atrocities.

BY E. ALEXANDER POWELL.

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

Headquarters in the Field of the Ninth Imperial Army, Chateau Lafere, near Renaix, Belgium, Sept. 9 [delayed]—Three weeks ago the government of Belgium requested me to place before the American people a list of specific and authenticated atrocities committed by the German armies upon Belgian noncombatants.

Today Gen. von Boehn, commanding the Ninth Imperial field army, acting mouthpiece of the German general staff, has asked me to place before the American people the German version of the incidents in question.

GENERAL von BOEHN

So far as I am aware I am the only correspondent in the present war who has motored for an entire day through the ranks of the advancing German army, who has dined as a guest of the German army commander and his staff, and who has had the progress of the army on the march arrested in order to obtain photographs of the German troops.

This unusual experience came about in a curious and roundabout way. After an encounter in the streets of Ghent last Tuesday between a German military automobile and a Belgian armored car, in which two German soldiers were wounded, as described in dispatches, American Vice Consul Van Hee persuaded the burgomaster to accompany him immediately to the headquarters of Gen. von Boehn to explain the circumstances and ask that the city should not be held responsible for the unfortunate affair.

In the course of the conversation with Mr. Van Hee Gen. von Boehn remarked that copies of papers containing articles written by Alexander Powell criticising the German treatment of the Belgian civil population had come to his attention and said he regretted he could not have an opportunity to talk with Powell and give him the German version.

Mr. Van Hee said by a fortunate coincidence I happpened to be in Ghent, whereupon the general asked him to bring me out to dinner the following day, and issued a safe conduct through the German lines.

Takes Intrepid American Photographer.

Though nothing was said about a photographer, I took with me Photographer Donald Thompson. As there was some doubt regarding the propriety of taking a Belgian military driver into the German lines, I drove the car myself.

Before we passed the city limits of Ghent things began to happen. Entering a street, which leads through a section inhabited by the working classes, we found ourselves in the midst of a mob of several thousand excited Flemings. Above the sea of threatening arms, brandished sticks, and angry faces rose the figures of two German soldiers with carbines slung across their backs, mounted on work horses. It seems they strayed into the city by mistake.

As we approached a burly Belgian raised a cane and the crowd made a concerted rush for the Germans. A blast from my siren opened a lane through the crowd and I drove the car alongside the terrified Germans.

Saves German Soldiers from Mob's Ire.

"Quick," shouted Van Hee in German, "off your horses. Into the car. Hide your rifles. Sit on the floor. Keep out of sight."

The crowd, seeing its prey escaping, surged around us with a roar. For an instant things looked ticklish indeed.

Van Hee jumped on the seat.

"I am American consul," he shouted. "These men are under my protection. You civilians are attacking German soldiers in uniform. If a hair of these men's heads is harmed your city will be burned about your ears."

At that moment a Belgian shouldered his way through the crowd and leaped on the running board. Quick as a thought Thompson knocked up the man's hand and the same instant I threw on the power. The big car leaped forward like a startled horse, the mob scattering like autumn leaves before it.

It was a close call for every one concerned, but a much closer call for Ghent, for had those German soldiers been murdered by the civilians in the city streets no power on earth could have saved the city from vengeance. Gen. von Boehn told me so himself.

Prove Angels in Disguise to U. S. Refugees.

A new minutes later, as playlets follow each other in quick succession on the stage, the scene changed from tragedy to a screaming farce. As we came thundering into the little town of Sottegem in a sleepy hollow of Belgium, we saw in the center of the town square a pyramid at least ten feet high of wardrobe trunks, steamer trunks, and suit cases. From the summit of this extraordinary monument floated an American flag.

As our car came to a sudden halt there was a chorus of exclamations in all dialects from Maine to southern California and from the door of a nearby café there came pouring a flood of Americans. They proved to be a lost detachment of that great army of tourists which at the beginning of hostilities started its mad retreat for the coast, leaving Europe strewn with baggage.

This particular detachment had been caught at Brussels and as food supplies were running short they determined to make a dash for Ostend. Perhaps "crawl" would be a better word, for they made the journey as far as Sottegem in two cumbersome farm wagons. Upon reaching Sottegem the Belgian drivers, hearing that the German army was approaching, refused to go farther and unceremoniously dumped their passengers in the town square.

"We'll Never Go There Any More."

When we arrived they had been there twenty-four hours. It was a mixed assemblage. Two school teachers, women of fashion, a Pennsylvania farmer, and a quartet of professional tango dancers from San Francisco who had been doing a turn at the Palais du Danse in Brussels were in the crowd.

Van Hee and I skirmished about, and after much argument succeeded in

KAISER LOSES IN BELGIUM AND FRANCE

Luneville Retaken and Invaders' Right Wing Driven Far Back.

LINES IN NORTH CUT

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Sept. 13, 1:30 a. m.—An Ostend dispatch to the Reuter Telegram company says:

"Crown Prince Frederick William and Prince Adalbert of Prussia, the emperor's third son, and Prince Carl of Wuertemberg are reported to have died in a hospital at Brussels."

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Sept. 13, 4 a. m.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram company from Paris says that the French have reoccupied the city of Luneville, department of Meurthe-et-Moselle.

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Sept. 13, 2 a. m.—Five days of incessant fighting have resulted in signal victories for the allies, and the whole of the German line in France is in retreat, according to messages received from the field of action last night.

The right wing of the German army, which had advanced to within a few miles of the walls of Paris, yesterday was reported to have fallen back to Soissons, Braine, and Fismes. Soissons is fifty miles to the northeast of Paris, and the other towns named are still farther to the east.

In the center the German army has fallen back beyond Sermaize and Revigne, where they abandoned large stores, and in Lorraine the French have advanced, the Germans evacuating St. Die.

The allies are closely pursuing the retreating Germans and are said to be taking many prisoners.

STATEMENT TELLS VICTORIES.

The following official communication was issued last night by the French war office in Paris:

"Notwithstanding the fatigue occasioned by five days of incessant fighting, our troops are vigorously pursuing the enemy, which is in general retreat.

"This retreat appears to have been more rapid than the advance. This has been so precipitate at certain points that our troops have gathered up at the general quarters, notably at Montmirail, charts, documents, and personal papers abandoned by the enemy, and also packages of letters which had been received or were ready to be forwarded.

"In the district of Fromentieres the enemy abandoned several batteries of mortars and a number of caissons of ammunition.

TWO "DO OR DIE" ORDERS.

"On Sept. 6 the commander in chief of the French armies addressed the following order of the day to his troops:

> At the moment when a battle is being engaged, on the result of which the welfare of the country depends, it is important to remind all that it is no longer time to look behind. All efforts must be employed to attack and to drive back the enemy.
> A force which cannot advance any farther shall, no matter at what cost, retain the conquered ground and be killed on the spot rather than fall back. Under the present circumstances no weakness can be tolerated.

"We now know how these instructions have been carried out and the brilliant results obtained.

ORDER GIVEN TO GERMANS.

"When our victorious troops entered Vitry-le-Francois there was found in the house occupied by the general staff of the Eighth corps of the German army the following order, signed by Lieut. Gen. Tulff von Tschepe und Weidenbach:

"Vitry-le-Francois, Sept. 7.—The end aimed at by our long and painful marches has been reached. The main French forces have been compelled to accept battle after continuously falling back. The great decision is unquestionably near at hand. Tomorrow, therefore, the whole forces of the German army, as well as those of our army corps, must be engaged all along the line from Paris to Verdun in order to save the welfare and the honor of Germany.

"I expect that every officer and soldier, notwithstanding the battles and heroisms of the last few days, will do his full duty and until his last breath. Everything depends on the result of the day tomorrow.

"It is interesting to make a comparison of these addresses. It shows that the Germans do not lend less importance to the issue of the battle of Marne than does our commander in chief."

BELGIANS CUT ENEMY'S LINES.

The Belgian army again has assumed the offensive against the Germans and at a battle fought at Cortenberg it won a victory which resulted in the German army in Belgium being cut in two. A large number of German prisoners were taken and the line toward Liege has been occupied by the Belgians. The railroad to Tirlemont was destroyed. The victory was due in great part to artillery of heavy caliber, which was used for the first time there.

A dispatch to the Belgian legation says that after the Belgians took the offensive Malines and Aerschot were recaptured.

A dispatch received from Paris last night contained the significant statement that the Germans are mining the roads in Belgium which the allies would follow in pursuit of an army retreating in the direction of Berlin.

THREE DISTRICTS NOW CLEAR.

The Chronicle's Ostend correspondent telegraphs:

"The provinces of Antwerp, Limburg, and Flanders, north of the line between Brussels and Liege, have been entirely cleared of Germans. There is a strong offensive movement in the direction of the south by Belgian forces hitherto guarding Antwerp."

The Flanders Liberale issues the following:

"We learn from excellent sources that the German army which intended to attack Antwerp has been cut off between Brussels and Louvain by the Belgian army."

A dispatch from Amsterdam says: "Belgian troops which have moved out of Antwerp have resumed the offensive with brilliant success."

TAKE MANY GERMAN GUNS.

According to official announcement made here the Third French army has captured all the artillery of one German army corps.

The artillery of a German army corps consists of two regiments of field pieces (eighteen batteries of field guns and six batteries of field howitzers, a total of seventy-two pieces), one or two batteries of heavy field artillery, and a machine gun group.

ACTIONS OF BRITISH ARMY.

The Official Press Bureau made the following announcement last night:

"A summary, necessarily incomplete, may be attempted of the operations of the British expeditionary force and the French army during the last four days.

"On Sept. 6 the southward advance of the German right reached the extreme point at Coulommiers and Provins, cavalry patrols having penetrated even as far south as Nogent-Sur-Seine.

"This movement was covered by a large flanking force west of the line of the River Ourcq, watching the outer Paris defenses and any allied force that might come from them.

"The southward movemeent of the enemy left his right wing in a dangerous position, as he had evacuated the Creil-Senlis-Compiegne region, through which his advance had been pushed.

"The allies attacked this exposed wing both in front and on the flank on Sept. 8. The covering force was assailed by a French army based upon the Paris defenses and brought into action on the line between Nanteuil le Haudouin and Meaux.

"The main portion of the enemy's right wing was attacked frontally by the British army, which had been transferred from the north to the east of Paris, and by a French corps advancing alongside it on a line between Crecy, Couloummiers, and Sezanne.

OPERATIONS A FULL SUCCESS.

"The combined operations have up to the present been completely successful. The German outer flank was forced back as far as the line of the Ourcq river. There it made a strong defense and executed several vigorous counter attacks, but was unable to beat off the pressure of the French advance.

"The main body of the enemy's right wing vainly endeavored to defend the line of the Grand Morin river and then that of the Petit Morin.

DISORDER IN GERMAN FLIGHT.

"The British army, with a portion of the French forces on the left, crossed this river below Chateau Thierry—a movement which obliged the enemy's forces west of the Ourcq, already assailed by the French corps forming the extreme left of the allies, to give way and retreat northeastward in the direction of Soissons.

"Since Sept. 10 the whole of the German right wing has fallen back in considerable disorder, closely followed by the French and British troops.

"Six thousand prisoners and fifteen guns were captured on the 10th and 11th, and the enemy is reported to be continuing its retirement rapidly over the Aisne, evacuating the Soissons region.

"The British cavalry is reported today to be at Fismes, not far from Reims.

VICTORIES ON EASTERN LINE.

"While the German right wing has been driven back and thrown into disorder, the French armies further to the east have been strongly engaged with the German center, which had been pushed forward as far as Vitry-Le-Francois.

"Between Sept. 8 and 10 our allies were unable to make much impression west of Vitry. In the 11th, however,, this portion of the German army began to give way, and eventually abandoned Vitry-Le-Francois, where the enemy's line of battle was forming a salient, under the impulse of the French troops.

"Between the Upper Marne and the Meuse, the French troops are following up the enemy and driving a portion of his forces northward toward the Argonne forest country.

"The enemy, thus in retreat along the whole line west of the Meuse, has suffered gravely in morale, besides encountering heavy losses in personnel and material."

GLAD NEWS FOR PARIS.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—It was officially announced here this afternoon that the German forces to the east of Paris are retreating, and that they are offering only a feeble resistance to the French and British troops.

The official communication says:

"On our left wing the Germans have begun a general retreating movement between the Oise and the Marne.

"Our troops have crossed the River Ourcq and are moving this (Saturday) morning in rapid pursuit of the enemy.

CAVALRY BACK AT SOISSONS.

"Two hundred prisoners were captured. The cavalry of the allies were between Soissons and Fismes last night.

"The enemy are retreating north of Vitry-le-Francois. Yesterday their front lay between Soissons, Braine, and Fismes, and the mountain of Reims.

"Their cavalry seems to be exhausted. The Anglo-French forces, which pursued them, encountered on Sept. 11 only feeble resistance.

ABANDON FORTIFIED PLACE.

"At the center on our right wing the Germans have evacuated Vitry-le-Francois, where they had fortified themselves, and also they have evacuated the alley of the Saul river. Attacked at Sermaize and at Revigny, they abandoned a large quantity of war material.

"The German forces which have been occupying the Argonne region have begun to give way. They are retreating to the north, through the forest of Belnoue.

"In Lorraine we have made slight progress. We occupy the eastern boundary of the forest of Champenoux, Rehainvillers, and Gerbenvillers.

"The Germans have evacuated St. Die.

"In Belgium the Belgian army is acting vigorously against the German troops who are before the fortified position of Antwerp."

BELGIANS UPSET GERMAN PLAN

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

ANTWERP, Sept. 12.—The sudden change in the Belgian policy, from the defensive to the offensive, has had a material effect upon German strategical dispositions in Belgium. The Ninth army corps, which was located around Lille in France, has been recalled while on its way to join the forces of Paris, and is now opposing the Belgian infantry.

The most remarkable thing about the Belgian attack upon Aerschot, which ended in the driving out of the Germans, was the accuracy of their artillery fire. Three small villages which were held by the Germans were destroyed by shell fire in little more than an hour, and following that Gen. La Forge, commanding the Belgians, ordered his carabineers to deliver a grand assault upon the German position.

BELGIANS WIN WITH BAYONET.

For half an hour before the assault took place the Belgian guns kept pouring a perfect storm of shells, mostly shrapnel, upon the German line, with the result that several hamlets which had been used as protection by the enemy were set on fire and made uninhabitable.

The enemy was strongly intrenched along the railway and with a close wood on its flank, but despite the awful machine gun fire that was directed against the advancing Belgians, these "black devils," as the Germans call them, would not be denied.

The sight of the cold steel seemed to scare the Germans, and, as the Belgians came on, cheering like madmen and ignoring the fall of their comrades, the Germans turned tail, and inside of twenty minutes the Belgians were in complete possession of the position which the enemy had held.

RENAME STREETS IN PARIS.

Germany Avenue and Berlin Street Are Given More Befitting Titles.

Two Parisian streets have been renamed as a result of the war, according to a recent issue of the French newspaper Excelsior, which reached Chicago yesterday. L'avenue d'Allemagne [Germany avenue] has been given the name Jean Jaurès avenue, in honor of the Socialist deputy who was recently murdered, while La Rue de Berlin [Berlin street] has been designated Rue de Liége [Liége street]. This change was ordered by the municipal council of the French capital and approved by the ministry.

SHIFTS BLAME FOR OUTRAGES

getting two farm carts to transport the fugitives into Ghent. For the thirty mile journey the thrifty peasants demanded $80.

Among those in the party were Miss Harriett Colles and Miss Mary Colles, of New York; Philip Ivernois of Pittsburgh; Hector Disgain and son of Point Marion, Ia.; Richard Carle, Frank Warren, and Rose Belmont, of San Francisco; Erna Wolfe of Sacramento; and Paul Dubois and sister of Ville, W. Va.

The last I saw of them they were perched on top of the luggage, piled on two creaking carts, rumbling down the road to Ghent, with their huge American flag flying above them, and singing at the top of their voices, "We'll never go there any more."

Finds Selves in Midst of Kaiser's Men.

Half a mile out of Sottehem our road debouched into the great highway which leads through Lille to Paris. We suddenly found ourselves in the midst of the German army. It was a sight never to be forgotten. Far as the eye could see stretched solid columns of marching men, pressing westward, ever westward.

The army was advancing in three mighty columns along three parallel roads. These dense masses of moving men in their elusive blue gray uniforms looked for all the world like three monstrous serpents crawling across the countryside.

American flags which fluttered from our windshield proved a passport in themselves and as we approached the close locked ranks they parted to let us through.

For five solid hours, traveling always at express train speed, we motored between the walls of the marching men. In time the constant shuffle of boots and the rhythmic swing of gray clad arms and shoulders grew maddening and I became obsessed with the fear that I would send the car plowing into the human wedge on either side.

Miles and Miles of German Soldiers.

It seemed that the ranks never would end, and as far as we were concerned they never did, for we never saw or heard the end of that mighty column.

We passed regiment after regiment, brigade after brigade of infantry, and after them hussars, Uhlans, cuirassiers, field batteries, more infantry, more field guns, ambulances, then siege guns, each drawn by thirty horses, engineers, telephone corps, pontoon wagons, armored motor cars, more Uhlans, the sunlight gleaming on their forest of lances, more infantry in spiked helmets, all sweeping by as irresistible as a mighty river, with their faces turned toward France.

This was the Ninth field army and composed the very flower of the empire, including the magnificent troops of the Imperial guard. It was first and last a fighting army. The men were all young. They struck me as being keen as razors and as hard as nails. The horses were magnificent. They could not have been better. The field guns of the Imperial guard were almost twice the size of any used by our army.

Thirty-two Horses Draw One Giant Howitzer.

But the most interesting of all, of course, were the five gigantic howitzers, each drawn by sixteen pairs of horses. These howitzers can tear a city to pieces at a distance of a dozen miles.

Everey contingency seems to have been foreseen. Nothing was left to chance or overlooked. Maps of Belgium, with which every soldier is provided, are the finest examples of topography I have ever seen. Every path, every farm building, every clump of trees, and every twig is shown.

At one place a huge army wagon containing a complete printing press was drawn up beside the road and a morning edition of Deutsche Krieger Zeitung was being printed and distributed to the passing men. It contained nothing but accounts of German victories, of which I never had heard, but it seemed greatly to cheer the men.

Field kitchens with smoke pouring from their stovepipe funnels rumbled down the lines, serving steaming soup and coffee to the marching men, who held out tin cups and had them filled without once breaking step.

Covered Wagons Hide Machine Guns.

There were wagons filled with army cobblers, sitting cross legged on the floor, who were mending soldiers' shoes just as if they were back in their little shops in the fatherland. Other wagons, to all appearances ordinary two wheeled farm carts, hid under their arched canvas covers nine machine guns which could instantly be brought into action.

The medical corps was as magnificent as businesslike. It was a perfectly equipped and as efficient as a great city hospital.

Men on bicycles with a coil of insulated wire slung between them strung a field telephone from tree to tree so the general commanding could converse with any part of the fifty miles long column.

The whole army never sleeps. When half is resting the other half is advancing. The soldiers are treated as if they were valuable machines which must be speeded up to the highest possible efficiency. Therefore, they are well fed, well shod, well clothed, and worked as a negro teamster works mules.

Disobedient Soldier Given Terrific Beating.

Only men who are well cared for can march thirty-five miles a day week in and week out. Only once did I see a man mistreated. A sentry on duty in front of the general headquarters failed to salute an officer with sufficient promptness, whereupon the officer lashed him again and again across the face with a riding whip. Though welts rose with every blow, the soldier stood rigidly at attention and never quivered.

As we were passing a German outpost a sentry ran out and signaled us:

"Are you Americans?"

"We are," I said.

"Then I have orders to take you to the commandant," he said.

"But I am on my way to see Gen. von Boehn. I have a pass signed by the general himself," I said.

"No matter," the man stubbornly insisted; "you must come with me to the commander. He has so ordered."

So there was nothing for it but to go with the soldier. He had a most compelling way about him. We had visions of prison cells, courts martial, and firing parties, though we tried to laugh it off. We found the commandant and his officers quartered at a farmhouse a few rods down the road. He proved to be a stout, florid-faced, boisterous captain of infantry.

SENDS NOTE TO KIN IN U. S.

"I'm sorry to delay you," he said, "but I ordered the sentries to stop the first American car that passed along the road. I have a brother in America and I want to send a letter to him to let him know that all is well with me. You will send it to him?"

"Yes, I'll do better than that, captain," I said. "If you will give me his name and he reads the newspapers, he will read tomorrow morning at breakfast that I met you."

So Mr. F. Zur-Nedden, consulting engineer, 38 Pennsylvania avenue, Rosebank, New York, may be glad to know that I left his soldier brother comfortably quartered in a farmhouse on the outskirts of Renaix, in excellent health, but drinking more red wine than is likely to be good for him.

FINALLY REACHES VON BOEHN

It was considerably past midday and we were within a few miles of the French frontier when we saw a guidon, which signifies the presence of the head of the army, planted at the entrance of a splendid old chateau. As we passed through the iron gates and whirled up the stately tree lined drive and drew up in front of the terrace a dozen officers in staff uniform came running out to meet us. For a few minutes it felt as it we were being welcomed at a country house in America instead of at the headquarters of the German army in the field. So perfect was the field telephone service that the staff had been able to keep in touch with our progress along the lines and were waiting dinner for us.

Gen. von Boehn I found to be a red faced, gray mustached, jovial old warrior who seemed much worried for fear we were not getting enough to eat, particularly not enough to drink. He explained that the Belgian owners of the chateau had displayed bad taste to run away and take their servants with them, leaving only one bottle of champagne in the cellar. That bottle was good as far as it went, however.

OFFICERS ALL SPEAK ENGLISH

Nearly all of the officers spoke English and during the meal the conversation was all of the United States, for one of them had been attached to the embassy at Washington and another had attended the army school at Fort Riley.

After dinner we grouped ourselves on the terrace in the self-conscious attitude people always assume when having their pictures taken, and Thompson made some photographs. They probably are the only ones of this war, at least of a German general and an American war correspondent who was not under arrest.

Then we gathered about the table, on which was spread a staff map of the war area, and got down to serious business. The general began by asserting that the stories of atrocities perpetrated on Belgian noncombatants were a tissue of lies.

"Look at these officers about you," he said. "They are gentlemen like yourself. Look at the soldiers marching past in the road out there. Most of them are fathers of families. Surely you don't believe they would do the things they have been accused of."

EXPLAINS AERSCHOT CRIMES.

"Three days ago, general," I said, "I was in Aerschot. The whole town now is but a ghastly, blackened, blood-stained ruin."

"When we entered Aerschot the son of the burgomaster came into the room, drew a revolver, and assassinated my chief of staff" the general said. "What followed was only retribution. The townspeople only got what they deserved."

"But why wreak your vengeance on women and children?"

"None has been killed," the general asserted positively.

"I am sorry to contradict you, general," I asserted with equal positiveness, "but I have myself seen their mutilated badies. So has Mr. Ginson, secretary of the American legation at Brussels, who was present during the destruction of Louvain."

"Of course, there always is danger of women and children being killed during street fighting," said Gen. von Boehn, "if they insist on coming into the street. It is unfortunate, but it is war."

DATA STARTLES GENERAL.

"But how about a woman's body I saw, with her hands and feet cut off? How about a white haired man and his son whom I helped bury outside Sempstad, who had been killed merely because a retreating Belgian had shot a German soldier outside their house? There were twenty-two bayonet wounds on the old man's face. I counted them How about the little girl 2 years old who was shot while in her mother's arms by a uhlan, and whose funeral I attended at Beystopdenberg? How about the old man who was hung from the rafters in his house by his hands and roasted to death by a bonfire being built under him?"

The general seemed somewhat taken aback by the amount and exactness of my data.

"Such things are horrible, if true," he said. "Of course our soldiers, like soldiers of all armies, sometimes get out of hand and do things which we would never tolerate if we knew it. At Louvain, for example, I sentenced two soldiers to twelve years' penal servitude apiece for assaulting a woman."

LOUVAIN LIBRARY INCIDENT

"Apropos of Louvain," I remarked, "why did you destroy the library? was one of the literary storehouses of the world."

"We regretted that as much as any one else," answered the general. "It caught fire from burning houses and we could not save it."

"But why did you burn Louvain at all?" I asked.

"Because the townspeople fired on our troops. We actually found machine guns in some of the houses." And smashing his fist down on the table, he continued: "Whenever civilians fire upon our troops we will teach them a lasting lesson. If women and children insist on getting in the way of bullets, so much the worse for the women and children."

"How do you explain the bombardment of Antwerp by Zeppelins?" I queried.

EXPLAINS ZEPPELIN BOMBS.

"Zeppelins have orders to drop their bombs only on fortifications and soldiers," he answered.

"As a matter of fact," I remarked, "they only destroyed private houses and civilians, several of them women. If one of those bombs had dropped 200 yards nearer my hotel I wouldn't be smoking one of your excellent cigars today."

"This is a calamity which I thank God didn't happen."

"If you feel for my safety as deeply as that, general," I said earnestly, "you can make quite sure of my coming to no harm by sending no more Zeppelins."

"Well," he said, laughing, "we will think about it." He continued gravely: "I trust you will tell the American people through your paper what I have told you today. Let them hear our side of this atrocity business. It is only justice that they should be made familiar with both sides of the question."

I have quoted my conversation with the general as nearly verbatim as I can remember it. I have no comments to make. I will leave it to my readers to decide for themselves just how convincing are the answers of the German general staff to the Belgian accusations.

PHOTOGRAPHS GERMAN ARMY.

Before we began our conversation I asked the general if Mr. Thompson might be permitted to take photographs of the great army passing. Five minutes later Thompson was whirled away in a military motor car ciceroned by an army officer who had attended the army school at Fort Riley. It seems they stopped the car beside the road in a place where the light was good, and when Thompson saw approaching a regiment or battery of which he wished a picture he would tell the officer, whereupon the officer would blow his whistle, and the whole column would halt.

"Just wait a few minutes until the dust settles," Thompson would remark, nonchalantly lighting a cigaret, and the Ninth imperial army, whose columns stretched over the countryside as far as the eye could see would stand in its tracks until the air was sufficiently clear to get a picture.

Thus far the only one who has succeeded in halting the German army is this little photographer from Kansas.

SHOW THOMPSON GUNNERY.

As a field battery of the Imperial guard rumbled past, Thompson made some remark about the accuracy of the American gunners at Vera Cruz.

"Let us show you what our gunners can do," said the officer, and gave an order. There were more orders, a perfect volley of them, a bugle shrilled harshly, the eight horses strained against their collars, the drivers cracked their whips, and the gun left the road, bounded across a ditch, and swung into position in an adjacent field.

On a knoll three miles away an ancient windmill was beating the air with its huge wings. The shell hit the windmill fair and square and tore it into splinters.

"Good work," Thompson observed critically; "if those fellows of yours keep on they'll be able to get a job in the American navy after the war."

In all the annals of modern war I do not believe there is a parallel to this American war photographer halting with an upraised, peremptory hand the advancing army, leisurely photographing regiment after regiment, and then having a field gun of the Imperial guard go into action solely to gratify his curiosity.

OFFICERS PART OF MACHINE.

They were courteous and hospitable to me, these German officers, and I have been immensely interested in all I have seen. But when all is said and done they impress me not as human beings who have weaknesses and virtues, likes and dislikes of their own, but rather as parts of a more or less important and mighty highly efficient machine directed and controlled by cold, calculating intelligence in far away Berlin.

That machine has about as much of the human element in it as a meat chopper or the death chair at Sing Sing. Its mission is to crush, pulverize, obliterate, and destroy, and no considerations of civilization, chivalry, or humanity will affect it.

These Germans with their grim, set faces, their monotonous uniforms, and the ceaseless shuffle, shuffle of their boots are getting on my nerves. My car is at the door. I am going back to my friends, the Belgians.

PIANIST ON HIS WAY HOME.

Fred J. Persson, Chicago Musician, Gets Out of War Zone and Sails for America.

Friends of Fred J. Persson of 1921 Wolfram street, the pianist, who was last heard from in Vienna, received word yesterday that he had succeeded in reaching Paris and sailed for New York on Sept. 7 on the steamer La France. The vessel is expected to make port today. From Vienna, where Mr. Persson went to study last spring, the musician went to Zurich, Switzerland, and from there to Paris.

AUSTRIA FACES NEW DISASTER; ARMY CUT OFF

that city. The timeliness of these ten days' victorious fighting enables a great army to resist the Germans' new attempt to initiate a quick, aggressive campaign from north Poland toward Warsaw.

The successful campaign in Galicia has produced significant manifestations throughout southeastern Europe. Even Turkey now is inclined to draw back from belligerency, and the Roumanians may depose their Hohenzollern dynasty unless allowed to join the allies. Bulgaria clearly will remain neutral or become friendlier.

Austrian Disaster Confirmed.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—A Havas agency dispatch from Petrograd says that yesterday's news of the defeat of the Austrian left wing near Tomaszow, Russian Poland, is confirmed. The Austrians were surrounded in a triangle formed by the Vistula river and a tributary, the San.

The wing was crushed before the arrival of the Germans, who came by forced marches to the aid of the Austrians. Poor and inadequate bridges delayed the Germans and made the defeat of their allies inevitable.

The Russians followed up this victory by pursuing the retreating Austrians twenty miles and taking up positions in the fortified localities of Opole and Tourobin. The Russians suffered heavy casualties in taking Tomaszow.

Serbs Get Austrian Stores.

ROME, Sept. 12.—A dispatch from Nish, Servia, to the Messagero says the Servians found at Semlin and Foca military magazines which were complete in every detail. They rebuilt the bridges across the Save and Danube, killed 500, and captured 500 Austrians.

The Austrians continue their retreat, and are leaving numerous prisoners and guns behind them.

Reservists Leave San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 12.—A party of 200 French reservists left here tonight for New York, from which port they expect to sail next Saturday with about 1,300 of their countrymen for Europe.

GERMAN-AMERICANS IMPLORE WILSON TO REFUSE BELGIAN MISSION AUDIENCE.

SECRETLY RUSH 30,000 SOLDIERS ACROSS CANADA

LANDED AT LIVERPOOL

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 12.—Ninety trainloads of Sikh and Ghoorka soldiers, numbering 30,000, the flower of the native Indian army of Great Britain, have been passing through Toronto and North Bay bound for France. A portion of this army, which is merely the vanguard of further troops from India, sailed from Quebec on the Megantic on Aug. 29 and landed in Liverpool on Sept. 6. The balance proceeded across the Atlantic on special transports. Some of them are still on the ocean.

This remarkable movement, carried out on such a colossal scale, was kept absolutely secret by the department of militia and defense and not a word beyond a few rumors was allowed to reach the ears of the public. The army entered Canada at Vancouver, took five days to cross the continent on special trains, and departed at Quebec without any but the chief militia and transport officers being the wiser.

The facts of the story as set forth here were confirmed today by British army officers who accompanied the Indian brigades. The blanket of secrecy would still have been maintained were not the transports well out of reach of any German cruisers lurking in Atlantic waters.

Keep Blinds Down.

With blinds drawn on all trains as they passed through inhabited areas, no less than ninety long sections of coaches successfully concealed the identity of their contents over 3,000 miles of railway track.

The troops reached Vancouver on Aug. 24, on a fleet of transports chartered in India by the British government. Canadian Pacific trains were drawn up at the docks and took the newcomers some miles out of the city, where they rested for a portion of a day.

All regular freight and passenger trains were cleared from the line, to give the troop trains a right of way, and at a point in Alberta, for some reason not at present known, the Canadian Northern railway tracks were followed for more than 1,000 miles.

Then the trains reëntered the Canadian Pacific system and continued on that route to the ships' side at Quebec.

Avoid Large Cities.

Delays were constantly necessitated by taking circuitous routes to avoid observation at large towns and cities. This occurred at Winnipeg, Toronto, and other cities along the way. Ottawa was shunned altogether except for a few odd carloads, the object being to avoid the scores of special correspondents now centering about the headquarters of the Canadian department of militia and defense. Montreal likewise was passed on the north side.

Only between stations, where observers were few, were the soldiers allowed outdoor exercise, and even this privilege was reduced when the trains entered the eastern section.

Under these trying circumstances discipline was maintained according to the stoic standards to which the Sikhs and Ghoorkhas have always adhered in Britain's wars.

British officers were invariably in command, with natives in noncommissioned posts. Food supplies were requisitioned far in advance, consisting of bread, meat, jam, and tobacco. No liquor whatever was permitted.

As the trains came to towns and cities they were halted well on the outskirts until local arrangements could be made to pass through them without stopping. This process was acted upon from Vancouver to Quebec and resulted in cutting off nearly a day from the regular time of the trip.

The coöperation of the Canadian militia department had been assured many days in advance, and orders to facilitate the passage of the ninety trainloads worked out with few hitches.

Change of Schedule.

The explanation of the sudden canceling of the White Star liner Megantic's scheduled sailing a week ago is now divulged. At that time the militia department announced that the Princess Patricia Light Infantry, then aboard the Megantic, bound from Montreal for Liverpool, had been ordered off the ship at a point opposite Quebec.

No reason was then given. The general belief was that German cruisers had been reported in the gulf of St. Lawrence. The real reason was that the Indian troops were due to sail the moment they reached Quebec, because of the necessity for secrecy, and the Megantic was held for their accommodation.

Announced by Kitchener.

The fact that Indian troops were to be sent to France was announced by Earl Kitchener in the house of lords a week ago. How they were to reach there was not, of course, stated, and it was taken for granted that the Suez canal and the Mediterranean would be the route.

Owing to the uncertainty of Italy's favor at the time of embarkation and the possibility of complications with Turkey, plans were based on the transpacific route and have been carried through with magnificent success.

The army that has already passed through, is, it is said, to be followed by forces of equal proportions. A portion of the cost of transportation is being borne by the people of India, supplemented by generous gifts of the Indian princes.

Threat of Invasion of Albanian Town Leads Many Residents to Flee.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Advices from Avlona, Albania, received in Rome describe the situation there as becoming graver hourly, owing to the threat of Kiamil Elbassan to invade and sack the town with his forces, which number over 4,000. Avlona is undefended and many of the people have fled already. An invasion by troops from Epirus is feared.

FORMER CHICAGO WOMAN WARM IN GERMANS' PRAISE.

Miss Bertha Beitel Writes from Berlin That She's Proud of the Course Kaiser Has Taken in War.

Praise for Germany and Germans is contained in a letter which has reached William Dellenbach from Miss Bertha L. Beitel, a former resident of Chicago who is now in Berlin. Miss Beitel describes herself as a "neutral," but not "indifferent or blind."

"From the moment of reading the special telegram that announced the murder of the heir apparent to the throne of Austria," wrote Miss Beitel, "I watched the development of the crisis with the most intense interest, and I wish it were possible to express my admiration of Germany and the Germans.

"I am proud of them; proud of the government for the course it has taken in all its minutest details, so far as they are known to the uninitiated; proud of the army and navy, and proud of the people, from least to greatest. Of all the places in the great wide world, I know of none in which I would rather be just now than in Berlin."

Mrs. B. D. Anguish of Evanston received a cablegram yesterday announcing that her daughter, Maude, was sailing on the Nieuw Amsterdam from Rotterdam. Mr. and Mrs. Louie Labowitch of 4445 Magnolia avenue and Mr. and Mrs. David Labowitch of 2319 North Kedzie avenue, who were in Europe, are expected to arrive in Chicago tomorrow.

AMERICAN CHURCH COUNCIL URGES "CIVILIZED" WAR.

Plea Sent All Over Europe for Amelioration of Horrors of Conflict Now Raging.

New York, Sept. 12.—A plea for amelioration of the horrors of war was issued from this city today.

It was made by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, which announced that it had sent an appeal to the Free Church Council of Great Britain, the Protestant churches of Scotland and Ireland, the Evangelical and Lutheran churches of Germany, the Evangelical churches of France, the Greek churches of Russia, Greece, and the Balkan states, as well as to the Roman Catholic church.

The bodies were asked to urge through church services and through the religious press that all Christian families having kindred in the armies write them personal letters exhorting them, whatever may be the provocation of the enemy, to reduce in every possible way the horrors of war. Copies of the appeal have been submitted to the American ambassadors of all the nations at war.

PRINCE WANTS A SMOKE.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 12.—Crown Prince Frederick William has telegraphed the Lokal Anzeiger as follows:

"Please collect great quantities of tobacco and cigars for the men of my army and get them here as quick as possible."

BERLIN SILENT ON MARINE LOSS

No Details of Battle Made Public; Kaiser Praises His Generals.

CZAR HELD, IS REPORT.

BERLIN, via Copenhagen, via London, Sept. 12.—No details of the battles eastward of Paris and around Verdun have been received either from the general staff or the correspondents attached to headquarters.

A telegram has been made public which was sent by Emperor William to the king of Saxony congratulating him on the achievements of his army on Sept. 9 after hot fighting. The telegram throws little light on the fighting near Paris.

The army referred to is that under the Saxon general, Von Hausen, which is in an intermediate position between the armies of Gen. von Buelow on the right and Duke Albrecht of Wurttemberg on the left.

Victory for Crown Prince.

The German counter stroke to the Anglo-French offensive near Paris was delivered by the army of Crown Prince Frederick William, which captured a fortified French position southwest of Verdun.

This position interposed a barrier between the German Marne army, the left wing of which extended to Vitry-le-Francois, and the crown prince's forces.

Its occupation enables the closer coöperation of the two sections of the German invading army.

The attack on the barrier forts south of Verdun, supported by the German siege artillery, promises, in case of success, a completion of the encirclement of Verdun. An attempt of the garrison to break through the tightening lines has been expected for several days.

Time Not Ripe for Move.

The commander of the second Bavarian army corps, forming a part of the Sixth army in Lorraine, has issued an order of the day to the troops conveying the thanks of general headquarters to the Sixth army for holding out so stiffly, heroically, and successfully, and thereby preventing the enemy from sending reinforcements northward, and intimating that the time is not ripe for an offensive movement by this army.

The victory of Gen. von Hinderburg probably will clear German territory for the time being of Russians, whose flood of invasion had swept almost to the gates of Koenigsberg.

The Lokal Anzeiger assumes that the right wing of the defeated army is now not far from the Koenigsberg left, in the vicinity of Gumbinnen.

BRITISH USE WALKING WOOD IN ATTACK UPON GERMANS.

Masked with Boughs, They March to Attack and Bring Surprise to Enemy.

LONDON, Sept. 12, 2 a. m.—A correspondent describes a walking wood at Crecy. The French and British cut down trees and armed themselves with the branches. Line after line of infantry, each man bearing a branch, then moved forward unobserved toward the enemy.

Behind them, amid the lopped tree trunks, the artillerymen fixed themselves and placed thirteen pounders to cover the moving wood.

The attack, which followed, won the success it merited. It almost went wrong, however, for the French cavalry, which was following, made a detour to pass the wood and dashed into view near the ammunition reserves of the allies.

German shells began falling thereabouts, but British soldiers went up the hills and pulled the boxes of ammunition out of the way of the German shells. Ammunition and men came through unscathed. By evening the enemy had been cleared from the Marne district.

ALLIES KILL 20 PRISONERS WHEN THEY TRY TO ESCAPE.

Germans Captured Near Crecy Make Rush for Their Rifles, Thinking to Catch Guard Napping.

London, Sept. 12.—Twenty German prisoners taken during a mêlée near Crecy, were herded together in a clearing, their rifles being stacked nearby. In a rash moment they thought that they were loosely guarded and made a combined rush for the rifles. "They will never make another," is the laconic report.

SERB GIRLS FIGHT IN ARMY.

Women and Children Helping Against Austrians—Child Boasts of Dealing Death.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from Amsterdam says: "A Prague newspaper says Servian women and children are helping to fight the Austrians. A girl 12 years old, lying wounded in a Neusatz hospital, boasts of throwing sixteen hand grenades at her country's enemy."

PEACE JUBILEE TO BE HELD.

War Will Not Prevent Centenary Celebration of Signing of Treaty of Ghent in U. S.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—The centenary peace jubilee commemorating the signing of the treaty of Ghent on Christmas eve, 1814, will be carried out, regardless of conditions in Europe, according to a statement issued tonight by executive officials of the committee in charge. The ceremonies will begin next Christmas eve and continue throughout 1915.

PERUVIAN CITY REPORTED DESTROYED BY EARTHQUAKE.

Lima Gets News That Caraveli Has Been Wiped Out—Loss of Life Not Told.

LIMA, Peru, Sept. 12.—News has reached here that a tremendous earthquake has destroyed the city of Caraveli, in the department of Arequipa. The report says the people are in a panic, but no mention is made of loss of lives.

Caraveli is a town of about 4,000 inhabitants, 130 miles northwest of the port of Mollenda. Early in August a year ago the place was wrecked by an earthquake, but has since been rebuilt.

The district in which Caraveli is located is subject to frequent earthquakes.

GIVES 196 IRON CROSSES FOR BRAVERY ON FIELD.

German Emperor Recognizes Distinguished Services by Conferring Decoration.

BERLIN, Sept. 12, via London.—Emperor William has conferred 196 iron crosses for distinguished services in the field. Eighty-six of them went to members of the Fifty-third regiment and 110 to the Eighty-third regiment, garrisoned at Cassel. Among the recipients are Count Helmuth von Moltke, chief of staff, and Maj. von Winterfeldt, former military attaché to the German legation in Paris, and twenty-one other officers.

URGE WILSON TO SPURN BELGIAN PROTEST MISSION

German-Americans Want No Audience for Kaiser's Accusers.

CHICAGO EDITOR IS ONE

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—President Wilson is receiving scores of protests from German-American societies and individuals against receiving the delegation of Belgian officials which has come to this country to submit charges of atrocities committed in their country by the German troops.

Senator Lewis of Illinois presented at the White House today a letter from Horace Brand of Chicago, publisher of the Illinois Staats Zeitung, urging the president not to receive the delegation.

Holds It Unfair to Kaiser.

Mr. Brand asserted that it would be unfair and unjust to Germany to give official recognizance to an attempt to discredit the kaiser and his army.

Mr. Brand said that if the Belgian delegation be received he and other German-Americans would appreciate an opportunity to present the defense of Germany against the charges made by the kaiser's enemies.

Urges Brand Be Heard.

Senator Lewis added a request that the president grant a hearing to Mr. Brand if he decides to receive the Belgians. The delegation will arrive in Washington on Monday.

President Wilson stated a few days ago that he would receive the delegation and listen to the representations as a matter of courtesy.

To Washington Monday.

New York, Sept. 12.—Members of the Belgian commission, sent to the United States to lay before President Wilson detailed statements concerning alleged atrocities committed in Belgium by the Germans, will go to Washington on Monday. As the guests of prominent Belgians, they will spend Sunday at one of the suburbs of New York. Members of the commission said they had nothing further to add to the statement given out yesterday until after they had been received by the president.

KAISER LAUDS SAXON ARMY.

Their Success Forms a "New and Glorious Page in History," He Wires King.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—A German official dispatch sent by wireless through the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company says:

"The emperor has informed the king of Saxony by telegram that during the entire series of operations the Saxon army has, under the most difficult conditions, rendered surpassing service, and the success obtained yesterday after heavy fighting formed a new and glorious page in history."

RAISE BRITISH RELIEF FUND.

Prince of Wales Chapter, Daughters of Empire, Plans to Send Aid to Soldiers' Families.

Plans for a proposed British warship relief fund were discussed at the first fall meeting of the Prince of Wales chapter, Daughters of the British Empire association, in the Auditorium hotel yesterday. It is proposed by the members to provide a sum of money and supplies of various kinds if necessary to be sent to distressed families of British soldiers, $432 already having been raised, according to Miss Lena M. Henderson, chairman of the hospital ship committee of the society.

OVERTHROW

Drink's Curse

"But for the Grace of God There Lies John Wesley."

Hon. J. E. Bruce says: "When the people through the pulpit and public press are educated to 'preach and practice' the sentiment of the above words uttered by that great divine as he pointed to the unfortunate drunkard in the gutter, and rely upon Moral Suasion as the only PREVENTIVE and medical treatment as the best and ONLY CURE for the diseased man, then there will soon be a complete "overthrow" of the liquor traffic.

In your comfortable home tonight think of that neighbor or friend who, innocently to start with, has become a victim of alcoholic or drug poisoning—a diseased condition which virtually forces him to indulge, and from which there is no escape but untimely death, unless the poison is sooner eliminated from the system.

Do your duty—influence and help him to secure the benefits of the Neal Treatment, tell him or his family about the easy, quick and effective modern "Neal Way" of rescuing drunkards and preventing high class men from becoming drunkards; at least send us his name and address so that we may send him literature.

Liege Bullets, True and Deadly, Mowed Down Foe

Officer Describes Terrible Slaughter of Germans Before Forts.

New York, Sept. 12.—A vivid description of the fighting before Liege, attributed to a German officer who was seriously wounded in the battle, is published by the Weser Zeitung of Bremen, copies of which reached here today. Under the caption "From the Border to Liege" the officer describes his experiences and feelings in a letter which reads in part as follows:

"Our trip to the Belgian border was a triumphal procession. It was pouring rain as we marched through the Ardennes. The towns seemed deserted. We had no rest and during the night were fired upon.

"At 5 a. m. (Aug. 6) we marched through the Ourthe valley, meeting obstacles everywhere. It was an awful march; the roads were blocked by felled trees and bowlders; of bridges there were only remnants. In the afternoon we took up quarters in a village south of Liege.

"Storm Liege," Is Command.

"Seven o'clock. An alarm is sounded; the captain shouts 'Storm Liege.' It is impossible. We cannot go farther; the forts are thirty-five kilometers away, but we press on.

"Thirty minutes pass and we are fired upon from the heights. Now shots are fired directly at us from nearer points. We draw our revolvers and rush forward.

"The field is alive with troopers of all arms. It is raining in torrents; a thunderstorm is roaring and the night is pitch dark. We press on. We see soldiers fall. Now they fall in masses and do not rise. The sky clears, the moon shines; we hear cannonading.

"Suddenly we hear that our baggage has been attacked. One company turns back. The village has been burned down; all the people shot. Such are the atrocities of the franc-tireurs.

Form Ranks for Charge.

"Meanwhile we keep on, close to Liege, and turn off behind the wood. Four regiments lay down their knapsacks and 'iron rations' are taken out. The last exhortation is given; we form in ranks for the charge.

"Shells whiz past, but without aim. We gallop by our artillery, stuck helplessly in the mud up to the stomach. A wild hail of bullets burst on us from a point directly opposite. Our own men are firing upon us, but just in time we are recognized.

"Now we are directly in front of the firing line of the forts. There is wild clamoring. The parole 'Woerth' is given. Friend and enemy look alike.

Comrades Slain by His Side.

"I am lying before a barricade of trees and barbed wire, with my comrade, Lieut. G., on my left and the captain on my right. Shells explode all around; everywhere is the infernal noise of musketry fire.

"The air is hot. A few yards ahead we may get better cover. I nudge Lieut. G. and ask, 'Shall we go forward?' No answer. He is dead. The captain jumps to his feet and falls back; he is shot in the breast. I raise my arm, the company responds to my word of command.

"I rush forward. A terrible blow throws me back three feet. I have received a shell in the left thigh. The pain is terrible. Before me an officer calls out his name, holds out his hand to me and then falls back—dead.

"In front of me there is a flag and I try to crawl up to it. The bearer is dead. A second shot strikes me in the left arm; a third in the right arm; I bite the earth with pain.

Hail of Belgian Bullets.

"A few steps in front are the Belgian rifle pits. Our men advance. I lie in one place nearly twelve hours, yet, despite the hail of bullets, nothing happens to me.

"A doctor comes with bandages. At noon I am carried away. Shivering with fever, I meet our regiment. Its losses are terrible—three captains, six lieutenants, nearly all from my battalion.

"I am taken to a field hospital. During the first few days I suffer terribly, but now I am much better. There are others who have to suffer greater pain than I; that makes one keep quiet.

"I have lost everything. The clothes I wore were so soaked with blood that they were burned. A Russian brought me some underwear and a sympathetic little woman is washing and mending a uniform for me."

TURKEY REFUSED RIGHT TO ANNUL TREATY RIGHTS

Four Powers Serve Notice They Will Hold Sublime Porte to Contracts.

U. S. MAY JOIN MOVE

CONSTANTINOPLE, by way of London, Sept. 12.—Several of the great powers have presented a note to the Turkish government in reply to the communication of the sublime porte notifying these governments of the abrogation of the capitulations involving the territorial rights and privileges of foreigners in Turkey.

The replies set forth that as these capitulations are a matter of treaty, the abrogation will not be recognized without the consent of all parties to the treaty.

Four Use Similar Terms.

The text of the replies made by the ambassadors for Great Britain, Russia, France, and Italy are identical. They point out that the capitulatory régime in Turkey is not an autonomous institution of the Turkish empire, but an issue of international treaties, diplomatic agreements, and contractural acts of divers kinds.

Consequently this régime can be modified only on the basis of an understanding with the contracting powers and, failing such an understanding before Oct. 1 next, the ambassadors would be unable to recognize the executory force beginning on that date of the unilateral decision of the sublime porte.

MORGENTHAU REPORTS.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—Ambassador Morganthau informed the state department today of the character of the protests made at Constantinople by the various powers against the abrogation by Turkey of extraterritorial rights and other privileges which she considered restrictions on her sovereignty. As he was without instructions, the ambassador did not participate in the protest.

It is practically certain that while the United States will enter objections to Turkey's course, the negotiations will be entirely independent of any notes on the subject addressed by the powers of Europe. The American note may be delayed until the porte's attitude toward the protests already made is learned.

The United States is in a peculiar position toward the protests made by the powers. In view of the desire to keep absolutely clear of the present tangle of European diplomacy, the American government will conduct its representations separately.

EASY EARLY VICTORIES FATAL TO GERMANS, SAYS TIMES.

GERMANS' ERROR TURNED TIDE?

Times Says Kaiser's Overconfidence Is Allies' Advantage.

PRAISES GEN. JOFFRE.

The [illegible] Times

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Gen. Joffre must be congratulated upon having seized the psychological moment for this counter stroke and for having engaged the enemy with his whole strength. If there be a man with a rifle in France who is not in this battle he is out of place.

The French army deserves our warmest and heartiest congratulations for the vigor and gallantry with which it is fighting. We no longer read of slapdash attacks by armies and fractions of armies in eccentric directions. All the armies are in line; all effort converges to a common end, and in all probability the French artillery is able at last to intervene effectively in that the French armies are content to fight methodically and in union.

French Fighting Nobly.

In spite of their past losses and early disappointments they are fighting nobly and with tenacity as well as dash. Our eyes naturally are fixed mainly upon the deeds of our own army, but we must not forget that we occupy a comparatively small part of the allied line and that throughout the rest of the front French armies have for four or five days not only withstood victoriously the German attacks but have in nearly all cases gained ground and driven the Germans back.

Initiative certainly—and we hope we may add moral ascendancy—have passed to the allies, who can legitimately hope for great results from their long and determined fighting. We will still seek on every side for the reason which caused the Germans' change of direction last week, with the entirely unexpected opening which it gave to the allies. The change laid open the German right to an offensive return, which has been delivered with refreshing vigor, and appeared to some people to infer indecision in the German higher command.

Kaiser's Brave Promise.

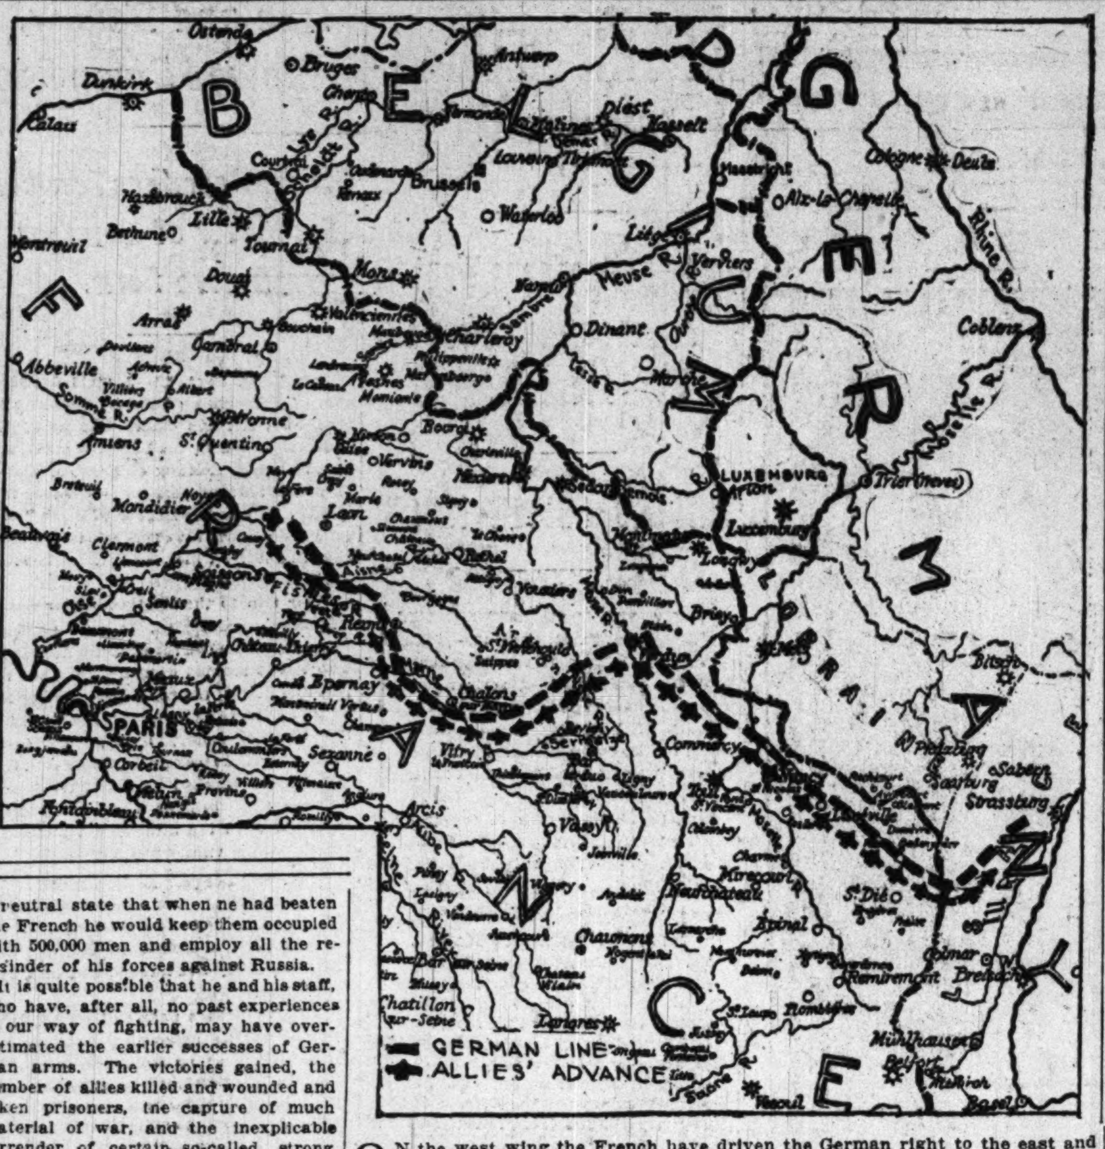
Signifying his confidence in the success of the German plans, it is said that the kaiser telegraphed recently to the head of a neutral state that when he had beaten the French he would keep them occupied with 500,000 men and employ all the remainder of his forces against Russia.

It is quite possible that he and his staff, who have, after all, no past experiences in our way of fighting, may have overestimated the earlier successes of German arms. The victories gained, the number of allies killed and wounded and taken prisoners, the capture of much material of war, and the inexplicable surrender of certain so-called strong places at first summons may easily have led the Germans to make false assumptions concerning the general situation.

Never Decisively Beaten.

We have never been decisively beaten. There has been neither surrender nor rout. The first operations of the allies were initiated under thoroughly bad conditions and it was not until the allies fell back to Marne and the German change of direction took place that the Anglo-French armies reëstablished their line and were in position to engage with advantage.

War Map for Children and Grownups.



ON the west wing the French have driven the German right to the east and northeast across the Ourcq river, a northern tributary of the Marne. The German right is now resting on the Veste river near Fismes. Some of the German right has gone back as far as Laon and Reims.

Only a portion of the German right center was reported south of the Marne last night. This retirement of the center extended as far east as Revigny and Sermaize, where the Germans were driven beyond the Saul river. From their line of the previous day—Sezanne, Vitry-le-Francois, Revigny—the German center has gone back from ten to twenty miles.

In Lorraine on the French right the Germans have evacuated St. Die, and the retirement from Alsace on Strassburg is reported to be becoming more hurried.

GERMANY TAKES UP PEACE PLAN

world could be insured against the sudden outbreak of war after Germany had recouped herself. The British foreign secretary added moreover that England had from the first tried to avoid war and wanted peace, but before the subject could be considered seriously definite terms would have to be submitted. Great Britain, Sir Edward pointed out, would insist that Belgium be fully compensated by Germany for her losses. This information was communicated to Secretary Bryan by the British ambassador.

France Wishes for Peace.

Thursday, Sept. 10.—The French ambassador called on Secretary Bryan and it is understood discussed the point of view of France. Ambassador Herrick coincidentally reported the earnest wish of France that there might be peace, but pointed out that until the French had driven the invaders from their territory and Belgium had been compensated terms of peace could not be negotiated. During the afternoon Ambassador Page's report of his conversation with Sir Edward Grey also reached the White House. Great Britain, according to Ambassador Page, was determined to make no peace until German militarism had been crushed because of its danger to the world's civilization. On the same day came personal messages from Emperor William and President Poincare of France concerning the use of dumdum bullets.

Decide to Wait on Kaiser.

Friday, Sept. 11.—President Wilson and Secretary Bryan conferred on the general situation and, it is understood, determined to await the reply of the German emperor to the inquiry sent on the previous Monday before acknowledging the two personal messages from Emperor William and President Poincaré. Should the emperor's reply be a favorable one the president may take advantage of the messages addressed to him to express a hope that the atrocities complained of may be ended through the making of peace.

Success Not an Impossibility.

Among diplomatists friendly to the allies, the view was expressed tonight that while the efforts to make peace seemingly had failed, a sudden turn of events might at any moment change the situation. It was pointed out that if the retreat of the German army continued so that it were forced to the borders of France, and if Austria's reverses were prolonged, President Wilson's personal influence in Great Britain and France might be brought to bear to obtain a definite statement of peace terms. These same diplomatists said one version of Emperor William's views on peace which had reached them, was that he declared at the outbreak of the war he would be ready to make peace within a month.

This view, it was said, he held because of his confidence in the ability of his armies to take Paris in that period. German bankers, too, it was said by these diplomatists, had been given this assurance and approved the entry of Germany into the war because they believed the country's finances could be handled through a moratorium of a month's duration.

YEAR after year those artists and musicians whose success depends upon their mastery and interpretation of the best music turn to the Mason & Hamlin. They are seeking us now at the beginning of another musical season, for the Mason & Hamlin is pre-eminently "The Artist's Piano."

But the big fact connected with our store is its reputation for carrying the most complete line in the Middle West. Here you will find over two hundred Pianos in more than seventy different models and woods.

The new Pianos which we offer for $175, $250, $325 and upwards are as standard in their grade and class as is the Mason & Hamlin. Being piano makers as well as distributors, we know that it is unnecessary to purchase a very costly instrument in order to get excellent musical qualities and good, permanent construction. A visit to our warerooms will confirm these facts. And we ask you to remember our three-year Credit Plan; it is of great convenience to the buyer.

This week we offer an unusually attractive list of used pianos thoroughly conditioned in our own repair factory before being placed on sale. These have for the most part been accepted as part payment on our notable Carola Inner Players.

BRITISH SEEK TRADE OPENINGS WITH UNITED STATES.

BRITISH ISLES NOW RIPE FIELD FOR U. S. TRADERS

War with Germany Forces England, Wales, and Ireland Elsewhere.

JOBBERS SEEK PRODUCTS

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12—[Special.]—There is at least one direction in which there seems to be a perfectly clear and unobstructed opportunity for a great extension of the export trade of the United States.

The foreign trade advisers of the state department are being almost swamped by reports from consuls in England, Ireland, and Wales transmitting the requests of wholesale merchants and jobbers to be put into touch with American manufacturers.

In a single mail these inquiries cover forty different classes of goods, ranging from all kinds of building construction material to hosiery, nails, and hardware. In practically every case the inquiring merchant states that most of his goods have hitherto been imported from Germany.

Now that the two nations are at war the English trader wishes to promptly establish permanent business relations with some manufacturer in the United States.

Offers Important Advantages.

As compared with South America, for instance, the English trade opportunity offers certain important advantages.

In the first place, there is plenty of shipping available to carry American products to the United Kingdom without danger of war risk. In the second place, almost every one of the inquiring merchants offers to furnish approved references in the United States regarding his reliability and responsibility. There need be no difficulty about credits, for many of the English firms are wealthy and have been in business for many years.

A glance over the inquiries received today would lead to the conclusion that Great Britain offers an outlet for the surplus production of American factories in almost every conceivable line.

All of these trade opportunities are regularly printed in the daily consular reports issued regularly by the commerce department. Any one can secure these reports sent daily at a cost of $2.50 a year. If he does not desire to subscribe for a whole year he can get a copy of any report since the war begun by remitting 5 cents to the department in Washington.

The consular reports are printed in these bulletins without names or adresses, for the reason that when they are given foreign manufacturers have been quick to follow up the opportunity and steal the chance which is offered to sell American products.

If any manufacturer finds in these lists inquiries for the goods which he manufactures he can get names and full details by writing to the department of commerce.

Want Exhibits at "Expo."

Secretary Redfield has foud some difficulty in naming a committee on South American trade which shall fairly represent the commercial interests of the entire country. He will not be able to announce the names of his selections until next week.

Meanwhile, as one method of making the people of both North and South America better acquainted with the natural and manufactured resources of the two continents, it has been suggested that an effort be made to secure as complete a showing as possible of all Pan-American products at the San Francisco exposition.

The war will, of course, seriously interfere with the participation of Europe in the great fair. But the opening of the canal puts San Francisco within easy reach of both coasts of South and Central America, and it should be possible to secure a very large attendance of Latin-American visitors.

There is a feeling among far western senators and congressmen that the government could do nothing better calculated to foster mutual trade among the three Americas than to take an active part in support of this plan.

The Potash Situation.

The cutting off of imports of potash salts from Germany has resulted already in suggestions that potash is not nearly as essential an element either in fertilizers or in medicine and technical work as has been supposed.

It is pointed out that there is plenty of potash already present in almost all the soils of the United States.

It is, however, soluble in its present form.

If, however, finely ground limestone be added to the soil, the resulting chemical reaction will release the potash so that it can be taken up by vegetation. It is only necessary that the limestone be added some weeks before the seed is planted, as it takes a considerable time for the chemical reaction to be completed.

Medicinally and in many other lines of work the sodium salts can be substituted for potash salts with equally good results.

Poiret Says Observer Was Wounded and Aeroplane Riddled but They Got Information.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—A Havas Agency dispatch from Petrograd says that a French airman, M. Poiret, who is serving with a Russian army, relates an adventure during a flying reconnaissance. Accompanied by a Russian staff officer he flew for twenty minutes above the German positions at a height of 3,900 feet. They were repeatedly fired upon and the officer was severely wounded. He managed, however, to obtain valuable information. Upon its return to the Russian camp the aeroplane was found to have been riddled with bullets.

TRADE BOOMERS TO TOUR CANADA

Winnipeg and Alberta Cities Invite Illinois Manufactures.

U. S. RESOURCES SHOWN.

The Illinois Manufacturers' association is planning a special train trade extension trip into western Canada. It is likely the trip will be made some time within the next few weeks.

It was planed at first to make a trip to the eastern as well as the western part of Canada, but the association received little encouragement from that section. However, several organizations from Winnipeg and Alberta cities have written to the association asking that a trip be arranged as soon as possible.

The association members are planning to make the raid on Canadian business while the arrangements for entering South America are being made.

Here Is Part of Report.

In connection with the European war and its effect on the United States the department of commerce has issued a statement on the "Economical Resources of the United States." The report is an inventory of the productions of the United States as compared with the belligerent nations of Europe. The report in part follows:

"A partial inventory of the national assets of the United States in area, population, and the fundamental factors of economic life reveals the fact that it is not only practically self-supporting, but that it possesses in many lines a large surplus available for protection against famine and temporary adversity or for use in meeting unusual demands from the outside world. Recently the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce has been receiving hundreds of letters from American producers and manufacturers making inquiries regarding possible markets abroad for their surplus products and as to the ability of the United States to supply the raw materials necessary to their industries.

America's Position Fortunate.

"The peculiarly fortunate position of the United States in its ability to supply its own needs is clearly seen from a survey of its production and relative contributions to the world of the great requirements of man—food, clothing, and shelter."

WANT SCHOOLS TO STUDY PEACE

Chicago Principals to Ask Mrs. Young and Board for O. K.

TAKE 'TRIBUNE' ADVICE

The Chicago Principals' club took action at its meeting yesterday in the Mallers building toward establishing the study of peace in the regular school curriculum.

This action grew out of the suggestion made in THE TRIBUNE Sept. 9 that the study of the present war by the school children would develop an army of peace advocates.

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools, and the members of the board of education will be asked to set aside a definite time allotment for the study of the principles of peace and the advocacy of the peace cause.

If this is granted, a movement will be started to get all principals and teachers to clip the pictures of peace and war and send them to a committee of teachers; to send the poems and literature and songs they find which they think will aid the cause of peace.

Expect Mrs. Young's O. K.

These will be used in place of a text book for the instruction of the children. The principals feel confident that Mrs. Young will approve of the plan, as she is a strong peace advocate.

Miss Florence Holbrook, principal of the Forestville school, is chairman of the committee back of the movement. Miss Holbrook's pupils have given a peace parade annually for several years.

Other members of the committee are Miss Lucy Silke of the art department, to whom the pictures are to be sent; James E. McDade, principal of the Fallon school, who will have charge of the collection of the poetry and other peace literature, and Miss Agnes Heath of the music department, who will receive the peace music.

Shoop Tells of War.

John D. Shoop, first assistant superintendent of schools, spoke on his impressions of the war as suggested by his trip to Europe. He said he saw in the streets of Paris the spirit of the French revolution.

"The great conflict suggests to us that a broader conception of education is needed," said Mr. Shoop. "We of the United States must be able to set forth conditions that will be an example to all mankind."

After the close of the first week of school the educational department of the board was flooded with a request for more portables or more rooms to take care of the overflow of school children.

Don't Pay More Than $10.00 for Your Hat

The Most Beautiful Paris Styles you ever saw are right here now

Before you buy your Fall hat visit the Paris Hat Shop, even if you do not buy. You'll see here a display not paralleled in other shops in Chicago. The hats are all perfect reproductions—of original imported French models—which we brought to this country before hostilities opened. Hats which cost us as high as $100—and these hats, perfect duplicates of the original models, you can get here for

$5, $7.50 and $10

No hat in this shop under $5—and none over $10

You cannot tell the difference between these hats and their imported originals. Even expert milliners who have seen these reproductions have pronounced them as genuine Paris made hats.

The time to do your shopping is in the morning. At nine o'clock every morning a package of new hats arrives by express from our New York workshop. Try to be in the shop when this package arrives, so that you can get your choice of that day's assortment.

We are on the eighth floor of the North American Building. We have a low rent; we have no expensive windows to trim, or other tremendous expense of the ground floor stores. The result is that you can get a hat here for $5, $7.50 and $10 which you can't duplicate anywhere in Chicago under $25.

We don't ask you to accept our word for this; we assume you are a careful buyer and know values. All we ask you to do is to come here and look. Visit the Michigan Avenue shops before you come; then you will be able to appreciate the difference between our prices and the prices of the other exclusive shops.

Gossard Corsets and Chicago Designers in the Limelight This Week

SEASON after season we have urged our patrons to at least see the gowns of Chicago designers instead of purchasing in New York or Paris. It has not been difficult to convince our customers that the Gossard was the correct foundation for their suits or gowns, but it has been difficult to convince them that Chicago designers could supply their needs. There is a notable change this season.

Tomorrow Chicago and middle west designers have their Semi-Annual Opening at the Annex. It will mark an epoch in women's dress. We predict that hundreds of new creations will be selected in Chicago this season as the result of this show.

As usual, the smartest things shown will be worn over Gossard Corsets, which now have an international distribution—Paris, London, New York, Melbourne, Tokio, Manila, and every city in North America.

Visit the opening. Any morning paper will give you the particulars.

YOU CAN MAKE MONEY OUT OF THIS WAR

Join Us Now in Producing Food Stuffs For the World

$100 WILL START YOU

Europe with all its millions of people has become and is today swarming with consumers and destroyers instead of producers.

Deplorable? Yes, but—you can profit by it. For years to come—regardless of the length of this war—high prices for food-stuffs will prevail.

You can cut these prices down—reduce your cost of living—in only one way—produce the food-stuffs yourself.

How? Join us. We have the best organized, most efficient and experienced corps of farmers in the world at your command now—at this very moment—to produce high-priced food-stuffs on the richest land in the world.

This is no scheme—no stock jobbing proposition—no speculation. We have invested hundreds of thousands of dollars to back up this statement. We have today—this very minute—large acreages of the world's staple crops—planted, cultivated and being harvested by the most modern machinery obtainable under expert supervision. We have on our consulting staff the world's most famous agriculturists—both from this country and Europe—men who have personally visited and inspected our farm and whose expert advice and plans have been executed by our own experts on the farm. We own our barns, employees' quarters, foremen's dwellings, warehouses, commissaries, power plant, traction engines, farm telephone lines, in fact every equipment necessary, to the most minute detail, to raise high priced and staple food-stuffs for the world's markets. We operate our own fully equipped transportation line to one of the largest and most centrally located cities in the United States.

What security do you get? To secure your money we offer the backing of the largest and strongest trust company in America—one whose dealings and financial standing are unquestioned. Thoroughness, safety and profit are combined to a remarkable degree in this unusual investment.

Profit? The enormous profit in the scientific raising and direct distributing of the people's food is becoming more vividly illustrated daily. You receive one-half of all the net profits derived from the sale of these food-stuffs.

All we ask is—that you write us now and you will be convinced that this one time opportunity really knocks at your door. One Chicago banker, who investigated us on behalf of his customer said: "I have investigated it thoroughly and it has stood the acid test. I advise you to invest."

The Inside Story of the Oldsmobile $1285

NEW LIGHT FOUR

The Demand

For the last two years there has been an increasing and insistent call for a smaller, lighter Oldsmobile, built with the characteristic completeness and refinement of the famous "Big Six." We immediately prepared to meet this demand—but not hastily, for we knew the market would be ready as soon as we were—but step by step, seeking the type of car that would fill this demand, not for one season but for many seasons to come.

The new Oldsmobile Light Four is here—now ready for your inspection.

A True Oldsmobile

You will find the exact replica of the "greatest six-cylinder car in America" in this Light Four. It has all the beautiful lines and harmonious proportions that mark the big Oldsmobile, the only practical difference being in its wheelbase reduced to 112 inches, and the consequent reduction in weight.

No Light Car So Complete

Nothing that would contribute to the highest possible quality has been overlooked—wide doors; wide seats; ample leg room; deep upholstering; long, perfectly balanced springs; the flawless Delco starting and lighting system; Circassian walnut woodwork; instruments set flush in the dash; cast aluminum foot boards; extra large gasoline tank; concealed tool box; hickory spokes, artillery type; Jiffy curtains; tire irons—these are only a few of the refinements you will find when you examine this car.

The Only Motor of Its Kind

The 35 horsepower motor has overhead valves with automatic lubrication on rocker-arm bearings. This is an exclusive Oldsmobile feature, doing away with the constant attention necessary with other types. In gasoline economy, in speed, in hill-climbing ability and in quick acceleration, this motor is without an equal in light cars.

Open House This Week

The new car is holding a reception and we are particularly anxious to have you pay us a visit this week. You have never seen a car like this new Oldsmobile. We want you to examine it, even if you are not in the market for a car, at the moment. But don't buy any five-passenger car without first seeing this one.

DR. BERNHARD DERNBURG SAYS HISTORY FATED GERMAN EMPIRE FOR THIS WAR

HISTORY DECREED EUROPEAN WAR, SAYS DERNBURG

German Statesman Defends His Country as "Most Peaceful."

CITES THE REAL CAUSES

BY DR. BERNHARD DERNBURG

Herr Bernhard Dernburg, the author of this article, was recently the German Secretary of State for the Colonies. He is one of the most prominent Germans in this country today. Herr Dernburg received his early business training in New York, and his selection by the Kaiser in 1906 as the head of the Colonial Office, to succeed Prince von Hohenlohe-Langenburg, was one of the sensations of the empire, critics ascribing it to the Kaiser's impulsive craze for Americanism. The public generally approved the appointment and he became in a day the strong man of the Government.

When I arrived in New York a fortnight ago I was greatly surprised on reading in the papers big headings, such as "The Kaiser's War," "The Kaiser's Army," "The Kaiser Beaten," etc. I thought at first that this was only a sort of abbreviation and that the "kaiser's" name stood as a symbol for the whole of Germany in this war forced upon our nation. I soon had to see, however, that something quite different was meant and that a large portion of the American people were of the opinion that the emperor was more or less responsible for the breaking out of the war and that the German people, whom they all knew to be good and peaceable, had been dragged into it in consequence of autocratic institutions peculiar to Germany and as a sequel to militarism rampant in Germany.

Kaiser's Power Limited.

I consider it therefore of interest to explain here the constitutional basis on which our institutions rest. The German empire is a union composed of all the states which formerly belonged to the German federation, with the exception of Austria-Hungary. The eleventh article of the German constitution says: "The union shall be presided over by the King of Prussia, whose title is to be Deutscher kaiser." There is a great similarity with the constitution of the United States, which is also a union of a number of independent states, who have given part of their sovereignty in favor of the union.

While the kaiser represents the empire in its foreign relations, he may not declare war in the name of the empire without the consent of the bundesrath, representing these single states forming the empire, except when German territory is attacked. In this bundesrath of fifty-four equal votes the emperor, in his capacity of King of Prussia, has only seventeen votes. It follows that the emperor could not, and as a matter of fact has not, declared war on his own account, but that he had to have, and in fact had, the consent of his allies, represented by the federal council. This consent was unanimous.

U. S. Ruler Most Powerful.

This is a much greater check than the control placed by the constitution of the United States on the president, who of all great rulers of the earth concentrates in himself the greatest power. The president of the United States is not bound to have a countersignature of one of his cabinet in order that his orders become effective. He may declare war without consulting the cabinet. The German kaiser can do neither. Except in the matter of military appointments and acts of grace, he must have the countersignature of the reichskanzler, who thereby assumes the responsibility.

Neither is the emperor what is called here "the war lord." He has not the disposal—that is, the absolute command over the forces—of the entire German army. Article 6 of our constitution says that the German princes, more especially the Kings of Bavaria, Wuertemberg, and Saxony, are the chiefs of the troops belonging to their territory (six army corps of twenty-four); they nominate the officers for these troops, they have the right to inspect these troops, etc. Consequently the absolute disposition of the German army passes on to the kaiser only in the moment when the consent of his allies—viz.: the states who with Prussia form the empire—has been obtained for the declaration of a war.

Traditions Upset by Dr. Dernburg.

BERNHARD DERNBURG

Still Another Check.

But there is a further and much heavier check on the emperor's doings. All measures providing ways and means for conducting war must be passed by the reichstag. The reichstag is a body elected on the most liberal ballot law that exists anywhere, more liberal even than the ballot law of the United States for the election of a president. The German law, ever since 1867, has been a one-man-one-vote, universal, secret and direct ballot law. I need not recall to the Americans that they have a one man vote, secret and universal, but only indirect ballot. The right to vote does not depend either on a census or on any educational test. Any German being 25 years and over may vote.

The reichstag consists of 397 members. The Conservatives, the so-called "war party," from which most of the officers are being recruited, is in a hopeless minority, about 55. There are 110 Social Democrats, and about 100 Liberals, so that in fact there is a liberal majority in the German reichstag. Notwithstanding this composition, the reichstag has voted unanimously the necessary laws and credits for conducting the present war, and although the Social Democrats reject war on principle in their program they have indorsed unanimously the policy of the empire, as set out to it by the emperor's chacellor.

Not "a Kaiser War."

I say this to prove that this war is not "a kaiser war," because he cannot make a war, but it is the "German people's war." A modern war, according to Prince Bismarck's great speech in 1887, with its enormous armies comprising whole peoples, cannot be undertaken with safety nor carried through with success except by the full consent and enthusiastic assistance of the whole nation.

But I hear the reply that the consequences of militarism all prevailing and all dominating in Germany have brought about militarism in the other European nations until matters reached such a tension that one day the string had to snap and that it has snapped now. My reply to this is that Germany has not created nor unduly fostered militarism in Europe, that militarism in Germany forms but a small part of our general activities, and that the maintenance of an army and navy was forced upon us by circumstances, by the history of our country, and by our neighbors.

Germany the "Pit."

Ever since the Hapsburg dynasty withdrew more or less from the old German empire to develop its own dominions, Austria and Hungary, the "Holy Roman empire," a term that has been the ridicule of the world for centuries, which is in fact but the territory of modern Germany, has been the cockpit and battleground for all the big wars that European nations, fighting for supremacy, have invariably chosen.

It was, and is, the situation of Germany in the middle of Europe, especially as long as she was so powerless and torn up into a number of small states, that makes it so convenient to settle all the troubles of the whole of Europe on its territory.

England has had a large standing navy ever since the times of Henry VIII., in the sixteenth century, and it has used that navy to maintain its absolute sway of the sea by always fighting the next best man be it the Frenchman, the Spaniard, the Dutchman, or the Russian. Russia and Austria have had their armies for centuries back, and so had Spain and especially France. There was no German army because there was no unified Germany.

Federation Unworkable.

When Belgium seceded from Holland the powers selected a king who at the same time was the son-in-law of the king of France and the uncle of the queen of England, and therefore strongly affiliated with these two countries. The German federation, in which Prussia had just one vote out of seventeen, was purposely made an unworkable machine requiring the unanimity of votes for all important measures. This was the situation that Bismarck found when in 1852 he was appointed Prussian envoy to the federation at Frankfort. He very soon perceived the absolute helplessness and the consequent misery of Germany, so he decided that if the German people were to become a nation and a power commensurate to its population and resources, Austria's dominion had first to cease. This was brought about by the war of 1866. The Norddeutscher Bund followed and the common war with France welded Germany into an empire. History, however had taught Bismarck that this empire could only live and prosper, wedged in as it was in the middle of Europe between the great powers, if it had an army strong enough to defend its frontiers against any attack and invasion, that it had to do as its neighbors had done before—viz.: to create and maintain a large standing force for its preservation and its peace, and for the possibility of developing its international advantages and prosperity.

So the German military as well as its naval force have been created on purely defensive lines, its alliances have been concluded for defensive purposes only, and Germany holds the record for keeping peace within and outside of Europe for the last forty-four years.

Germany Most Peaceful Nation.

Let us pass them in review. Since 1870 England has conquered Egypt, shelled Alexandria, taken by force two Boer republics, it has added to its sphere by force southern Persia, and by intimidation a part of Siam. France has conquered Tunis, she is fighting for Morocco, she has made war on Madagascar, has taken the Sudan and conquered Indo-China in bloody war. Russia has fought the Turks in 1878 and the Japanese in 1904, she has torn from China the northern part of Manchuria and all of Mongolia, she has made war on Turkestan, she has bagged northern Persia, she has formed and fomented the Balkan combination and has all along proved herself the most aggressive European power.

All that time Germany has added to its territory only certain colonial possessions, all ceded to her by peaceful agreement and by common consent of the great powers. Germany has proved herself the most peaceful European power, even Spain and Italy not excepted, and the militarism plays a very much smaller part in the German national life than with any other nation.

Germany's Achievements.

Americans, in their love for fair play, have frankly acknowledged the great strides that my country has made in the arts of peace, in science and technics, in trade and industry. We had better things to do than to think of how to attack other countries. We have built up a large merchant marine, the second largest in the world; we built up a foreign trade second only to the trade of England, which continues to be the clearing house of the world. We have developed universities which are visited by students from all parts of the world. Our legislation is made in the interest of the laboring man. In all this work the kaiser has been most active and interested; he has always been recognized as a lover of peaceful development. Has it not been significant that he should have been placed on the list of candidates for the Nobel prize of peace?

Country of Poets and Thinkers.

All this activity, however, presupposes a state of peace in the world; it would be insane to start so many enterprises if the idea of an aggressive or provoked war had been in the mind of the emperor of the people. It cannot be denied that all this has been the work of the last forty years. Before that time Germany was known and ridiculed in a way as a country of "poets and thinkers." Are they not the same people who have been doing so much since for civilization? Why didn't they develop these characteristics before? For the reasons I have just set out. Without unity, liberty, and security from outside interference these characteristics would not have been developed.

A people that must always be afraid of being overrun from all parts, of being made a hostage of the powers contesting for European supermacy, can do nothing in the works of peace, nothing in the acquisition of property and means, which are the fundament of all great commercial and industrial advance. The same claim can be made with regard to the German colonies, which have been developed on humanitarian lines and become a valuable addition to our home production. That such a marvelous development, such a continuous increase in wealth, such an unrelenting competition with the older people for the markets of the world, should create the envy of our neighbors cannot be wondered at, and that they, therefore, should seize an opportunity to give what they call "a lesson to Germany" is not very remarkable.

German Statesman States Teutonic Case

THIS war is not a "kaiser's" war, because he cannot make a war, but it is the German people's war.

Germany has not created nor unduly fostered militarism in Europe. Militarism in Germany forms but a small part of our general activities, and the maintenance of an army and navy was forced upon us by circumstances, by the history of our country, and by our neighbors.

Germany has proved herself the most peaceful European power, even Spain and Italy not excepted, and the militarism plays a very much smaller part in the German national life than with any other nation.

It is the pan-Slavic agitation and the necessity of the czar to uphold Russia's prestige which forced his hand to take issue with Austria. It was a necessity for Germany—and I may add here her bounden duty—under the written obligation of the treaty of 1878—to come to the help of Austria and beware her from destruction and dismemberment.

Causes of the War.

Now for the reasons of the present war.

The world has become more democratic within the last half century, the power and influence of the dynasties have been replaced to a great extent by the all prevailing spirit of nationalism and of racial assertion the world over. It is the people who now control the trend of European and of American politics also. The stronger the nationalism or racial feeling becomes the less are the rulers in control. Such has happened, especially to Russia, which, though autocratic as she is in her constitution, has forced the czar to unroll the banner of Pan-Slavism. Pan-Slavism means the rallying of all people of the Slav race under the dominion or protectorate of the White Czar. How far the Pan-Slavism has forced upon Russia the protectorate of the Balkans may be seen from the following quotation from the English white paper document No. 139:

Sir G. Buchanan to Sir Edward Grey:

M. Sazonoff informed the French ambassador and myself this morning of his conversation with the Austrian ambassador. He went on to say that during the Balkan crisis he had made it clear to the Austrian government that war with Russia must inevitably follow an Austrian attack on Servia. It was clear that Austrian domination of Servia was as intolerable for Russia as the dependence of the Netherlands on Germany would be to Great Britain. It was, in fact, for Russia a question of life and death.

Meant Austria's Ruin.

You see, it was a matter of life and death to Russia that Servia should not be attacked. Everybody knows that a great many Slav peoples are components of the Austrian empire. Out of a total population (in 1910) of 51,000,000 in Austria-Hungary, no less than 20,500,000 are Slavs. The contention of pan-Slavism, that the Servians and all Slavs must be dependent on Russia, did mean nothing less than the breaking up of Austria. That is what Austria most bitterly resents in her ultimatum.

Whether this war came now as a consequence of the murder of the Austrian crown prince, or at some later time, is without importance. Come it must, at any event, if not today, then tomorrow, as long as Mr. Sazoro's theory was upheld, and no international mediation, no court of arbitration of whatever nature would have prevented the clash as long as the Russian theory was maintained and the Russian prestige demanded such theory.

But that such is the pan-Slavism theory and has been since at least 1878 every reader of the Russian press can testify to.

Cites Russian View.

RECASTING EUROPE'S MAP.

Russian View as to the Final Division of Territories.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 8.—The "Prech" argues that the war must be terminated in such a way that it shall leave no vengeful association on either side. The change in the map of Europe must be final and no nationality must be opposed in the satisfaction of its legitimate ambitions. This ideal is, however, irreconcilable with the evidence of an empire like Austria-Hungary. It is also irreconcilable with the hegemony of Prussia in Germany. Further, it is irreconcilable with the division of Poland and the treaty of Bucharest.

The unification of Russia, Italy, Germany, Roumania, and Servia must be completed. France must recover what has been taken from her and Bulgaria also.

A hundred years fight for the principle of nationality must finish with a decision free from all compromise, and therefore final.

These ideas seem to have many advocates in this country.

The national existence of Austria can never be arbitrated upon. It is not too much to say that even the czar had he wanted to, could not have prevented this development. The breaking up however, of Austria-Hungary cannot be tolerated by Germany. Austria is the only aid that Germany has for the purpose of defense which can be relied upon. The breaking up of the dual monarchy and the absolute isolation of Germany would have made her an easy prey to her neighbors whenever they chose to attack it.

Sir Edward Grey has said of France that she had to take a hand in the struggle as a consequence of a fixed alliance and as a matter of national honor. That is quite so. Whether this French policy is wise or not need not be discussed, but France has certainly fared badly for binding herself for good and ever to a power which is ruled by racial instinct and whose aims and aspirations she cannot in the least control.

Holding Scale of Power.

By loaning to Russia 10,000,000,000 of francs, she has enabled her to go to war, and she is not only the creator of Russia's war machine, but also the battlefield for Russian aspiration and the hostage of Germany for Russia's good behavior in the future. The English theory has always been for centuries back to keep all Europe in an equilibrium of forces, to have her divided in two camps with opponents matched as evenly as possible, so that she should always have a free hand, and on whatever scale this hand was pressed that scale would go down. That England was very much averse to going to war and that the endeavors of Sir Edward Grey were very serious and very active to avoid the clash, just as incessant as those of the German emperor and his chancellor, must be readily believed and understood. But when it had once been decided that Russia could not be held back in spite of these endeavors, and as France had been dragged in, England had to take a hand, because of this theory of equilibrium.

Holds France "Stganant."

In 1870 there were 38,000,000 Germans fighting against 40,00,000 of French. At the return of Alsace-Lorraine to Germany the ratio was reversed. Germany had 40,000,000, France had 38,000,000. But while Germany, making great progress in its population and without addition of territory, has now more than 66,000,000 of inhabitants, France has remained absolutely stagnant, with 39,000,000 inhabitants; it was clear from the start that in a European struggle France must be crushed by sheer weight of numbers and that the European equilibrium, which was the stock theory of England, would thereby go forever if England did not take a hand in the matter. It is very often said that England entered into war in consequence of the violation of Belgium's neutrality. Sir Edward Grey, whom I have known for a long while and always considered a superior diplomatist, but a gentleman, has never stated that the breach of Belgian neutrality was the reason, and even less the only reason, for England's going to war.

The salient point is that, to use Mr. Gladstone's words, England was afraid of "an unmeasured aggrandizement of Germany," and that is why she resolved to defend the Belgian neutrality.

This is, to my mind the history of the development of the present struggle. It is the pan-Slavic agitation and the necessity of the czar to uphold Russia's prestige which forced his hand to take issue with Austria. It was a necessity for Germany, and I may add here her bounden duty, under the written obligation of the treaty of 1878, to come to the help of Austria and defend her from destruction and dismemberment.

GERMANS CHARGE MANY CRIMES TO BELGIAN PEOPLE.

Envoy to U. S. Cites Letter of Prince; Says Wounded Are Mutilated.

WANTS NATIONS TO ACT

New York, Sept. 12.—Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador to the United States, made public today an extract from a letter written to him by Prince Henry of Reuss under date of Aug. 15, and received yesterday. The extract follows:

"I hope that we have already protested to the government at Brussels against the frightful atrocities which were committed and are still being committed daily by the lower class of the Belgian population against our brave soldiers, especially against wounded ones. It seems that the Belgian government is either helpless or else does not know the least about these things, which are worse than the cruelties committed during the Balkan war.

Urges Action by The Hague.

"It might be advisable if the Belgian government would be asked from The Hague to take energetic steps in the Belgian districts not yet occupied by the Germans, so that an end is put to this detestable war of franc-tireurs and that army fights only against army.

"The reports are coming in daily about guards being treacherously killed by peasants, etc., and the fearful cruelty committed even by women to our wounded soldiers. This will forever remain a shameful spot in the history of Belgium. It also seems that in Belgium the minor Catholic clergy is carrying on an incessant agitation.

Cruel Practices Are Cited.

"It surely does not meet with the Belgian government's intentions that the Belgian people commit the lowest crimes against humanity, which, naturally, the Belgian government will have to be blamed for in the future. It is still time to prevent scores of crimes.

"The cruelties in question are the gouging out of eyes of the wounded soldiers cutting out of tongues, cutting off of limbs, murdering of the wounded who are lying on stretchers ready to be taken to the hospital, treacherous assaults by peasants, etc. Priests who received our troops in a friendly manner during the day were at night time detected with revolvers in their hands participating actively in the outrages."

BRITISH ARMY UNPREPARED AS U. S. IN SPANISH WAR.

Lacks Complete Equipment for Territorials Mobilized and for Volunteers Enlisting.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—[Correspondence.]—Much the same state of unpreparedness exists in the English army that the American war department faced at the time of the Spanish war.

While the British war office had sufficient equipment for the original expeditionary force sent into France, it lacks complete equipment for the territorials now mobilized and in training throughout England, and for the 100,000 volunteers just recruited under Lord Kitchener's first call.

Sufficient army blankets were available for the expeditionary force, although the men traveled light and did not carry them. Consequently, the blankets followed and will be available when needed.

The members of the expeditionary force carried only rubber ground sheets. Three of these sheets can be laced together and afford a sort of bag into which three men can squeeze very comfortably to keep warm and dry.

The khaki suit of the English soldier is not unlike the uniform of the American forces when in the field. The chief point of difference is the shoes.

Imperial German Attitude Toward U. S. Explained by Frederic William Wile.

BY FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE.

[Of the London Daily Mail.]

What right has Germany to claim American sympathy in her war with the nations? Did America have hers in the two great international crises through which it has passed during the last seventeen years? Where was her sympathy in the war with Spain? With whom did she side in the recent unpleasantness with Huerta and Mexico? Did she wish the United States well on these occasions?

I pause for a reply from the official German press agency in Berlin, from its branch office in Washington, from the "Fatherland's" editor in New York, from Herr Ridder, and from Prof. Muensterberg.

Count Bernstorff himself once told me that the German people have the "shortest political memory of any nation in the world." He was referring to the great "November storm" of 1908, when the kaiser's throne rocked in the sea of indignation provoked in Germany by his loquacity in the notorious Daily Telegraph interview—the incident which impelled Prince Buelow, then imperial chancellor, to "muzzle" his talkative sovereign, only a few months later to walk the plank to oblivion for his treasonable conduct.

"The Germans will forget all about the November storm," said Bernstorff. He was right. They did. It was not long before William II. reaffirmed divine right in all its pristine glory, and there was none out Socialist Vorwaerts to say him nay.

"Short Memory at Work Now."

The "short political memory" of the Germans—I am quoting Count Bernstorff—is assuredly at work now, else they could not possibly invoke our moral support in this crisis. They have forgotten completely the incessantly slanderous tone of their press during the Spanish American war.

I do not refer to the Von Diederichs incident at Manila. That was a specific and detached episode. It was natural that Germany should espouse valiantly the cause of its officious admiral. He was wrong, but it was one of those cases when men, whether it is right or wrong, remember that it is their country, which is always "right." So goes the song, and it is a good song.

General Attitude of Public.

I refer rather to the whole general attitude of German public opinion toward us in 1898—the calumny heaped upon us for our "brutal and aggressive war" on Spain; the "war of conquest" upon which we entered; our "lustful designs" on Cuba; our "gigantic bluff" in fighting Spain in order to "free Cuba"; the ridicule and abuse visited upon our "burlesque of an army" and our "inefficient navy"; the predictions that "Spain would wipe the arrogant Yankee from the face of the earth," and the fervent hopes that she would do so.

I did not live in Berlin in 1898. But countless Americans who did have told me over and over again of the atmosphere of hostility in which they were enveloped from the beginning of the war till long after its end. There was not a single day, they declare, without some fresh insult to America in the columns of the leading newspapers of Berlin and the rest of Germany.

Government Manages Press.

The campaign of abuse was led and fomented by journals like the Cologne Gazette, the historic mouthpiece of the German foreign office. There was every evidence that the crusade was of official "inspiration." The press of Germany is the best managed in the world—best managed, I mean, by the government. It never joins in a harmonious attack on a foreign nation without a cue from the Wilhelmstrasse.

The kaiser's government could doubtless produce a "White Book" cleansing it of the charge that it took the initiative in attempting to form a European coalition against us during the Spanish war But a definite impression to that effect has always prevailed in the chancelleries of Europe.

The late Sir Julian Pauncefote, British ambassador in Washington in 1898, made most categorical charges of that sort and eventually made public, if my memory serves me better than the Germans' serves them, some extremely incriminating evidence against the pernicious activities of his German colleague at Washington, the late Baron von Holleben.

If Germany's government did not actually attempt to stab us in the back it was not because there was no public sentiment at home in favor of such action. It would have been inexpressibly popular and was publicly advocated on countless occasions.

Shipped Arms to Huerta.

In the course of President Wilson's long fight against Huertaism—I speak now from personal knowledge—not a single friendly voice was raised on our behalf in Germany. The kaiser's government recognized the deposed dictator almost immediately after his sanguinary accession to the presidential chair, and by every act of word or deed compatible with international law supported him in his stubborn resolve to resist the United States.

I want to be straightforward and fair. There is no case on record in which the "official" attitude of the German government during the Mexican crisis was open to question. It informed our ambassador in Berlin that it had no intent on of "interfering" with such action as America decided to take in Mexico.

It declared that its only interest was the reëstablishment of stable government and that it supported Huerta because it believed him to be the man of the hour.

Meantime German arms and ammunition by the shipload were being landed in Mexican ports by German ships to enable Huerta to maintain his resistance to American demands. The shipments continued, as all the world knows, even after our occupation of Vera Cruz. The attitude of the German government remained the while "officially correct."

Press Abuse of America.

But all this time President Wilson, our government, and the American people in general were being subjected to the vilest possible abuse in the German press—again, as in the case of the Spanish war, by the "inspired" and "semi-official" press as the mentors of the other papers, which, on such occasions, take their cue from the government controlled journals.

Mr. Wilson was depicted as a "pure-minded but misguided fool." Our Mexican policy was described as a policy conceived by and dictated wholly in the interests of the Standard Oil company. Mr. Rockefeller was cartooned as the real ruler at the White House.

We were bent on gobbling up Mexico, as we had gobbled up the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and Panama. We were portrayed as political bluffers and military cowards. The president's reluctance to make war on the inoffensive Mexican people was explained to Germans as being due exclusively to craven fear that Huerta would humiliatingly defeat us if we dared to open hostilities against him.

It was while this carnival of calumny and misrepresentation was at its height that a friendly German colleague, the proprietor of an important Berlin news agency, asked me to write for him an article setting forth the basis of our Mexican policy.

He said that the German press was obviously getting a distorted picture of the situation from biased correspondents. He thought important newspapers would gladly give room to a statement of the case "from an American point of view."

Concerning "Fair Hearing."

I wrote it. Some fifteen or twenty inconsequential papers in the provinces reprinted it. Not a journal of importance thought it worth while to give its readers the facts from our standpoint. The article was hawked about the editorial offices of Berlin by my German colleague in vain. Nobody would touch it. It annihilated too many prejudices.

Germans, obviously, were not disposed to give us a square deal. This is a personal experience. It was full of meaning. It causes me to smile when I read day by day complaints from pro-Germans in America now that they cannot get a "fair hearing" for the fatherland.

German hostility to us in 1898 and 1914 concerned itself with two great, specific issues. It sprang, however, from the unfathomable sea of anti-Americanism in which Germans have been immersed for years.

I have never quite been able to get at the pathology of Germans' dislike of us. Much of it is due to their hatred of the Monroe doctrine. The cultured classes are steeped in animosity to that cardinal principle of American foreign policy. They are taught to excoriate it by their university professors, and when they have left college and taken their places in the world they have anti-Monroeism dinned into their ears by their political writers and military and naval experts.

Trade Rivalry Fans Hostility.

Trade rivalry, too, in recent years has fanned German hostility to the United States. The Fatherland despises our tariff system, though for decades it has maintained a Chinese wall of its own around its coasts and frontiers.

The German politician and exporter are against tariffs in every country except Germany. They look upon it as their divine right to flood foreign markets with stuff "made in Germany," but consider it an act of unfriendliness if foreign merchants and manufacturers successfully invade the German home market. It is the most delightful inconsistency which I ever ran across in Europe.

Then, too, strange to say, the kaiser's personal policy of cajolery of Americans has never been popular among his own people. Their literary men, incompetent imitators of Bryce and O'Rell, have too long educated the Germans to believe that we are exclusively a race of "dollar chasers." The most popular nickname for "Amerika" in Germany is "Dollarika."

Americans Called Grafters.

The only news about us ever printed in the German press is news which depicts us as a race of money grabbers, political confidence men, grafters, divorce faddists, affinity worshipers and crooked financiers.

The Germans, who look upon themselves as civilzation's only true standard bearers, naturally took umbrage at the kaiser's "American policy." They looked askance at his systematic courtesies to our distinguished men. They considered it "undignified." They knew it was condescension, but said it was misplaced.

The aristocratic clique, the military nabobs—the class from which the war party springs—violently opposed the extension of the hospitalities of the imperial court to increasingly large numbers of American men and women during each recurring Berlin season. They objected to "mere millionaires" brushing shoulders with German "vons."

Says People Didn't Want War.

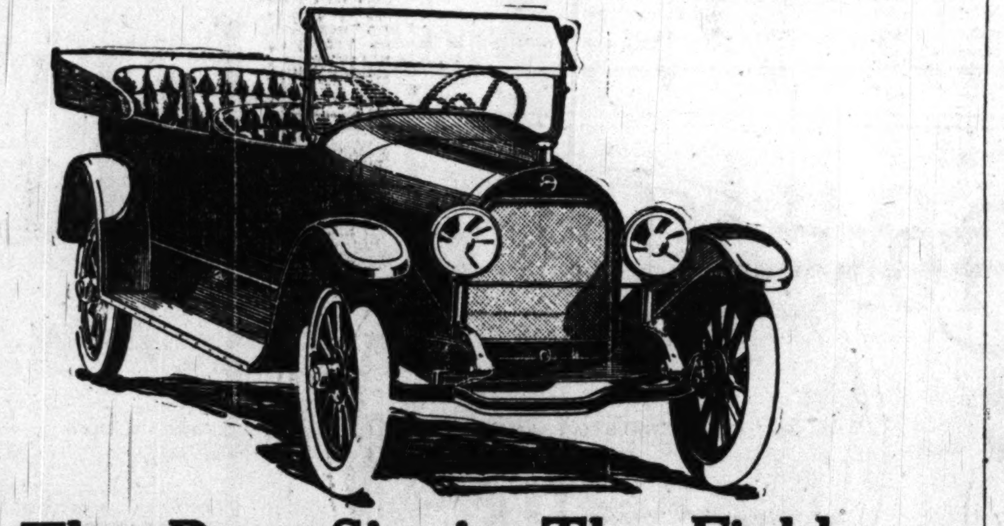
The very last slap administered to us by official Germany was in connection with the Panama-Pacific exposition. Although two-thirds of the German reichstag was in favor of a representative German exhibit at San Francisco in 1915, the kaiser's government stubbornly and successfully resisted all pressure in that direction.

It disavowed even Count Bernstorff, who was warmly in favor of German participation, and Herr Albert Ballin, the astute general manager of the Hamburg-American line, who, as a hard headed business man, realized the opportunity Germany was missing.

The great rank and file of the German people did not want war. Let that be rubbed in here and everywhere, now and over and over again. But the rank and file, now shedding their blood and dispensing their treasure so gallantly, were a voice crying in the wilderness. They did not go to war. They were dragged into it.

Germans Use London Residence.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A pretentious residence within sight of Windsor castle was raided today by the police, who seized a quantity of German correspondence. The occupant of the house, a German, was arrested and is now held in a detention camp for German prisoners.



The Best Six in The Field

The Jeffery Chesterfield

In last Sunday's papers we announced that the new Jeffery Chesterfield Six, selling at $1650, had just been received and was on our floor.

Before these papers were completely distributed throughout the city, the crowds commenced to gather in our show room. Not by the scores, but by the hundreds.

These folks wanted sixes; but no one knew better than they that the real issue in all the controversy between Sixes and Fours was not so much regarding principle and design as between quality and substitute for quality. They realized they could get a good Six if they paid enough for it. They also realized that cheaply assembled Sixes would not prove wise investments.

And so they waited for some manufacturer, possessing the necessary capital, experience and equipment to build a six cylinder car of better quality, better style, greater economy and more comfort than could be purchased before for less than three thousand dollars.

When they read our Jeffery announcement they realized that here was the car of their dreams. They realized that here was a car manufactured by a firm which could not afford to darken its reputation, gained during forty-three years of honest manufacturing and honest dealing by the production of a car unworthy of the Jeffery name. They felt that if the Thomas B. Jeffery Company could afford to risk a $3,000,000 factory investment on a $1650 car, they could afford to risk $1650 with a $3,000,000 company.

And so they came to see "the best six in the field—the Chesterfield."

Its full French streamline body, its luxurious, heavy, genuine leather upholstery, together with the many interior elements of refinement found only in the best American and Foreign cars, simply captivated all.

The Jeffery high-speed, light weight, European designed motor, so perfectly balanced that it is actually difficult to say whether or not the motor is running when the car stands at the curb with the motor running idle—proved a marvel to both the experienced and the inexperienced.

The quiet, powerful Jeffery worm gear drive, such as is used on sixty-five per cent of the English cars, and the long, easy-riding cantilever springs, found only on the highest priced cars, caused still further wonderment as to how a car possessing such elegance and such perfect, up-to-the-minute mechanical equipment could be sold for $1650. Furthermore, we told them

What Jeffery Service Means Now and Forever

We told them how the Thomas B. Jeffery Company has invested $1,000,000 in repair parts and how we have invested $20,000 in the most needed parts to be carried in our stock room. Any part of any Jeffery car can be secured over night.

The efficiency of this service was put to the test the other day. A man came in with a cracked cylinder from a 1901 model. The next morning we handed him his new cylinder. And that, mind you, for a car 13 years old. Where else can you get such service?

Many of those who visited our show rooms last week have stopped looking for their ideal six. You'll soon see them spinning through the parks and over the boulevards in the most beautifully designed and elegantly finished cars ever seen in Chicago—the kind of a car we would like to show you any time you say.

KAISER SAW NO BIG WAR NEAR?

Reporter Back from Berlin Says Germany Thought 1916 "Fated Year."

WHY HE AIDS AUSTRIA.

BY G. F. STEWARD.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 11.—There has reached here from Berlin a special correspondent of the Nieuwe Rotterdam Courant who apparently has tapped valuable private sources of information.

"When the Austrians declared their intention of sending a punitive expedition to Servia, as the only means of ending 'an intolerable situation,' they asked if they could rely on Germany's assistance in case Russia aided Servia.

Discussed at Potsdam.

"This," says the correspondent, "was the question discussed at the Potsdam council. Military men there strongly recommended very decided action, for reasons which I will explain. The emperor was strongly against anything which might lead to war, but, at the same time, he thought that something ought to be done against Servia. Ultimately it was decided to assure Austria that she could reckon on Germany if her action against Servia brought any serious consequences.

"Neither the emperor nor the chancellor believed that the danger of a general war was so great, because they considered the real danger period to be in February and March, 1916, for the following reasons:

Railway Ready in 1916.

"In 1916 the strategic railway of Poland could be ready, and, although the Russian field artillery already is in goood order, their siege equipment would not for eighteen months be sufficiently good to attack the heart of Germany, protected, as it was by great fortresses.

"The French, they believed, on the other hand, would in the course of 1915 make good their deficiency in long range artillery. Until 1916, therefore, they believed there was time. February and March, it was anticipated, would be chosen by the enemy, because at that time most damage could be done to the growing crops. Now the harvest is already nearly finished.

"On these grounds the military participants in the council favored very strong action by the Austro-Germans, as they expected it would entangle the reckonings of their enemies."

RED CROSS SHIP SAILS, THEN ANCHORS IN BAY.

Probably Will Not Leave Until Tomorrow—New Delay for Training of Crew.

New York, Sept. 12.—The steamer Red Cross, which is to carry American surgeons and nurses to Europe's battlefields, probably will not begin its transatlantic voyage until Monday. Apparently it had started on its delayed trip late this afternoon, but after passing quarantine it turned about and took anchorage in Gravesend bay. There it is expected to remain for another thirty-six hours at least.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels bade the Red Cross farewell in person. He raised the Stars and Stripes at the relief ship's stern.

Recent delays were due to British and French official protests that the Red Cross' own crew contained Germans.

LINER LEAVES ROTTERDAM WITH 1,300 AMERICANS.

Wife of Minister Van Dyke and Party Aboard Nieuw Amsterdam Dutch Envoy Comes Also

ROTTERDAM, via London, Sept. 12.—About 1,300 Americans sailed from here for New York at 3 o'clock this morning on the steamer Nieuw Amsterdam. The total passenger list aggregates about 1,650, of whom 762 are in the first cabin, 646 in the second, and the remainder in the steerage.

Among the passengers are Mrs. Henry Van Dyke, wife of the American minister at The Hague, and a party composed of her daughter, Miss Catherine Van Dyke; the Rev. Tertius Van Dyke, Mr. Van Santvoord, Merle Smith, Alexander R. Gulick, and the Rev. Howard C. Robbins.

Others aboard are: W. Z. F. C. Van Rappard, the Dutch minister to Washington, Mr. and Mrs. August Busch of St. Louis, and a large party.

AUSTRIANS JAIL WRITER WHO STIRRED UP POLES.

Sienkiewicz, "Quo Vadis" Author, Prisoner at Cracow—Favored Russian Rapprochement.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A dispatch to the Evening News from Petrograd says that Henryk Sienkiewicz, the Polish writer and author of "Quo Vadis," who recently issued an appeal to the Poles to support Russia in the war, has been taken prisoner by the Austrians and sent to Cracow.

M. Sienkiewicz lived on his estate in Galicia.

He is about 70 years old and always has been hostile to Austria and Germany and an apostle of a Russo-Polish rapprochement.

Use Saw-Edge Bayonets.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, Sept. 12.—The Matin prints a photograph of a saber bayonet found near Meaux, belonging to the Forty-seventh Prussian infantry, one edge of which was notched like a saw. The Matin says many similar saber bayonets have been found. The sawlike indentations were evidently made by machine and not by individual efforts.

LARGER NAVY TO BE ISSUE IN CONGRESS

Advocates Will Demand 12 New Dreadnoughts for United States.

CAMPAIGN IS PLANNED

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—The necessity of creating a larger navy for the adequate protection of the United States from foreign attack will be borne in upon congress at the next regular session from many quarters.

As a result of the lessons of preparedness for war which are being taught to those willing to learn by the great war in the eastern hemisphere, one of the most notable discussions of the policies of American defense is destined to take place when congress takes up the army and navy appropriation bills.

WILL URGE TWELVE WARSHIPS

The advocates of a larger navy are preparing to urge appropriations for the construction of twelve new dreadnoughts. It is expected that the general board of the navy will submit recommendations for a larger number of fighting vessels than ever before.

There is good reason to believe that the general board will advise the secretary of the navy that not less than six first class battleships, sixteen destroyers, and eight submarines be added to the sea forces of the nation.

Even the small navy members of congress, who are against any more battleships and who reluctantly compromise on the addition of one vessel, foresee the difficulties of their position. They now are saying they will not consent to the laying down of more than two new dreadnoughts.

NAVY LEAGUE CAMPAIGN.

The Navy League of the United States, of which Gen. Horace Porter is president, is preparing to launch a vigorous campaign for the building of a larger and better equipped navy. The organization will ask congress to pass legislation providing:

For a continuous, continuing program of naval construction that will furnish, as recommended by the general board of the navy, an ultimate force of forty-eight battleships, including necessary auxiliaries.

For a council of national defense.

For an improved and a just personnel law.

For a naval reserve which will include honorably discharged men of the navy, the naval militia, and men from the merchant marine.

For a strong merchant marine which can serve as an auxiliary to the navy in time of war.

WAR ABROAD A LESSON.

The European war already has demonstrated that the United States cannot be assured of security from foreign attack unless it possesses a navy strong enough to cope with the largest sea forces of the eastern hemisphere.

The American navy formerly was second in strength to that of Great Britain only. Now it has retrograded to third place, the German navy forging to second. France is but a lap behind the United States. If the policy inaugurated with southern Democratic control of congress continues the United States soon will be in the fourth rank of sea powers.

POINTS TO BE CITED.

The navy league, which is planning a vast educational campaign to demonstrate to the people that the effectiveness of American policies absolutely depends on a strong navy, will call attention to these features of the situation:

The Monroe doctrine, particularly in its relation to the West Indies and lands north of the Amazon.

The attitude of the United States as to possession or ownership of strategic alien harbors and coaling stations.

The neutrality of the Panama canal, including the necessary safeguarding incident to the passage through the canal of the ships of belligerents, when other nations are at war.

The restriction of Asiatic immigration.

The integrity of China.

The open door of trade in China.

"The Monroe doctrine," said Secretary Dadmun of the league today, "went by default from 1862 to 1865 because it could not be enforced during our civil war. Napoleon III., wishing to colonize Mexico, placed Maximilian on the throne, through the aid of the French army, and against the protests of the United States.

"The close of the civil war enabled the president to send Sheridan and the army to the Mexican borders and naval vessels to the Mexican coasts. Napoleon then withdrew his troops, Maximilian was captured, and the Monroe doctrine was again in force.

"The Monroe doctrine was again upheld by the presence of the United States battleship fleet during the critical period when Germany and Great Britain virtually declared war against Venezuela."

PLEA FOR BIG NAVY.

In a bulletin issued just before the beginning of the European war the league says in advocacy of a larger navy:

"Sea power was indispensable to the success of the war of the revolution.

"The navy fought and won the war of 1812.

"The union was preserved and the outcome of the war of secession was determined as much by the blockading navy as by the army of the north.

"National humiliation to the United States following naval weakness was illustrated by the humiliating treatment accorded to American seamen in Cuba by Spain in 1873.

"The navy decided the outcome of the Spanish war, which would never have taken place had Spain known our navy's strength.

"England's navy has given Great Britain uninterrupted peace on the water for nearly 100 years, and its shores have not been successfully invaded for nearly a thousand years.

"China's policy of evading militarism on both land and sea has been accompanied by disastrous defeats and untold humiliation.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A British private who was wounded in the fight during the retreat from Mons tells the following story of the battle there:

"It was Sunday and the British regiments at Mons were merrymaking and enjoying themselves in leisure along the streets.

"About noon, when the men were beginning to think about dinner, a German aeroplane appeared overhead and began throwing out a cloud of black powder to assist distant batteries to get the range.

"No sooner had the powder cloud disappeared than shrapnel began to burst overhead. In a moment all was confusion and uproar. But it didn't take the regiments long to get into fighting trim and race through the city to the scene of operations on the other side of the small canal in the suburbs.

Engage in Fierce Clash.

"Here our outposts were engaging the enemy fiercely. The outposts lost heavily, most of the damage being done by shells. The rifle fire was ineffective, although at times the lines of contenders were not more than 300 yards apart.

"The first reinforcements to arrive were posted in a glass factory, the walls of which were loopholed, and we doggedly held that position until nightfall.

"About midnight orders came to retire over the canal, and two companies were left behind to keep the enemy in check temporarily. After the main body had crossed the bridges it was blown up, leaving the two outpost companies to get across as best they could. Most of them managed to reach the main body again.

Mons Practically Blown Away.

"The main body fell back through the open country. When day broke it was apparent from higher ground that Mons had been practically blown away by the German artillery.

"Throughout the morning we continued to fight a rear guard action until at 6 o'clock in the evening we were well out of range of the German artillery, in a quiet valley. Here all were ordered to rest and eat.

"At 8 o'clock all lights were extinguished, the soldiers were ordered to make no noise, and the pickets pushed a long distance backward. Long before dawn the troops were hastily started again and continued the retirement.

German Army Catches Up.

"By noon the enemy was again heard from and a large detachment was assigned the task of fighting to protect our rear.

"During the afternoon both the German and British armies watched a duel in the air between French and German aeroplanes. The Frenchman succeeded in maneuvering himself to the upper position and began blazing away at the German with a revolver. Finally he hit him and he fell to the ground dead.

"At dusk a halt was made for food, and as the Germans had fallen behind we passed a quiet night. At dawn, however, we found the Germans close at our heels, and several regiments were ordered to prepare intrenchments. We quickly put up fortifications which were sufficient to protect us somewhat from the artillery fire.

Shells Tear Up Intrenchments.

"It was not long before the German gunners found the range and began tearing up those rough fortifications, concentrating their fire on the British batteries, one of which was completely demolished. Another found itself with only six men.

"Both these disasters bore testimony to the excellent marksmanship of the German gunners.

"Things rapidly got hotter and the commanding officer ordered a double quick retreat. We were not long in doing the retiring movement to save our own skins."

National Municipal League Committee Finishes Draft of Program for November Meeting.

New York, Sept. 12.—A special committee of the National Municipal league today finished its work of drafting a municipal program for American cities, and will submit its work to the league in Baltimore on Nov. 18. President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard university presided.

Clinton Rogers Woodruff, secretary of the league, in a statement today said the committee considered the following three measures:

A constitutional amendment to give cities adequate powers to run their own affairs; a model municipal corporation act to organize cities where there is no municipal home rule; and a model charter, to be adopted by cities having the right to frame their own framework of government.

DYING DOCTOR RELEASED FROM JAIL BY JUDGE LANDIS

Dr. Emil Steiner, Who Posed as Army Officer and Caused Sensation at Joliet, Given Liberty.

Dr. Emil Steiner is in the last stages of tuberculosis. He has been an inmate in the county jail for several months awaiting trial in the federal court on a charge of impersonating a government officer.

When Judge Landis returned from his vacation yesterday he heard of the physician's illness and released him on his own recognizance.

Dr. Steiner caused a sensation in Joliet last winter when he pretended to take poison at a banquet in his honor. He had posed as an army surgeon and borrowed money from his new found friends. At the banquet he was asked for the money. The doctor arose and announced that he had taken poison. He was taken to another physician's house and slipped out of a back window."

Judge Scully Liberates Man Who Helped Him on Election Day.

Peter Franzen of 242 West Fifty-ninth street stood in the Englewood court yesterday accused of disorderly conduct. The police said he had been drinking.

"Been working nights," explained Franzen.

"Did you vote?" asked the court.

"Sure I voted."

"Whom did you vote for?"

"Judge Scully."

"You're a good man. Discharged."

Franzen was too surprised to speak at first. Then he went up to the clerk and asked who the judge was.

"That's Judge Scully," said the clerk.

DEMOCRATS MAY CALL CAUCUS ON WAR TAX PLANS

Action Depends on Attitude of Wilson on Imposing Levy on Freight.

UNDERWOOD FOR DRAFT

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—If President Wilson does not disapprove of the proposition to levy a war tax on freight shipments before Monday noon Democrats of the house will hold a caucus on the war revenue measure agreed to by the ways and means committee.

Majority Leader Underwood and his followers are threatened with defeat in that caucus if they insist on the retention of the freight tax provision in the bill. So much opposition to this proposal has been stirred up that Mr. Underwood did not introduce the bill into the house today. He informed the opposition he would lay the matter squarely before the president again, and if the president wants the freight tax levied the bill will be introduced. If he does not, another change will be made.

Democratic Caucus Assured.

The opponents of the freight tax, however, took the precaution of circulating a petition for a Democratic caucus on the war revenue measure this afternoon. Tonight they announced they had enough signatures to insure the calling of the caucus if President Wilson insists upon the retention of the freight tax item. The caucus will be held either Monday or Tuesday night.

Mr. Underwood decided to hold up the measure following a conference with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Postmaster General Burleson today.

President Wilson has gone to Cornish, so he could not be seen. It is the general understanding that the president approved the freight tax when the idea was suggested to him. The uprising in the party, however, may cause him to change his mind.

Underwood Wants Freight Taxed.

Mr. Underwood is doing everything in his power to line up a majority of the Democrats in favor of the freight tax. He has made one convert in Representative Rainey of Illinois, a member of his committee. Mr. Rainey, on his return to Washington, said he was opposed to taxing shipments of freight. He issued a statement today, however, declaring that the tax would be so inconsequential it could not be passed on to the consumers.

Leading the opposition to Mr. Underwood is Representative Kitchin of North Carolina, who has been slated for the Democratic leadership in the next house in view of Mr. Underwood's retirement to enter the senate. The fight between Kitchin and Underwood has become so bitter it would not be surprising to see Underwood throw his strength to Rainey, inasmuch as the latter is supporting him now.

The opponents of the freight tax assert that it will give dealers a chance to raise prices all along the line "on account of the war tax," and they predict that after the tax is dropped the prices will not come down.

KAISER FEARFUL OF SOCIALISTS?

London Paper Asserts He Attempts to Kill Them All in Battle.

LEADERS ARRESTED.

Copies of the Daily Herald, a London syndicalist and labor paper, which have reached Chicago, contain the startling charge that the kaiser is seeking deliberately to wipe out the Socialist soldiers.

Bear Brunt of Attack.

"The newspaper reports agree that the brunt of the attack was borne, not by Prussian but by South German troops. From private advices it appears that the Saxon regiments were given the 'honor' of being wiped out by the foe.

"The significance of that statement, from our standpoint, lies in the fact that socialism is extremely strong in the kingdom of Saxony, and that the Saxon infantry is composed to a very considerable extent of Social Democrats. If the reports I have received are true—and I have every reason to trust my informants—those 'rush' tactics which astonished the military experts are open to a very sinister explanation.

Blow to Militarism.

"The Prussian militarists (and it is well to remember that when we talk of 'German' policy we mean the policy of the Prussian autocracy which since 1870 has bossed the empire) regard the Social Democrats as their most dangerous foes, and rightly so. Every accession to the ranks of the Social Demokraten is a blow to the militarist policy of the Prussian ruling caste. Hence it is that members of that caste have declared, on more than one occasion, their intention of sending the Socialists into the firing line in the event of war.

"The slaughter at Liege shows that they are prepared to carry out their threats. When Gen. von Emmich sent those Saxon lads to destruction he dealt a blow at the Prussian autocracy from which it will never recover.

Seek to Suppress Socialists.

"In vain they flung these soldiers into the jaws of death. In vain they have prohibited all Socialist meetings. In vain they have suppressed Germany's ninety Socialist newspapers. In vain they arrest the leaders. I am informed that the Socialist deputies to the reichstag have been placed under arrest, but can get no confirmation of this at the moment.

"So far as one can prophesy, the days of the Prussian autocracy are numbered, and a German republic will arise out of the most likely results of this international slaughter."

WOUNDED SOLDIER A WOMAN.

French Hospital Staff Learns Identity of Zouave Who Fought in the Trenches.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Among the wounded brought to Noisy-le-Sec, a town in the department of the Seine and near the Ourcq canal, was a young laundress in a soldier's uniform. She had followed a company of zouaves and had fought alongside of them in the trenches. Her identity was not discovered until she was wounded. Before sending her to the rear the commanding officer complimented her on her bravery.

SOCIETY TAKES UP VOLUNTARY WAR TAX PLAN

Fashionable Communities Enlist in Campaign to Aid United Charities.

DONATIONS ON INCREASE

The voluntary war tax scheme of the United Charities, whereby the poor benefit from the luxuries of the rich, is becoming society's pet fad. South Shore, Bryn Mawr, and Washington Heights are the latest communities to adopt it.

Mrs. L. S. Tiffany of 7140 Euclid avenue, yesterday announced her intention of presenting the scheme to the Bryn Mawr Woman's club within a few days, and it is expected that friends of the United Charities in Washington Heights will take similar action. An entertainment already has been planned by the club for the benefit of the South Chicago district of the United Charities.

Mrs. Walter L. Brewster, a member of the advisory committee of the lower north district of the United Charities, is stimulating interest in that district in the voluntary war tax.

Many Contributions Doubled.

Several large contributors to the United Charities voluntarily have doubled their usual yearly gifts because of the financial stringency in which the society now finds itself.

Several hundred dollars come in Saturday as a direct result of the war tax appeal in THE TRIBUNE. Several firms increased their yearly subscriptions 50 and 100 per cent. In addition to this several checks came in from business men and bankers outside of Chicago.

A letter from J. G. Whetstone of the Whetstone stock farm, Augusta, Ill., to the United Charities makes a plea for the sending of employable women to farms where there is said to be a great dearth of capable help.

Women Needed on Farms.

"We hear much about the strenuosity of life for working girls in the city," he says, "yet few will go to the country. One reason for high priced food is that farmers are not producing what the farms are capable of because help they can depend on will not remain in the country."

In answer to this, Eugene T. Lies, head of the United Charities, states there is probably more work for women in Chicago than for men and there is seemingly little call for men on farms.

"When I say this I am thinking of the following case," Mr. Lies said:

"Ivan B., a Russian living in South Chicago, though big and strong, could not get a job; so, when a junk dealer offered him temporary work cleaning out the powder from used cartridges he welcomed the chance. He worked only a few hours when an explosion of the powder ocurred, injuring and burning him severely. He was taken to the county hospital, but because of the crowded condition there was discharged just as soon as it was possible, and while the burns on his hands and face still needed attention.

"Though he still returns to the hospital for treatment, he already has started to look for work, for he has a wife and three children—and soon there will be another baby. Katie and John started to school this week, but had to go barefooted and wearing only thin little ragged blouses. Their rent is $5 a month, but that has not been paid for two months and the landlord is growing impatient. Besides, the furniture man is writing frequent threatening letters if they do not continue their promised monthly installments. This is one case where the voluntary war taxers have helped."

Connecticut Runaway Caught.

Rebecca Weber, 16 years old, whose father is a hotel owner in Hartford, Conn., and who ran away from home Aug. 31, is being held at the South Clark street annex, pending the arrival of her father. The girl was found at East Fiftieth street and Indiana avenue yesterday. She said she ran away because her father made her work long hours as cashier in the hotel.

Message from Hero of France Telling of Loss of His Arm.

GENERAL PAUL PAU
PHOTO © BAIN

PARIS, Sept 2.—[Correspondence.]—Gen. Paul Gerald Pau, hero of the second capture of Muelhausen, and whose army has borne one of the biggest parts in the war, in a letter just published, written to his mother soon after the battle of Woerth in 1870, in which he lost his right arm, told the story of his wound as follows:

"My Good Mother: As I don't know if any of the letters that I have written to you have arrived, or, rather, since I have strong reasons for beliving that none of them has reached you, while this time I may hope that you will be able to see my autograph, I am going to relate my adventures at length.

"First of all, the originality of the preceding seven lines must lead you to think that they were traced by a foot instead of a hand. Undeceive yourself and laugh neither at the first efforts of an unpracticed hand, nor at the style. Besides the fact that I speak almost exclusively German just now, I swear that elegant phrases don't flow easily when it takes five minutes to trace a line.

"But I am forgetting that I haven't told you the main thing. I am wounded but you see not dangerously. It was Aug. 6 in the battle of Woerth. I had up to that time the luck not to be touched in the midst of a rain of iron and lead, when a shell smashed a tree near me and a splinter struck me on the right hand and put two fingers hors du combat. An hour afterward I regretted much less the loss of the above mentioned digits because a Bavarian bullet fractured the same hand and lodged itself between the two bones of my wrist, from which I delicately extracted it.

"I was then ordered to the ambulance, and it was while I dragged myself along in that direction obliged to pass under the fire of the Prussian batteries I received the fragment of a shell in my right thigh.

"Unnecessary for me to tell you that all is quite well with me. It is true they had to amputate my wrist, but the operation was highly successful. How could it be otherwise? I am with the best folks in the world, nursed like a child of the family, visits, each more affectionate than the last, I don't lack.

"Enough of myself. I needn't tell you that I am anxious for both your poor Lorraine and our poor France. Shall I be a long while before I can fly toward Nancy?

"'Trailing a wing and dragging a foot.' It is La Fontaine who gives the answer.

"In the meantime a thousand kisses and hoping to see you soon. GERALD."

MAJ. FUNKHOUSER CAN'T SAY IF LOOP IS TO BE CLEANED UP

Refuses to Admit Knowing "Anything Interesting" About Arrest of Women in Delaware Cafe.

Some of Maj. Metellus Lucius Cicero Funkhouser's men last night arrested four women in the Delaware café at 153 North Dearborn street and charged them with being inmates of a disorderly house. The women said they were entertainers.

A reporter called the major's home to ask him about the raid.

"I can't say anything interesting," declared the major.

"Is this the beginning of a cleanup in the loop?"

"Really, I don't know."

"Who owns the Delaware café?"

"I couldn't tell you. Really, nothing I could say would be of any moment."

CORONER EXPLODES STORY OF 'HOLMES BURIAL GROUND.'

Asserts Three Skeletons Found Near Momence Are Those Either of Indians or Old Burial Ground.

Authorities of Kankakee county yesterday investigated the finding of the bones of three skeletons in a sandhill on the Van Kirk farm northeast of Momence. They pronounced the bones either the remains of an abandoned cemetery or those of Indians.

Coroner L. E. Fenouille of Kankakee county made an all day investigation of the report that the bones may have been those of victims of the murderer, Holmes Fenouille satisfied himself that the bones plowed up by William Ratz on the Van Kirk farm were more than fifty years old.

OLD SCHOOL SITE THIS WEEK TO BE PUBLIC MARKET

Maxwell and Union and Morgan and Ohio Streets Chosen.

INVITATION TO FARMERS

Plans for opening a municipal market before the end of the week on the site of the unused Goldsmith school property at Maxwell and Union streets were announced yesterday by Chairman James H. Lawley of the city markets commission.

This site was chosen yesterday by a subcommittee consisting of Ald. Lawley, Fred A. Curtis, and Secretary Frederick Rex, after an inspection of nine available locations. If the subcommittee's views are carried out a second municipal market will be located at the old Washington school at Morgan and Ohio streets.

Ald. Lawley intends to visit the farmers in the neighborhood of Niles Center today for the purpose of inviting them to sell their produce at the Goldsmith school.

175,458 People Within Mile.

"If the farmers are ready to come in I don't see why we cannot open the market on Tuesday or Wednesday," said the chairman. "The arrangements at the Goldsmith school are perfect, and there is no reason why the interior of the building could not be used when it gets colder. A market will be most helpful in that neighborhood on account of the congestion. Within a radius of one mile there are 175,458 people."

It is proposed to obtain the coöperation of the settlement houses, of which the Henry Booth house, the Maxwell settlement, and Hull house are in the near vicinity.

After the first two markets are in operation the commission plans to establish the third one in some more favored community. It was the opinion of the subcommittee that the moderately well to do families would be as quick to take advantage of a market as those in poverty stricken districts. A vacant lot at Diversey boulevard and Seminary avenue was favorably considered for this purpose.

Urges Sale of Car of Potatoes.

Mr. Curtis urged the purchase by the commission of a car of potatoes to be placed on sale at the Goldsmith market on the day of opening. He said he could make the necessary arrangements.

TOY SOLDIERS MEET REVERSE

BAD FOR THE CHILDREN

Woman's displeasure at the European war was voiced in the preparation of peace petitions yesterday. A peace committee from the Chicago Political Equality league met an advisory delegation of forty women from the churches and philanthropic institutions and sketched plans for the crystalization of opinion favoring "universal peace" among women throughout the world.

Miss Florence Holbrook, chairman of the committee, read a peace letter to the advisory group. This letter will be sent to all the federated women's clubs asking for assistance in the struggle for peace. Club presidents in the various states will be empowered to appoint a committee of 100 women in their state to work for peace. Speakers will be sent throughout the land and children in the schools will be converted.

Ban on Toy Soldiers.

In an effort to eliminate everything warlike from the children's minds, Miss Holbrook appointed Mrs. Le Roy Goddard, Mrs. Bertram Sippy, and Mrs. Katherine Robbins as a committee on toys to request manufacturers to cease from putting out articles for children which conflict with ideas of peace. They will ask that toy soldiers and all paraphernalia of the militaire be banished.

Another task which the women imposed upon themselves is to provide a "palace of peace" for Chicago. A commission was delegated to make efforts toward obtaining the Field museum building for this purpose after it is abandoned for its present uses.

Miss Mary McDowell offered a resolution supporting President Wilson's peace policies, which was adopted.

Scatter 14,000 Petitions.

The women left with bundles of peace petitions to distribute over the city. Mrs. B. L. Engelke, organizer for the Political Equality league, was staggered by the task which confronts here. Her duty is to provide a peace petition for each of the 400 "block guardians" in each of the thirty-five wards in the city. When her task is completed she will have distributed more than 14,000 petitions.

Miss Mary Bartelme took 1,000 of the petitions to scatter through Evanston, and Mrs. Eleonora Z. Meder of the Public Welfare bureau of Chicago undertook the distribution of 2,000.

More than thirty principals of city schools met in the rooms of the board of education and adopted a resolution asking that the curriculums of school children include studies of the advantages and glories of peace.

Ten Thousand to Parade.

Ten thousand persons are expected to be in a women's peace pageant in the Coliseum next Wednesday evening.

Many woman's clubs and philanthropic organizations banded in the Home Circle of Chicago will join in the pageant, which will be the spectacular feature of "Red Cross night," opening the Home exposition in the Coliseum. The proceeds of that evening will be given to the American Red Cross association.

WILSON AT SUMMER CAPITAL FOR VISIT WITH FAMILY.

President While at Cornish, N. H., Will Frame Reply to European Rulers' Protest.

Cornish, N. H., Sept. 12.—President Wilson arrived here this afternoon for a week-end visit with his family at the summer White House.

The president brought with him the telegrams from Emperor William of Germany and President Poincaré of France regarding alleged use of "dumdum" bullets in the European war. He will frame his replies while here.

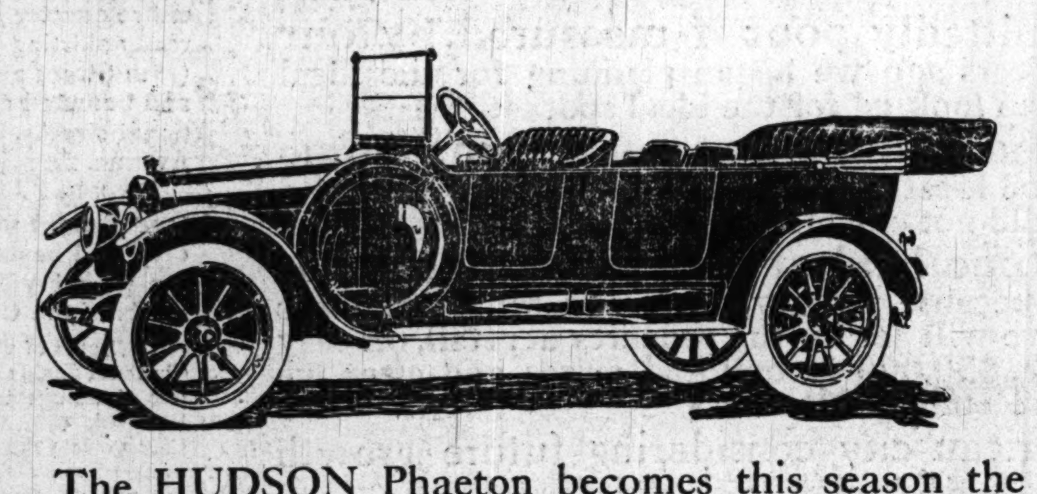
HUDSON Phaeton

Attains New Standard for Sixes



The HUDSON Phaeton becomes this season the car to measure by. Compare point by point the cars which claim to compete with it. Place any such car side by side with the HUDSON and you'll see scores of ways in which the HUDSON excels.

Things to Compare

The HUDSON Phaeton is a beauty—the latest ideal of a handsome car. It has a perfect stream-line body, without a break or angle to mar the flowing lines. The finish is superb. The upholstering perfect. In any group this HUDSON Six will appear the distinguished car.

And then in weight. Lightness combined with staunchness denotes high-grade materials, skillful designing, simplicity. This lightness is rare because it is difficult and costly. But this has cut down tire cost immensely.

Ends Over-tax

Next, operative cost. With this new-type motor and this lightness we have brought operative cost to the minimum for cars of this size and power.

This new HUDSON Phaeton—today's finest example of a quality six—sells for $1,550. Trebled output this year has cut the price $200 per car.

The trend of the time is toward lightness, toward modesty in size and power and operative cost. If you accord with that trend this HUDSON Phaeton is the car you've long hoped to own.

A Service, Too, That Counts

HUDSON satisfaction is guaranteed by the Geyler Service. Every HUDSON does its duty every day in the year. Geyler owners of HUDSON will tell you that. We inspect your car at regular intervals and make all necessary adjustments to motor and electrical system. This is a real scientific service that counts. That's why you have that delightfully contented feeling of knowing that your HUDSON is in fine condition—and properly looked after always.

Come see this new HUDSON standard for sixes.

CHICAGO
AN ILLUSTRATION IN MODERN CITY PLANNING
E.H.BENNETT ARCHITECT—CHICAGO

What Happened on the Northwest Side

Five short years ago we developed Ravenswood Manor, on the Northwest side of Chicago. Its success has been phenomenal, and it stands out today as a residential garden spot that serves as a model for that section of Chicago. The success of this property, our first in Chicago, has forced citywide attention to the refining features of home development introduced by us, and hitherto neglected in this City.

Ravenswood Gardens, our adjoining property, followed, and met with the same success. On these two properties, comprising our Ravenswood holdings, there are now a million dollars' worth of artistic homes.

The same gratifying success was repeated in other sections of the Northwest side where we opened properties, notably at Belmont Gardens, which was transformed in ten months from an unattractive prairie to a thriving home community. Isn't it reasonable to assume that what we have accomplished in other sections of Chicago we will do again at Chatham Fields, on the South Side, and vastly more?

FOR twenty-seven years we have been building up the residential districts of big cities. Our output has been over one hundred large developments involving one hundred million dollars.

Our work of 27 years ago was admittedly poor if measured by our present standard, but it got better and better. Years ago we began planning for the ideal home section of the future. For years we have been looking for the ideal spot.

Until "Chatham Fields" was purchased nothing met our dream. Some perfect properties were in either too poor or too good locations. Some cities like New York and Philadelphia were so laid out the perfect location did not exist or was held at fabulous figures.

"Chatham Fields" was also at one time held at a fabulous figure. It was known as Mr. Fisher's million dollar farm because twenty years ago Mr. Fisher was offered just about as much for it as a raw farm as we will get for the property at retail, on easy terms, with protective provisions in case of death, $50,000 in building prizes, and after we have spent $300,000 on street improvements and embellishments.

"Chatham Fields" is in the ideal American city considering future growth and greatness.

"Chatham Fields" is ideal in size, for its one hundred and fifty acres allows all types of construction: single family houses, stores and big apartment houses.

"Chatham Fields" has ideal transportation facilities. It is on two important trolley lines already in operation It has an Illinois Central station within four minutes' walk, and two more trolley lines are planned to touch its sides. It is also convenient to the lake with all its attractions and amusements.

"Chatham Fields" is ideal in location because it is in the fast growing South Side district where people of moderate incomes are hungry for a home section properly protected against nuisances and ugliness, and where a really beautiful development will become a monument to its creators and an everlasting advertisement to those who live there.

So with the perfect property in hand, we went to Mr. E. H. Bennett, Consulting Architect of the Chicago Plan Commission and known as foremost in the great movement toward better and more artistic American cities.

Our conversation with him was something like this: "Mr. Bennett, our organization is not perfect. We can do first-class development work without outside assistance (this has been proven in Chicago and elsewhere), but the perfect development needs on its artistic side the touch of the Master hand. Can you make 'Chatham Fields' beautiful without making it expensive?"

Mr. Bennett frankly said he was not sure, but was willing to try.

Our response was: "Well, if you will give us the benefit of your experience we will pay you your fee as Consulting Architect, even if we cannot use all your plans."

To our great gratification and somewhat to our surprise, every suggestion of Mr. Bennett's has met our intensely practical requirements, and we feel safe in saying that all things considered, Beauty and Economy—Protection and Freedom—Permanence with Flexibility to new city needs, "Chatham Fields" will come nearer reaching the ideal of its type than any residential development in America.

Young Man, Go South

(To 81st St. and Cottage Grove Ave.) Chatham Fields occupies practically an entire quarter section, with car lines already skirting two sides of the property (79th Street and Cottage Grove Avenue) and bounded on the other sides by sectional streets, 83d Street and South Park Avenue.

Building operations have already extended right to the borders of the property, and beyond Chatham Fields there are probably 150,000 people within the limits of the City.

What is of vital importance is the fact that Chatham Fields is not restricted to one system of transportation, for the Illinois Central Railroad, with the best suburban service in Chicago into the Loop, is but four minutes' walk away—just near enough for convenience, but far enough away to be rid of objectionable features.

Moreover, Chatham Fields is convenient to Lake Michigan, Jackson and Washington Parks and to all the educational, amusement, business and shopping advantages that center around 63d Street.

CHURCH BIDS CHIEF QUIT OR CLEAR NAME

Illinois Methodist Pastors Call on John A. Patten for Proof.

OWNS WINE OF CARDUI

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

John A. Patten of Chattanooga, Tenn., is called the principal owner of the Chattanooga Medicine company, which manufactures and sells "Wine of Cardui."

John A. Patten of Chattanooga, Tenn., also is chairman of the book committee of the Methodist Episcopal church, which is regarded as the highest official position open to a layman in the denomination.

Methodists Call on Patten.

Yesterday the Illinois Methodist conference, in session at Shelbyville, called upon Mr. Patten either to refute certain charges made against him as the manufacturer of "Wine of Cardui" or sever all official connection with the Methodist Episcopal church. The charges originally were brought by the Journal of the American Medical association.

The resolutions were read in conference by the Rev. J. C. Baker, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Urbana, and signed by twenty of the most prominent men in the conference, and were adopted unanimously, without debate.

Here Are Resolutions.

The resolutions are:

"Whereas, the official organ of the American Medical association (the Journal) has in its issues of April 11 and July 18, 1914, published articles which bring serious charges against Mr. John A. Patten, and, through him, against the Methodist Episcopal church;

"Be it resolved, That it is the sense of the Illinois conference that Mr. Patten should refute in detail those charges or retire at once from official connection with the Methodist Episcopal church;

"Be it further resolved, That we ask the various boards of the church with which Mr. Patten is connected to require such refutation in detail or his retirement."

Summary of Charges.

The summary of the charges against Mr. Patten and, on account of his official position in the church, held by the ministers to be against the Methodist Episcopal church, are published by the American Medical Journal as follows:

Wine of Cardui is a vicious fraud.

Each dose contains as much alcohol as is found in about 100 drops of whisky and, so far as careful chemical and physiologic experiments show, does not possess any other drugs in sufficient quantities to give any appreciable therapeutic effect.

The principal owner of the business is John A. Patten, who is probably the most influential layman in the Methodist Episcopal church.

While the Methodist Episcopal church accepts Mr. Patten's money, the official publications of the church will not, so far as we have learned, accept the advertisements of Wine of Cardui.

The claims made on the package were so false that, when the food and drugs act when into effect, it became necessary to modify them.

The claims made in recent advertising sent out by the Chattanooga Medicine company, but not subject to the supervision of the food and drugs act, were still false, fraudulent, and vicious.

Mr. Patten and his company resented the inference that Wine of Cardui might be used as a "tipple," and submitted their protest through an attorney whose activities in behalf of the liquor interests have been notorious.

In closing, the Journal wishes to emphasize the fact that nothing that has been said about John A. Patten is actuated by malice.

Action Tabled in April.

In April the Chicago Methodist ministers' meeting took up the subject, and resolutions were presented calling on Mr. Patten to answer the charges made against him or resign. The resolutions were finally tabled after debate on the representation of certain ministers that Mr. Patten had denied the charges and had promised to bring suit against the American Medical Journal for $300,000.

The board of bishops, which met soon after the ministers' meeting, declined, it is understood, to pass any censure on Mr Patten for the same reason.

Importance of Job.

The importance of the book committtee of which Mr. Patten is now chairman, may be inferred from the description of its duties as published in the Methodist year book.

"The book committee," the year book says, "is almost the general conference ad interim. It has general supervision and direction of the publishing interests, in which the sales amounted in the last quadrennium, 1908 to 1912, to $10,321,284. It fixes the salaries of the bishops, publishing agents, and official editors. It elects the book editor. By a two-thirds vote it may remove from office any editor or publishing agent between the sessions of the general conference."

In addition to the chairmanship of the book committee, Mr. Patten is a member of several of the other general boards of the church and is the chief patron of the Chattanooga university.

Mr. Patten was telegraphed by THE TRIBUNE asking him for a statement regarding the resolutions of the Illinois conference.

Patten Denies Charges.

Mr. Patten in reply telegraphed:

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 12.—Replying to your telegraphic request: Charges are untrue and maliciously libelous; every one familiar with the facts knows charges are untrue. They will be refuted in the United States court at Chicago, where libel suits aggregating $300,000 were brought on Sept. 3 in the name of the Chattanooga Medicine company and myself against the Journal of the American Medical Association and its editors. Francis W. Walker is our Chicago attorney.

Mr. Walker, reached at Grand Haven, Mich., said the libel suits will come up for a hearing next week. He asserted proof will be presented disproving the charges brought by the medical journal. Wine of Cardui, he said, contains only 20 per cent alcohol, which is less than many other medicines.

"Wine of Cardui," he said, "is decidedly not a 'tipple.' It is a proprietary medicine."

BOYISH PRANK ENDS FATALLY

TWO ARE ARRESTED.

A small boy with a passion for tooting auto horns and a tired clerk whose nerves could not bear up under the noise indirectly caused the death of 6 year old James Dougherty last night.

The boy was the grandson of Michael Dougherty, former alderman of the Twenty-first ward, and lived at 1133 Orleans street. He was standing in front of the Sidney Mandl clothing store at 324-36 West Division street with two companions. One of them honked the auto horn.

The clerk—J. F. Perlowski of 5061 Hutchinson street—rushed out of the store and struck Dougherty over the head with a folded newspaper, according to Cutler Downer of 428 North Kimball avenue, who said he was a witness.

Falls in Front of Truck.

Dougherty ran out into the street and fell in front of a heavily laden auto truck owned by the Eclipse Laundry company and operated by Emil Peters of 3235 North Hamlin avenue. He was dead when the chauffeur picked him up. Peters and Perlowski were arrested. The latter owned the machine which had been standing in front of the store.

Mrs. Louisa Stark, 69 years old, of 2016 Kostner avenue, stepped off a south bound Western avenue car at Milwaukee avenue.

Just as she was about to step upon the sidewalk she was knocked down by an auto truck owned and driven by Hans A. Nielsen, coal dealer at 1535 North Maplewood avenue.

She died before the police arrived. Nielsen, who was arrested, said he could not stop the truck in time.

Other Auto Accidents.

Other auto accidents of yesterday are as follows:

OTTO GAULLA, 16 years old, 4140 North Kimball avenue. Killed by machine driven by Louis C. Thomsen, 3462 Dickens avenue. Thomsen charged with manslaughter. Witnesses said he drove past street car from which the victim was alighting.

MRS. JENNIE GRAHAM, 1951 Dayton street. Knocked down.

HELEN MARCINKOWSKI, 6 years old, of 8240 Exchange avenue, struck by a motorcycle ridden by Emil Antonison of 9158 Cahokia avenue, South Chicago, at East Eighty-third street and Houston avenue. Bruised.

ANNA ELUHY, 5 years old, of 4729 South Robey street, struck by an automobile truck owned by the Searchlight Gas company, East Twelfth street and Michigan avenue. Bruised.

Two Held to Grand Jury.

George Telleff, 3507 North Kildare avenue, and Frederick Bartels of 4440 North Kostner avenue were held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter yesterday by a coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of Detective Sergeant John J. Prendergast, who was struck and killed by an automobile which plowed through a crowd of men standing at North Crawford and Milwaukee avenues on Aug. 30.

SEEKS OWNER OF TWO COWS.

Truck Farmer Imprisons Trespassers, but Tires of Job of Milking Them Twice Daily.

Edward Meyer, a truck farmer at West Sixty-fifth street and South California avenue, found two cows in his garden early last Thursday morning and has been searching for the owner ever since. He has asked the Englewood police to assist him in the search. Meyer upon finding the cows put them in his barn and since then has been milking them twice a day, but he is not fond of cows and wishes to find the owner.

$150,000 JEWEL THEFTS SOLVED BY CONFESSION

LEARNED THEIR HABITS.

A shabby little man with an apologetic air, who answers meekly to the name of Bernard Lande, and weeps when spoken to sharply, is being held by the police as the "master criminal" through whose activities jewelry drummers in Chicago have lost more than $150,000 in samples.

Lande was arrested by Pinkerton men last Friday when he stepped from a train which had carried him from New York to Chicago. The detectives searching him found $7,000 in big bills sewed in the lining of his coat.

Since then, cross examined by E. J. Weiss and Joseph H. Schumacher, assistant superintendents of the Pinkerton National Detective agency, and by Capt. John J. Halpin of the Chicago detective bureau, Lande, the police say, has admitted the $7,000 was part of $13,000 paid to him by a New York wholesale jeweler.

Says Society Women Got Jewels.

Lande, according to the police, not only has asserted that the wholesale house bought the stolen samples—$130,000 worth of them—knowing how he had obtained them, but said the purchasers told him the names of New York society women to whom they had been passed on.

Seventeen hundred dollars more of the $13,000 was recovered from a woman relative of Lande's.

Lande, who is 31 years old, lives at 3861 Grenshaw street, and told the police he was a railroad cook by trade, confessed to six sample case robberies. Among his victims were C. A. Holbrook of New York City, Charles H. Anderson of Philadelphia, and W. J. Anton of Newark, N. J. Holbrook, employed by Sloan & Co., lost sample cases containing gems valued at $36,000 on Feb. 7, 1912, while displaying another line of goods to the buyer for Spaulding & Co., 338 South Michigan avenue.

Loses Gems Worth $25,000.

Anderson, while similarly engaged in Peacock's jewelry store in State street, let his eyes wander for a minute from his sample cases, in which were gems worth $25,000. When he looked again the sample cases had vanished. Anderson was employed by the W. W. Fulmer Jewelry company. The date of this robbery was Aug. 27, 1913.

Anton, representing the Durand Jewelry company, lost $75,000 worth of samples the same way last April.

Lande has been identified by Miss Madge Merrick, a saleswoman employed in the Peacock store, as the man who carried Anderson's sample cases away.

According to the police version of his confession, Lande has admitted that he laid careful plans before he embarked on his career as a gem thief. First he got a job as a sample carrier. Opportunities for petty thievery were thrown in his way, but he recognized them as traps and played "straight." At the end of six months he had built up a reputation as an absolutely honest man.

Learns Salesmen's Habits.

Out of his experience he acquired something more than mere reputation. He learned the names and studied the habits of many jewelry salesmen, and evolved a most simple system for possessing himself of their samples.

The samples, he knew, began to lose their value in the eyes of the drummers, after the men who carried them had been on the road several years, and sometimes not even the slightest precautions were taken to protect them.

When he was ready to try out his scheme, Lande walked into a jewelry shop in which one of the marked drummers had left his samples and picked up the case. He would then walk from the store with the bagful of gems—and the police had a mystery.

It was the same scheme, Lande said which had been successful in almost all his thefts.

After the Anton robbery the Pinkertons got a clew which led them to Lande. They watched him for several months, "covered" him on his last trip to New York, and took him into custody on his return.

While shaping action against the alleged fence in New York the police are holding Lande incommunicado.

COPS SURPRISE HOLDUP MEN

Come Upon Four of Them Robbing a Saloon and Two Are Captured.

Lieutenant Patrick Hogan and Detective Dan Cahill were strolling through West Fulton street last night, when they heard a bit of a row in Joseph De Mar's saloon, at 1133.

Inside they found four holdup men battling with Leo Fay, bartender. Two men fled, with the $100 the cash register had contained, as the officers entered.

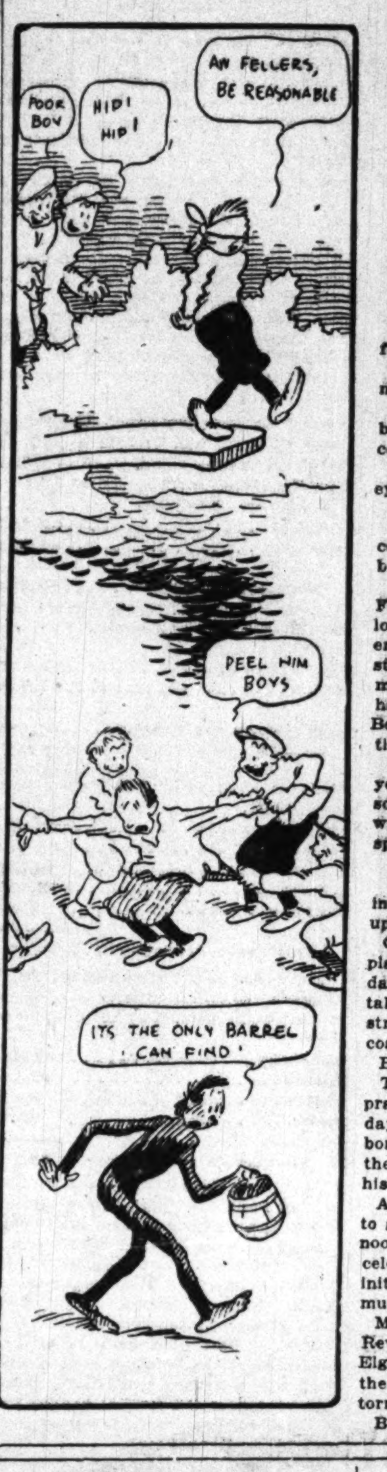
The two men busy strangling Fay were captured and taken to Desplaines street station.

HAS GOOD TIME AND THEN —

Boy Steps on Rusty Pitchfork at Country Outing and Dies of Tetanus.

John Martin, 12 years old, living in the rear at 835 Sedgwick street, was one of a party of poor children who enjoyed a "fresh air" outing at Lone Tree, Ia. He returned to Chicago in time to start to school last Tuesday. He told his friends what a fine time he had in Iowa—he even stepped on a pitchfork and punctured one foot. Then he became ill Thursday and died yesterday of tetanus.

He Once Had Pretty Temperamental Hair Where He Now Has Only a Solid Spot!



Thrilling Story of Adventures of School Youths With Hazers.

Frederick Thompson is a preacher's son.
He is a rather good little boy.
He always has been home at meal time.
His face and hands are never dirty.
He minds his mother and is polite to his father.
He has never played hookey and never missed a music lesson.
Both as a preacher's son and as a small boy he has been extraordinarily and unconventionally well behaved.
The town boys at Geneva have had their eyes on Frederick for a long time.

This summer Frederick, having become considerable of a violinist, was by way of being a local artistic institution.

It has become quite the thing to have Frederick, pale and interesting with his long, black curly hair about his shoulders, softly playing a few sheets of Liszt, standing the while on the tiger skin rug midway between the genuine imported hand carven vase from China and the Boston fern at Geneva afternoon functions of the noble upper classes.

So this being 13 year old Frederick's year of matriculation at the Geneva high school it might be expected that there were things on the cards for him, so to speak.

Boys of the second year class, imitating their big brothers in college, took it upon themselves to haze the "freshies." One boy was permitted to walk the plank, pirate style, into the Fox river's darkest, deepest hole. Another was taken out behind the school house and stripped of his clothes, then carefully coated with grease and lampblack.

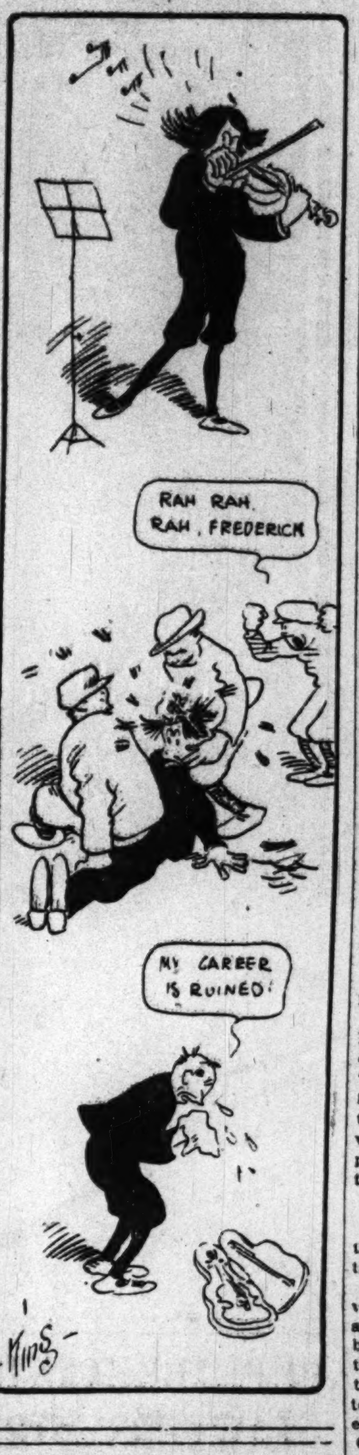
But a worse fate waited Frederick.

The boy violinist was on his way to prayer meeting with his mother Wednesday night, when the young "ruffians" bore him away. Out in the stilly night they sat upon his head and feet while his raven locks were sheared.

A barber has shaved Frederick's head to give his hair an even start. All afternoon tea engagements have been canceled, and "Fritz," as he was dubbed per initiation, is set back a full year in his musical career.

Meanwhile the displeased father, the Rev. E. L. Thompson, pastor of the South Elgin Methodist church, has appealed to the board of education and the state's attorney.

But the boys—they ain't mad at nobody!



DOCTOR ROBBED, HE TELLS POLICE

Says Two Desperate Men with Blue Steel Revolvers Bound Him.

SHOWS CORD THEY USED

"I've been robbed by two armed men who bound me to a chair in my office with a rope and gagged me with a towel."

This message came over the wire to police headquarters from Dr. Harry J. Dwyer of 1574 Milwaukee avenue. The doctor was advised to communicate with the nearest police station, Rawson street.

"You've Been Robbed?"

The detectives saw the sign, "Office hours, 7 to 9 p. m." The office door was shut. They went away and returned at 7. Dr. Dwyer was seated at his desk calmly fingering a scrap of paper.

"We are police officers," announced the detectives. "You've been robbed?"

"Yes,' read that," responded the doctor, handing them the scrap of paper.

The detectives read the following inscription:

"Don't speak—don't make any noise, if you value your life. If you value your life more than your money go ahead and holler."

The Mysterious Doctor.

The doctor spoke with an air of mystery. This was evidently a deep and dark case.

"Dr. Wieland and I generally lunch together, but today we didn't," said Dr. Dwyer. "When I returned there were two men, apparently about 25 years old, in my reception room. They asked for Dr. Wieland, and when I told them he was not in they left. Presently they returned and pushed this note in my hand. When I turned I looked into the muzzles of two blue steel revolvers. When I started to speak one of them said, 'Shut up.' The other man said nothing. I think he was deaf and dumb. Then the first man told me to close my eyes. I did.

"When I opened them one of the men was tying me to the chair with a rope and the other was stuffing a towel gag in my mouth."

"Where is the rope?" asked the detectives.

Heavy Cotton Cord.

"There," replied the doctor, pointing to the floor. The policemen saw several pieces of heavy cotton cord, such as is used in tying up bundles.

"They took my watch and chain, a ring and some money," continued the physician. "The whole lot was worth about $60. Then they pulled down the office shades and left. It only took me about two minutes to free myself, and then I went down into the drug store and told them about it. Then I called up the police."

The detectives were unable to find any one who had seen the men enter or leave the building, and Dr. Wieland said he could not imagine who the robbers were from the meager description given by Dr. Dwyer. But there was the mysterious note, the pieces of telltale cord and the towel, and with these as the only clews the detectives set forth to solve the daring daylight burglary.

BOY POLICEMAN OF 50 ANGERS YOUTH OF 85 BY ARREST.

Grandpa Kerr Walks to Jackson Park Links, Then Held as if an Irresponsible Old Man.

Grandpa Kerr is 85 years old, only he won't admit it. If you press him hard he'll confess that he's "somewhere between 50 and 60"—and maybe he'll invite you to play marbles with him.

Grandpa just got so gosh blamed tired of being called an old man that he started out yesterday to show the young folks a thing or two. So he walked from his home at 738 East Forty-sixth street to the golf links at Jackson park.

When he got on the putting green he remembered he had forgotten to bring his golf clubs. And nobody would lend him even so much as a mashie or a niblick. After a while a young man of 40 or 50 called a young policeman of 50 or 60, who led the ancient golfer to the Woodlawn police station. And here another indignity was heaped upon him. They called up his relatives and requested them to come and get him.

And his niece, Marguerite, "blessed his heart" when she found him, and took him by the arm as they went out.

The police estimated the value of the stolen machines at $20,000.

MRS. BAGLEY GETS DIVORCE.

Wife of Ticket Broker Says Husband Attacked Her When They Were on Ocean.

Mrs. Aletta B. Bagley was granted a decree of divorce from Robert A. Bagley, a ticket broker, yesterday by Circuit Court Judge John Gibbons. Mrs. Bagley testified that on various occasions while on the ocean with her husband he attacked her and that she was forced to call upon the officers of the vessel to protect her. The decree will provide that Mrs. Bagley is to receive $2,000 in lieu of alimony together with the family furniture, valued at about $3,000.

BOY HIT BY STRAY BULLET.

Injured as He Passes Pool Hall—Four Negroes Are Taken Into Custody.

Herbert Brekke, 6 years old, was struck in the right ankle by a bullet last night as he passed a poolroom at 2435 West Lake street. The boy was attended by Dr. Anthony Wilson of 2464 West Lake street and taken to his home at 2742 North Campbell avenue. Four negroes arrested denied knowledge of the shooting.

ROOSEVELT PLEA ACCUSES BARNES

Argument Made in Regard to Change of Venue in Libel Case.

BARES ALLEGED PLOT.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—Asserting that he could not get a fair trial in Albany county because of the political control of William Barnes, Republican state chairman, William H. Benschoten, attorney for Theodore Roosevelt, argued before Justice Chester here today for a change of venue of the trial of the libel suit brought by Mr. Barnes against the ex-president.

In support of his contention Mr. Benschoten read parts of Roosevelt's 190 page answer to the complaint. It goes way back to 1898, when, the colonel charges, there was an alliance between Mr. Barnes and Thomas C. Platt, representing the Republican organization and big business interests.

Barnes' Lawyer Assails Colonel.

"If all these things are true," said William M. Ivins, Mr. Barnes' attorney, after listening to the reading of the answer, "then this defendant himself was nothing short of a criminal, for knowing these things he, as president, appointed Mr. Barnes collector of the port of Albany in 1903 and reappointed him later."

A large part of the answer is based upon findings of the Bayne senatorial committee in its investigation into conditions in the city of Albany in 1911.

"This defendant," said Mr. Ivins, "charges a corrupt alliance between Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy and then performs the remarkable intellectual acrobatic feat of endeavoring to prove it through the introduction of the report of one of Mr. Murphy's committees, accepted by the senate only after direct telephonic communication with Mr. Murphy and aimed at the destruction of Mr. Barnes for the benefit of Mr. McCabe and Gov. Glynn."

Says Machine Controls Jury.

The Roosevelt attorney in asking that the trial be taken out of Albany county attacked Albany's jury system, which he intimated was under the control of the Barnes machine.

"Mr. Roosevelt," said Mr. Ivins, "is known here as a former resident of Albany, as a former governor of the state, and as a former president of the United States, and if he cannot get a fair trial here it is because of his own acts and doings."

Mr. Ivins produced the affidavits of many prominent Albanians, both Republicans and Democrats, including Bishop Burke, head of the Albany diocese of the Catholic church, who swore that a fair trial could be secured in Albany county.

The Roosevelt answer states that when he was governor in 1898 Mr. Barnes and Mr. Platt urged him to veto the special franchise tax bill on the ground that it would antagonize powerful financial interests. Mr. Barnes told him, the ex-president says in his answer, that two Albanians, one a Republican and other a Democrat, would be hurt through their holdings of street railway franchises, and that they would cease to contribute to the Republican campaign fund.

MILITARISM IN DEATHTHROES, BRYAN HOLDS

"Flag of Free" Has Had Its Echo in Europe, He Asserts.

SPEAKS AT BALTIMORE

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 12.—Coming as the personal representative of President Wilson, who found himself unable to attend, Secretary Bryan spoke here today at the "Star Spangled Banner" celebration.

The subject of the address was "The Flag," and Mr. Bryan said that he found his text in the line with which the poet closed each stanza of the national anthem—"O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Referring to the development of American ideals, the secretary said the constitution of the United States had become a pattern copied by other nations and now was to be seen everywhere the waning of monarchical authority and hereditary power.

Americans never had hesitated, Mr. Bryan said, to die if necessary in defense of the authority for which the flag stood. "But the war era has ended in the United States," he added, "and is drawing toward its close in foreign lands; the convulsions through which Europe is now passing are but the death throes of militarism."

Real Freedom Born in U. S.

Referring to the struggle for freedom througnout the world and througnout the ages, Mr. Bryan said:

"Long before Columbus began his voyage in search of the northwest passage substantial progress had been made, but it was reserved for our forefathers to lay upon the soil of a new continent the foundation of institutions dedicated to the doctrine that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with inalienable rights; that governments are instituted among men to secure these rights and derive their just powers from the consent of the people.

"It was a bold—it seemed even almost a rash—undertaking, but the enterprise has succeeded beyond the dreams of the pioneers.

New Vent for Bravery.

"We are entering upon a new age in which freedom will be given new interpretations and bravery find new forms of expression. The doctrine of the divine right of kings has been discarded to no purpose if the divine right of man does not lead to man's elevation. He has become his own master, not that he may be brutish or brutal but that he may be free to develop the best that is in him and to aspire to all the heights that the Heavenly Father has put within his reach. And no matter how high he rises or upon how lofty a plane he plans his life, the flag will still wave above him.

"Let no one think that the texture of our manhood will be of a lower quality when its strength is no longer tested by the stress of war. We could not worship God as we do if we were convinced that each generation must be exercised in blood-letting in order to prevent stagnation.

"There is as much inspiration in a noble as in a heroic death.

America Heir of Ages.

"Let us address ourselves, then, to the unfinished work which preceding generations have bequeathed to us, determined to be worthy of the inheritance which we enjoy. Our nation is the heir of the ages—all the garnered riches of past experience is ours—we will be false to every obligation if we falter or fall short in the performance of the duties that descend to us.

"Hail! flag of the free and the brave—priceless legacy from the fathers, baptized in their precious blood—be our country's ensign still, and more. As the world is drawn closer together in the bonds of a universal brotherhood may thy colors stimulate the struggling, hoping hosts of man to the impulses that are noblest, to the service that is largest, and to the achievements that are most enduring."

Gov. Dunne in March.

Gov. Dunne of Illinois was one of the visiting state executives taking part in the parade and the ceremonies that followed at Fort McHenry during the day.

"I have come," the governor said, "expressly in order to show the great interest which all of Illinois has taken in the splendid commemoration of the birth of our national anthem.

CALLED FLAG OF PEACE.

That the "Star Spangled Banner" is the flag of peace was the declaration of every speaker last night at the Chicago celebration of the centennial of the composition of the national anthem. The speakers urged that the lessons of peace which they said the flag teaches be impressed upon the minds of the rising generation of school children.

"If you want to teach our children reverence for the flag and for what it stands teach more United States history in the public schools," said Dr. B. J. Cigrand, one of the principal speakers. Fly the flag from the school masts every day and through the night, too, to teach what it means when we sing 'the flag was still there,' in Key's poem."

John Shoop, assistant superintendent of schools, seconded this suggestion.

A feature of the program was the playing of the fife and drum corps of Grant post, G. A. R. A series of tableaux were presented by the daughters of civil war veterans and talks were made by the Rev. J. P. Brushingham, Col. John T Scanlan, and Mrs. Julia Ellis, who presided at the meeting.

'SUFFRAGE TRUST' DAYS ABOUT OVER, SAYS MRS. TROUT

Group of Conservatives, Long Dominant in Organization, Losing Sway.

TELLS OF HER LONG TRIP

Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout, president of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association, has located the "suffrage trust."

Mrs. Trout believes there is no need for action by the United States government under the Sherman anti-trust act. She believes that the "trust" is dying because the newer suffragist refuses to permit its existence.

The "trust" consists of a group of women, pioneers in suffrage work, who control all positions in suffrage organizations, dictate the policies, and outline the work. According to the Illinois state president, they have a particular aversion to the newer and radical ideas of the women who weren't born suffragists, but who have grown into them.

"Trusts" Breaking Up.

Mrs. Trout visited nine states this summer, giving suffrage lectures from the Chautauqua platform. In practically all of the states, she said, she found the suffrage "trust." In several of the states the "trusts" are commencing to live precarious existences.

"I found that there's a general breaking up and going to pieces of the 'suffrage trust,'" said Mrs. Trout. "There seems to be a feeling in the states I visited against it. The bars of suffrage exclusion are being let down, and all are being allowed to come in and work for the cause. This is helping the movement everywhere, and popularizing suffrage, for we need the conservatism of the past and the enthusiasm of the present to bring the suffrage question to a successful issue."

The states visited by Mrs. Trout were Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, New York, Kentucky, Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa, and Illinois. She spoke to over 100,000 persons and gave addresses in fifty cities.

Task Would be Easy.

"I believe if we could go to every city and village in every state, put the suffrage question in the right way, and form an organization, we would have no trouble in getting suffrage in every state. We would have the people back of us. After that it is simple enough to get the necessary legislation.

"In Kentucky, where they are working for a constitutional amendment, the kindly attitude of the men was particularly noticeable. After I spoke in Frankfort the mayor of the city was converted, and both he and his wife joined the suffrage organization.

"At Winchester nearly one-half of the audience in a crowded tent were men. The next day an editorial in one of the papers said that if the question was put to a vote following the lecture there wouldn't have been twelve votes in the county against it. I meant to write a letter to that man and thank him, but I forgot to get his name.

Old Foes Converted.

"Two confederate soldiers were converted at Cynthiana, and said they would work for the cause. They said they had been opposed to suffrage for years, but that they had been brought to a realization that they did not know what they were opposing. During the summer thousands of men came up and told me the same thing.

"The only place where I found the anti-suffragists in any force was in Coldwater, Mich. The anti-suffrage organization there made a fuss over having a suffrage lecture unless it was counterbalanced by an anti-suffrage lecture, so in this one town in the nine states they had an anti-suffrage lecture. They telegraphed east for a man. He didn't do us a bit of harm. He was a nice talker, but he didn't have any arguments. The anti-suffragists were all charming, and I was invited to the house of one of them.

"Antis" Arguments Weak.

"I found in Nebraska that the anti-suffrage organization there had distributed a large number of pamphlets. I thought if they would distribute enough we suffragists wouldn't have to do any work. The statements they made brought us converts. Some of the Nebraska farmers told me that the pamphlets were an insult to the intelligence of his wife and mother.

"In Missouri the people lived up to their reputation. After the lecture many of them came to me and said, 'Well, I'm shown. I'm going to vote for the bill.'

"In many towns in Illinois the women are not fully awakened to the power of the franchise. There is no wonder about that, of course, as the men are not yet awakened to its possibilities, either. To me, there are unlimited possibilities in the franchise, if used intelligently, by a thoroughly enlightened and aroused community."

FOUR BIG OIL TANKS BURN; BLASTS IMPERIL FIREMEN.

Thousands Watch Fight to Prevent Flames at Division Street and N. W. Tracks from Spreading.

Four huge burning oil tanks, belching fire like four volcanoes, spreading a pall of stifling black smoke for blocks around and sending rivers of flame lapping about the feet of choking firemen, attracted thousands of residents of the north and northwest sides to the vicinity of West Division street and the Chicago and Northwestern tracks last evening.

Hour after hour the firemen worked to protect surrounding buildings from the fire, when they found that efforts to extinguish the blazing oil were futile.

The tanks were in the yards of the Keystone Oil and Manufacturing company at 1000 West Division street. Each held 30,000 gallons of lubricating oils. Sparks from locomotives are believed to have caused the fire.

When the firemen arrived flames were shooting high in the air and their efforts were directed toward preventing the fire from spreading to two large grain elevators a block to the east and to the plant of the Raymond Brothers Impact Pulverizer company half a block in the other direction. Members of engine companies 30 and 40 and truck companies 3 and 34 were compelled to work in relays.

MISS MARY A. SELLERS

CUPID BREAKS UP LAWYERS' FIRM

Joseph M. Connery Invades Women's Partnership for a Bride.

RESULT OF LEGAL SUIT.

There will be two rather important changes in the legal world of Chicago Wednesday.

The firm of Kelley, Sellers & Clark will lose its Sellers and Joseph M. Connery, who has been going it alone with an office at 79 West South Water street, will turn over his practice to and become a partner in the new firm of Connery & Connery.

Part of the importance of the change lies in the fact that a great deal of money is going to change hands. For when Kelley, Sellers & Clark announced themselves ready for business in June, 1913, quite a number of persons made wagers on the proposition that one or another of the partners would withdraw within a couple of years.

Pities Lonely Mr. Connery.

It was a good bet, since Kelley, Sellers, and Clark in private life were Phyllis, Mary, and Kate, and Mary Sellers was known to have expressed sympathy—and to have looked something more than that—in discussing the plight of the lonely Mr. Connery.

But it seemed a good bet on the other side, too; for when Miss Sellers threw in her lot with the world's first all-petticoat law firm she said publicly, right in front of the reporters, that she expected to be too busy looking for clients to do much in the husband hunting line.

At the time she began practice Miss Sellers was fighting for reinstatement in a civil service position in the state banking department, from which she had been removed by State Auditor Brady. Her woman partners helped her in her suit. Things were moving slowly but surely when along came Mr. Connery, flinging himself into the middle of the litigation.

Offers to Win Her Suit.

"I've known you and admired you for seven years—ever since we were in law school together," he said. "Now, Miss Sellers, I'm going to try this suit for you and win it. After that I'll have some more winning to do."

And, presto!—or as close to presto as the slow moving wheels of the law permit—the suit was won. Miss Sellers was reinstated, and the civil service law, which Brady had contended was unconstitutional, was upheld. Miss Sellers, to make her triumph good, returned temporarily to her old job.

And now the invitations are out. Next Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock, they announce, Joseph M. Connery is going to marry Miss Mary Ann Sellers in Holy Name cathedral. The affair is to have a strictly legal flavor.

Miss Phyllis M. Kelley—of the contracted firm of Kelley & Clark—and Miss Susie M. Brown, assistant United States district attorney, will be the bridesmaids.

Members of the Kappa Beta Pi and Phi Delta Delta legal sororities will attend in a body.

The firm, by the way, will be at home after Oct. 15 at 506 Deming place.

POLICE STUDENTS ON DUTY.

Sixteen Probationary Patrolmen Assigned to Stations by Chief Gleason.

In a general order issued by Chief of Police Gleason yesterday sixteen probationary policemen, who have been in the police school of instruction for a month, were assigned to regular police duty.

BALLOT BOARD WIDENS INQUIRY

Clerks, Judges, Watchers, and Challengers to Be Summoned.

HEARS MANY CHARGES.

Judges and clerks of election and the watchers and challengers hired by candidates will be summoned before the election board beginning tomorrow, to tell what they know of illegal acts at polling places during the recent primaries throughout Chicago. An attaché of the state's attorney's office will attend the hearings to obtain information on which to base investigations and prosecutions of tamperers with the ballot.

Commissioner Anthony Czarnecki said last night that charges of fraud continued to reach the offices of the commission by telephone, by letter, and by personal reports until closing time. Wherever credible evidence was offered investigations will be pushed.

Policeman Tells Story.

Thomas Griffin of 4710 Western avenue, a patrolman from the Maxwell street police station, appeared before the board. Griffin was detailed at the polling place in the Nineteenth precinct of the Fourth ward on primary election day. He said about 3 o'clock on Thursday morning he went to his station with some of the returns. When he returned to the polling place he saw one of the judges handling some of the ballots as he was entering the door, he said, and after he had stepped inside he saw the judge place some sort of mark on the ballot, but he could not distinguish at the distance where the marks were placed.

"I asked him if he was handling the official ballots," said Griffin. "He said he was."

"'What do you want to be marking them for?' I asked him.

"'You go and tend to your own business,' he said.

Calls Up Station.

"He told me he was the judge there in the polling place and for me not to 'butt in.' Then I went to a telephone and called my station. They sent for the election commissioners and I was there when you arrived, Mr. Czarnecki, and I pointed out to you the man whom I saw marking the ballots. I do not know his name."

Commissioner Czarnecki said he did not care to give out the man's name now.

An erasure on a tally sheet in the Eleventh precinct of the First ward caused a brief argument when Adolph Marks, attorney for Francis Brady, Democratic candidate for ward committeeman, objected to the vote of twelve credited to Brady. He insisted nineteen was the correct count and threatened to demand an inquiry.

Two Fraud Charges.

Two charges of "short penciling" ballots were received by the election commissioners from the Nineteenth and Eleventh wards. The charges will be heard as soon as the present hearing of fraud in the Thirtieth precinct of the Thirty-fourth ward is completed. The policeman detailed in the precinct will be asked to describe the man known as "Buck" Lake who is alleged to have marked ballots for sanitary trustees on the Democratic ticket.

Charges also have been filed by the commissioners against judges and clerks in the Fourth and Fifth wards. Improper counting of the ballots is charged in these wards.

SULLIVAN LEAD CUT DOWNSTATE

Loses Counties to Stringer, Making Majority Less than 40,000.

SHERMAN 75,000 AHEAD.

Roger C. Sullivan lost the downstate counties to Lawrence B. Stringer in the Democratic senatorial contest by a margin of about 15,000 votes. Mr. Sullivan's final plurality in the entire state, including Cook county, will be between 35,000 and 40,000.

Lawrence Y. Sherman's net plurality over William E. Mason will be larger than 75,000. His downstate lead over Mason will be larger than 60,000.

Reports to THE TRIBUNE from its downstate correspondents last night indicated the foregoing situation, as a result of the completion of the official count in many of the counties outside of Cook and closer estimates on the results than were obtainable immediately after the polls had closed.

Report on Seventy-seven Counties.

THE TRIBUNE had reports from 77 of the 101 downstate counties, 20 of which were the official returns. These 77 counties gave the following:

Stringer	59,387
Sullivan	45,855
Stringer's plurality	13,532

Sherman	71,837
Mason	24,248
Sherman's plurality	57,089

Including Cook county seventy-eight counties of the state gave the following totals, as reported by THE TRIBUNE correspondents:

Sullivan	128,281
Stringer	91,966
Woods	19,098
O'Hara	13,732
Traynor	5,890
Sullivan's plurality	36,315

Here Are Republican Returns.

Sherman	109,340
Mason	42,140
Childs	8,420
Stein	8,959
Sherman's plurality	67,200

The twenty-four counties not included in the foregoing total, either on estimates or by official figures, are Bureau, Carroll, De Kalb, Edwards, Ford, Greene, Hardin, Henderson, Iroquois, Jo Daviess, Lake, Lee, Marshall, Mason, Massac, McHenry, Menard, Moultrie, Ogle, Piatt, Pike, Putnam, Randolph, and Scott.

W. C. Clifford now seems to have the assurance of the Democratic nomination for state treasurer, while the incoming figures make it definite that Andrew Russel has been nominated for state treasurer by the Republicans.

Woman Wins Race.

Miss Caroline Grote has carried enough of a vote in the downstate counties to offset her slump in Cook county and is believed to have been made the Democratic nominee for state superintendent of public instruction. Francis G. Blair has been renominated for the same office by the Republicans by a sweeping plurality.

All that can be definitely ascertained regarding the badly muddled fight for the two nominations for congressmen at large on the two tickets is that Congressman W. E. Williams has been nominated beyond doubt by the Democrats and B. M. Chiperfield easily has led the Republican field. With many counties still unreported, the indications are that J. McCan Davis has been nominated as Mr. Chiperfield's running mate. The second place on the Democratic ticket is far from determined, and the official canvass at Springfield probably will have to determine the result eventually.

The only change in the makeup of the congressional nominations as published on Thursday seems to be that Congressman C. H. Borchers, in the Nineteenth district, has been renominated by the Democrats by a narrow plurality over W. H. Whittaker, whose nomination was claimed on the early returns.

HELD AS FORGER OF CHECKS.

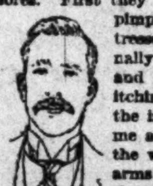
John Chicocki of 1923 Seventeenth street was booked at the detective bureau yesterday on three charges of forgery and a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses with checks stolen from the Kral Coal company.



KEPT AWAKE WITH ITCHING PIMPLES

Got Larger, Festered and Came to Head. Body, Arms and Hands Entirely Covered. Impossible to Work. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In Three Weeks Well.

Valeene, Ind.—"Almost a year ago my face and neck were entirely covered with sores. First they broke out in small red pimples which itched and distressed me very much. Finally they got larger, festered and came to a head. The itching was so intense and the irritation so bad it kept me awake sometimes during the whole night. My body, arms and hands broke out in the same way. They were entirely covered. I could scarcely bear to lie down. My condition at that time was a pitiful one. At last I gave up my position for it was impossible to work.

"I tried many different prescriptions, getting scarcely any relief and no benefit in the way of healing. A friend advised me to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment which I did. The first application gave more relief than anything, which convinced me I had found the right remedy. They began to heal and the irritation stopped. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three weeks I was well." (Signed) Frederic Wells, May 12, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail

A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

ROOSEVELT TO TOUR STATE

Colonel Will Sweep Across Illinois for Robins.

HE BEGINS AT GALESBURG.

Progressive Leaders Will Join Big Moose on Special Train.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt will sweep across Illinois next week in opening the Progressive party campaign in behalf of Raymond Robins, the Moose candidate for United States senator.

He will fire the opening gun at Galesburg, Knox county, Thursday, Sept. 24, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. From Galesburg he will go direct to Springfield for the night meeting, speaking briefly at intermediate points.

Sept. 24 is Progressive day at the state fair, and the party chiefs plan to make the Roosevelt meeting a record breaker. It will be held in the state arsenal, into which can be crowded between 15,000 and 20,000 persons.

Big Meeting at Marion.

Marion, Williamson county, will be the colonel's first important stop the following day, Sept. 25. He will speak there at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and proceed to East St. Louis for the night meeting.

Col. Roosevelt and party will travel on a special train, coming direct from Des Moines, Ia., for the first meeting at Galesburg.

He has promised to return to Illinois later in the campaign about two weeks before the election, and deliver at least one big speech in Chicago and possibly more.

Raymond Robins, Medill McCormick, and other Illinois Moose chiefs will join the Roosevelt party at Galesburg and accompany him on his whirlwind dash over the western and central sections of the state, crossing ten counties in the two days.

Circus Tent Will Be Used.

A big meeting is anticipated at Marion, in the heart of the southern Illinois coal mining district. A circus tent has been secured into which at least 10,000 persons can be crowded.

The selection of Marion for one of the principal meetings was to make a direct appeal to the coal miners of Illinois to support Mr. Robins, who once, in the "leaner" years, was a worker down under the earth himself, swinging a pick in the coal veins.

Col. Roosevelt has been the idol of the coal miners since he settled the Pennsylvania strike when he was president. Moose party chiefs look for a big coal miners' vote for Robins, and for this reason they have planned to make the Marion gathering the most important of the series.

BURNS SULPHUR FOR MOTHS; DRIVES OUT FLAT TENANTS.

Police Breaks Open H. C. Kelly's Bachelor Apartments and Explode Gas Suicide Theory.

Tenants of the twelve flat building at 740 East Fifty-second street informed the police yesterday that gas was filling the structure and that they "believed some one had committed suicide."

When policemen reached the place they found all the doors and windows of the bachelor apartments of Haven C. Kelly, on the first floor, closed and locked. They broke a window and crawled inside. Fumes nearly overcame them, but they quickly aired the place. They found a mixture of sulphur and potash burning on tin plates in most of the rooms. No one was at home.

When Kelly returned later he said he had taken his household goods out of storage recently and that he had burned the potash and sulphur to kill moths.

Sulzer's Bran Bread

UNFERMENTED

An extra quantity of clear bran is added to whole wheat flour—which flour Sulzer grinds each day from hard winter wheat of his own selection.

From this mixture Sulzer bakes this wholesome, tasty bread fresh each day.

It has all the food value of ordinary bread plus the bran, which serves to scour the alimentary canal and bring health and strength to the whole body.

You may have tasted other bran breads and found them disagreeable—but 8 years of experimental work have put Sulzer's Bran Bread in a class by itself. It never sours.

A loaf will average at least twelve slices and a couple of slices with the morning and evening meals will serve to keep you in fine physical condition.

PORK BILL 'CUT' CALLED A FRAUD; ATTACK RENEWED

"Allies" Say Proposed Trim Is Meant to Deceive; Leaves All "Trifles" In.

FAVOR EMERGENCY FUND

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—Declaring that reductions in rivers and harbors appropriations agreed to by the senate committee on commerce last night were made only to deceive the public, the opposition senators today resumed their attacks on the bill.

Senator Burton issued a public statement in which he said it was all right to trim the bill to some extent as the committee had done, but that the committee had not struck out any of the vicious items, including the inconsequential North Carolina and Florida creeks. Neither did it strike out any southern projects, while practically all of the large cuts were made in the north.

Drop Big Projects.

The largest amounts were lopped off the Mississippi, Boston harbor, the Delaware and the Chesapeake and Delaware canal. The $10,000,000 project for deepening the Delaware river has been ordered dropped by the committee. The amount authorized this year was $1,000,000.

"The method assumed by the committee," said Senator Burton, "will not save any money in the long run. It merely defers payments. It does not eliminate indefensible projects.

"The authorizations for Boston harbor and Philadelphia are stricken out, but the $4,500,000 improvement of the Cumberland above Nashville, wholly indefensible; the Sacramento and Feather rivers, calling for close to $7,000,000; a reclamation project, the Ouachita, Brazos, Trinity, Red river, and a host of inconsequential creeks along the Atlantic seaboard are left in."

The opposition senators will insist that no bill be passed, but rather an emergency appropriation of $10,000,000 to $12,000,000, the expenditure of which shall be left to the chief of engineers

Frear Favors Plan.

Representative Frear of Wisconsin, who inaugurated the fight on the pork barrel, favors the emergency appropriation. He said today it would avoid the necessity of attempting to decide the exact amount to be shaved from each item; it would do away with political pressure in favor of improper projects, and it would compel army engineers to administer the fund according to the greatest need.

"There is now on hand," said Mr. Frear, "an unexpended balance of $52,000,000, and with $10,000,000 more, or $62,000,000 in all, a great fund will be available for all present purposes. At the same time $42,000,000, or about one-half of the proposed war tax, will be saved."

HEITLER'S CASE GOES OVER.

"Mike the Pike's" Attorney Retracts Statement That Prosecutor Had Assaulted Client.

"Mike the Pike" Heitler, who is charged with having obtained two diamonds valued at $650 from Krengel Bros. at 8 North State street, and pawned them before payment, appeared before Municipal Judge Wade yesterday with two black eyes and a lascerated nose. His attorney had informed the court on Friday that Heitler was unable to appear, as he was suffering from injuries received in an assault made upon him by Assistant State's Attorney Michael F. Sullivan. The latter was in court and glowered at the defendant.

"I guess there must have been a mistake regarding the identity of my client's assailant," volunteered Benjamin Cohen, Heitler's counsel.

"It was a deliberate falsehood," retorted Attorney Sullivan, "and it was used as a subterfuge to obtain a continuance."

Heitler's bonds were forfeited some time ago, but were reinstated later. The hearing was continued again until Tuesday.

PRETTY GIRLS AID A FUND.

New Catholic Church Profits Through Enterprises of Ushers at Field Day Meet.

More than $600 was added to the fund for St. Mary's of the Lake Roman Catholic church by the field day held yesterday at the Federal league park. Chairman Fred J. Ringley advertised that the attraction would be the ball game in the Knights of Columbus championship series, but the thousand who attended seemed to prefer the girls of the parish who acted as ushers and sold programs and cigars.

The field day was one of a series of entertainments planned by the Buena Park Men's club, composed of members of the parish. More than $20,000 of the $150,000 which the new church will cost already has been raised.

Father John Dennison, who will be pastor at the new church, says the structure is among the handsomest in Chicago. In the interior it is a reproduction of one of the smaller Roman churches.

CALLS SHOOTING A MISHAP.

Miss Dora May Thomas of 6206 Dorchester avenue, a trained nurse, who was shot in the left forearm while with Almond B. C. Drummond of 2224 Warren avenue in the Empress hotel at North Clark and West Maple streets on Friday night, told Municipal Judge Sabath yesterday that she was examining the revolver which belonged to Drummond, when it accidentally exploded. She was charged with disorderly conduct and Drummond with carrying concealed weapons. Both were released on bonds and their cases were continued until Sept. 25. Drummond had Miss Thomas taken to the Passavant hospital before the police arrived and gave the name of "H. P. James" when first arrested.

Want a Fish Gown? Look at These!

WHAT! MILADY MERMAID NOW?

"Fish Model" Gown Startles Patrons at Dressmakers' Fall Show.

BAR MILITARY EFFECT.

Gowns with "bat's wing" bows and flounces of silver lace to give the desirable metallic effects demanded by fashion were displayed at the Auditorium hotel yesterday as a preliminary of the showing which is to follow next week at the Chicago Dressmakers' club exhibition.

Prominent society women have assumed great interest in the meetings of the club because of its efforts to Americanize fashions.

Added interest in the exhibition will be addresses by business men of Chicago and a playlet setting forth the fallacy of American women being dependent upon modistes of Paris for their fashion ideas.

Society Women Patronesses.

The exhibition will begin Tuesday morning and continue until Wednesday evening.

Among the patronesses will be:

Mrs. Hobart Chatfield Chatfield-Taylor,	Mrs. George Bass,
Mrs. C. S. Deneen,	Mrs. J. H. Lewis,
Mrs. Frank McMullen,	Mrs. F. D. Everett,
Mrs. A. W. Bryant,	Mrs. Grace W. Trout,
	Mrs. Frank G. Allen.

Mrs. George Clinton Eccles of 5840 Wayne avenue wore one of Mrs. S. S. Feigl's creations. This was a dinner gown of gold brocade over flesh tinted satin. It had fur trimmings. The wing sleeves were of lace with pendants of loose coral beads. The fourteen inch girdle of Prussian blue plush ended with a drapery of coral pendants also. The blouse was a Bertha effect in rose point lace.

Mme. M. J. Hosac of 730 South Michigan avenue startled the women with her "fish" model, worn by Miss Frances Stuart of 835 Crescent place. This was a formal ball gown of changeable sequin garniture over sea green chiffon, with a black velvet train lined with cerise satin. A tulle drapery veiled the costume, which was sleeveless. The armholes were outlined in black jet beads and there was a suggestion of tulle peeping beyond this garniture.

Gowns to Be "Neutral."

The decree of the oracles of fashion to be announced during the exhibition, according to Mme. A. Ripley, president of the club, will be to avoid military effects in coming modes in order to display the strict neutrality of the American designer of fashions.

For this reason gold braid will be avoided in all trimming effects, and there will be a tendency toward a return of the old time ultra-American crinoline.

Corn Comes Off as Easy as You Please!

"Gets-It" Being Used by Millions!

It is the first time that a real, sure-as-fate corn cure has ever been discovered. "GETS-IT" is the new corn-ender, based on an entirely new principle. It is a new, different formula, never successfully imitated. It makes corns shrivel and then vanish. Two drops do the work. You don't bundle up your toe any more with sticky tape and plasters that press down on the poor corn—no more flesh-eating salves that don't "stay put," no more hacking at corns with knives or razors, no more bleeding or danger of blood poison. No more limping around for days with sore corns, no more corn pains.

Find the Lady Who Uses the World's Greatest Corn-Cure, "GETS-IT."

"GETS-IT" is now the biggest-selling corn cure in the world. Use it on any hard or soft corn, wart, callous or bunion. Tonight's the night.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25 cents a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

"GETS-IT" is sold in Chicago by Economical Drug Co., The Fair, Siegel, Cooper & Co., Home Drug Co., Ashland Drug Co., W. A. EX-CONSUL GADE WILL 'COME BACK'

Fails to Regain Citizenship in Norway; Returns to Chicago.

HAD POLITICAL FIGHT.

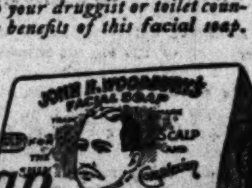
F. Herman Gade, former Norwegian consul in Chicago, who renounced his American citizenship four years ago to enter the Norwegian diplomatic service, is returning with his family to the United States to live. Chicago friends of Mr. Gade yesterday learned he has given up his residence in Norway and started on his return trip to Chicago to resume residence here.

Before leaving Christiania, where he encountered considerable trouble in his diplomatic ambition, he issued a brochure in which he recounted from his standpoint the history of the "Gade case" and paid his respects to Johannes Irgens, former minister of foreign affairs, and others who instigated the fight to prevent him from realizing his ambition.

The fight against him centered primarily on the question of his citizenship. Before resigning his consular office and leaving Chicago for Norway in October, 1910, he had renounced his American citizenship, believing a declaration he had made in the Norwegian foreign office on May 17, 1910, that he intended to become a permanent resident of Norway was sufficient to reacquire his Norwegian citizenship. Officials of the department of justice in Christiania, however, took issue with this view, insisting a two years' residence was required under the terms of the Bancroft treaty with the United States.

In his brochure Mr. Gade accuses Irgens, who us to that time had been his warm personal friend, of bad faith, alleging the then foreign minister of the kingdom, practically "sacrificed" Gade to save himself from political slaughter by refusing to carry his promise into effect and denying he ever made Gade a promise of a position in the service.

The Radical party, whose faith Gade espoused, was swept itno office and with the appointment of a new ministry, with Prime Minister Gunnar Knudsen at the head, Gade's case was disposed of.



The new treatment for tender skins

Many people with tender skins have been misled by the superstition that washing the face with soap and water is bad for the complexion.

Dr. Pusey in his book on the care of the skin says: "The layer of dirt and fat that such persons accumulate on the skin is a poor substitute for a clean, clear skin and is a constant invitation to various disorders."

See what a difference it will make in your skin

Just before retiring, dip a soft washcloth in warm water and hold it to the face. Do this several times. Then make a light warm water lather of Woodbury's and dip your cloth up and down in it till your cloth is "fluffy" with soft, white lather. Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are opened and thoroughly cleaned. Rinse the face lightly with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

Use this treatment persistently for ten days and your skin will show a marked improvement—a promise of that loveliness which the steady use of Woodbury's brings to a tender, sensitive skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap costs 25c a cake. No one hesitates at the price after their first cake.

Do this today—Now!* *Tear out the illustration of the cake below and put it in your purse as a reminder to get Woodbury's. Tear out the cake now. Take it to your druggist or toilet counter today. Begin tonight to get the benefits of this facial soap. For sale by dealers everywhere.

ASTONISHING Invention For the DEAF

It makes absolutely no difference what hearing device you are now using, you positively must use an "Acousticon" to hear clearly. The famous "Acousticon" is the device that transmits sound to the deaf ear in Nature's way—by our famous exclusive, patented "Indirect" principle.

Don't confuse the "Acousticon" with any other device. It is entirely different—a successful, truly scientific instrument—the only electrical hearing device for the deaf that is not merely a cheap, unguaranteed, simple microphone. A few such instruments are made to look something like the "Acousticon" but the "Acousticon's" famous features are protected by patents.

Covers All 48 Degrees of DEAFNESS

This is as many degrees as it has ever been called upon to satisfy and we have fitted over 100,000 deaf persons with the "Acousticon"—three times more than all others combined. In all our years of experience we have unquestionably met with every known kind of deafness. It makes no difference to the "Acousticon" what caused your deafness.

No matter how deaf you are, unless born deaf or "stone" deaf, this wonderful device will enable you to hear distinctly. Remember that the "Acousticon" is the device that regulates to suit your individual needs—that magnifies sound 400 per cent.

Remember that the "Acousticon" is the device legally guaranteed to protect you against loss.

We prove every claim by our 10 DAYS'

FREE TRIAL

NO DEPOSIT No other device makes a no deposit free trial offer. You don't pay us a cent in advance—you take no risk. We let you use an "Acousticon" 10 days to prove that no other device equals it—to prove you cannot hear clearly or properly without it.

EASY TERMS

Don't let lack of money worry you—our liberal payment plan makes it easy for anyone to own an "Acousticon."

CALL or WRITE

Don't delay trying an "Acousticon." Remember deafness grows worse if neglected. If you live here, call at our local office for free demonstration and proof. If you live out of town and cannot call, write now for free trial offer and proof from Ministers, Judges and others.

COMMITTEE TO REGULATE NOTES BASED ON COTTON.

Congressmen from South Will Launch Movement to Have Government Take Over Crop Surplus.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—A committee of twenty-one representatives in congress fom the cotton states and from the National Farmers' union will be created here on Monday to launch a movement for advancing $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 in United States notes on the surplus cotton crop of 6,000,000 or 7,000,000 of bales.

About thirty congressmen and several members of farmers' organizations have authorised Representative Henry of Texas to select the committee.

"This committee," said Mr. Henry today, "will present the situation to the secretary of the treasury, the federal reserve board and to President Wilson. The fight is to take over the surplus cotton crop so that it may be held by the federal government, through these loans."

HIGH LIVING AND HIGH PRICES.

Frederick S. Dickson in "High Prices and High Living" in the current Yale Review shows the background needed for a consideration of foodstuffs and prices. He carries his study of cost back to 1627 and finds an almost uniform decrease since that time.

Our forbears paid more for nearly every article of food than we are paying now. They paid twelve times as much for coffee. Sugar sold in the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries for 10 to 28 cents a pound. "Most necessaries of life are cheaper now than they were forty years ago and most luxuries so low that they are no longer fashionable."

We spend annually $78,000,000 on candy, $25,000,000 on chewing gum, and $320,000,000 for soda water. Queen Elizabeth was reputed to be the first woman to wear silk stockings. Even as late as 1890 this form of hosiery was uncommon in the United States. But today "ladies with modest incomes but shapely ankles insist upon wearing only silk hosiery, paying $2 or more a pair and buying twenty-five or thirty pairs in a year." We have sewing machines in the home, and yet we buy ready made garments and dresses in far greater quantities than they were ever bought by our grandmothers.

The same celebrated grandmothers used brown sugar instead of white, paper spills instead of matches, knitted their mittens and shawls, made their rugs—sometimes clothes for their men folk—pickled pork, smoked hams, and fought high prices with thrift. They had to do so. Incomes were small.

High prices are relative. We make our comparisons with recent years and feel a pinch. If we go back further we find that our forbears could not afford to supply themselves generously with the commodities of our careless use.

We do not think any more kindly of the food speculator for that reason nor urge it as a mitigation of the offense of creating artificial prices. Let the prosecutors take all such offenders and do the worst by them. But our celebrated grandmothers would have marveled at the luxuries in which our fairly well to do folk indulge themselves. Thrift is not our practice.

AMERICA AND THE ARTIST.

One of the significant differences between the American and the continental—German, Frenchman, Scandinavian—is in their attitude toward artistic effort. With us there is something of contempt, at best of good natured belittlement, in our judgment of all activities that are not "practical," and artists are not as a class regarded "seriously" in the American scheme, though we may coddle them sometimes and even overpay them. It is to be suspected, in fact, that the artists who come nearest to winning a place in American public respect comparable to that occupied by artists generally in Europe—namely: opera singers—owe a substantial part of this respect to the high salaries they have wrung from us. There, at least, is a value we can test with native certainty, an achievement comparable to the materialistic triumphs of which we as a nation are chiefly proud.

This attitude toward art and artists is not so discreditable as it may seem. It is not proof of a lack of idealism, or of a want of esthetic sense. It is a natural consequence of our history. The puritanism of the dominant strain in early American life is responsible for a certain fear of beauty, but a more important fact was our enforced preoccupation with the material and political problems of a new country and a new nation. We speak of our "strenuous life," or, as a Frenchman has called it, our "vie intense." It has been a life of manly and vigorous material achievement.

What we have not had occasion to learn is that art, the creation of beauty, is also a form of virile energy; that it is a form of the intensest energy. If we realized that we should respect art more, and when we learn to respect it we shall care to achieve it. Then the creation of beauty will not be looked upon with our present ingenuous provincialism, as a by-product, a game in which only the idle, the youthful, or the subnormal can take any interest. Then it will be understood in America, as it is in Europe, that artistic creation is one of the highest expressions of a race's vigor, one of the most serious of its achievements, and it will be possible for an American of renown without suspicion of mere rhetoric or pose to say with Anatole France: "For my part, if I had to choose between beauty and truth, I would not hesitate; it is beauty I would keep, very certain that it has within itself a truth nobler and more profound than truth itself. I will venture to say that there is nothing true in the world but beauty. It is the highest manifestation of the divine that man is permitted to perceive."

PREPARE NOW.

The best of winters following a season of good crops and undisturbed industrial and commercial conditions finds Chicago with a serious problem of poverty and unemployment on its hands. What may we possibly expect this winter, in spite of good crops, other than an abnormally serious situation?

This city stands like the hub of a wheel in the center of a great field of seasonal activity. In season its unanchored population goes out along the highways which are the spokes of the wheel and for the time being is self-supporting. Fields, railroads, the lake, etc., which need workers for occasions, but not for the year, then close operations and multitudes of men return where they may thrive best on least, which is in a large city.

This normal flux of only semi-independent workers adds to the normal problem in normal years. This winter we can hardly expect to be normal. Our immunity from the distress of Europe will not carry us so far as that.

Distress of abnormal aspects can be avoided only by organization against it in sufficient time. The most efficient general organization, the United Charities, is not in a financial condition which encourages the belief of its supporters that it will be in position to meet the situation.

Organization is needed and organization in time. When the need can be so clearly anticipated it is merely waiting for the attack of distress and to have it find the city unprepared.

We shall have to meet it. Why not prepare now? Plans certainly will have to be made later. Why not make them now? Money will be needed. Make the need known now.

BOMB DROPPING.

Just as Paris, prepared for investment, had steadied its nerves for a continuance of bomb dropping from airships and was beginning to accept it as a spectacle the ships ceased to come. Antwerp has not reported a visit from Zeppelins for a number of days. Has public opinion had anything to do with the abandonment of this method of attack? Germany had reserved an exception to The Hague rules and was not signatory to the clause prohibiting bomb dropping. It could be defended as a justifiable method of attack on fortifications, but public opinion would not have it.

Every bomb dropped upon civilian quarters did little material damage to the enemy and much moral damage to Germany. It is true that the German forces are not so satisfactorily situated now with regard to Antwerp and Paris as they were when the ships made their attacks and Paris, at least, organized an aeroplane defense, but it would be encouraging to believe that public opinion brought about a change in tactics. If it could do so in one instance it may soon have broad general effects. The question is hopeful.

THE GREATEST ACTOR.

An English critic finds that the "greatest actor of our time" is the Russian artist M. Chaliapin. "If we would match him," says this writer, speaking of the Slav singing actor, "we must go back in our theatrical annals as far as Edmund Kean."

A few months ago this praise of a Russian artist would call for no special notice or comment. It is not the first time that Russia has carried off the title of the "world's greatest" for one of her sons. Turgenev is at least one of the greatest of modern novelists. Tolstoi was a world force. Prince Kropotkin was one of the world's greatest revolutionists until about two decades ago. Then science got the best of temperament in his nature and today he ranks among the highest as a constructive evolutionist.

In view, however, of the developments of the last few weeks—the war in Europe with its reverberating hatred of race that has invaded even our country—the conferring of the title of "greatest actor" upon a Russian is a thing to take note of. It is an exhortation to mental and sentimental poise and balance.

Epithets have been hurled in American cities at the Slavs, and Russians in particular, which are unjust. Russia has been labeled uncivilized and even barbarous, whereas what we may call barbarous is not Russia but Russian officialdom, and the officialdom is not of the people's choosing. It is there in spite of the people. With the plains of Siberia drenched with the blood of martyred fighters against autocracy and despotism the cry of barbarous Russia betrays a lack of justice.

Even in times of stress like the present, fairness should not leave us when passing judgment upon nations and races. It is not only justice but common sense to distinguish between peoples and the monarchistic and militaristic despots that, perforce, rule them. To cultivate the habit of condemning races on snap judgment, or snap feeling, is to rouse back to life injustices and persecutions which democracy and rationalism have happily succeeded in uprooting and extinguishing, at least on the shores of the new world.

THE SAVAGERY OF AIRSHIP BOMBARDMENTS.

[From the New York Tribune.]

Belgium's protest against the bombardment of Antwerp by a Zeppelin will excite sympathy everywhere, since Belgium was one of the powers which signed The Hague conference declaration of Oct. 18, 1907, prohibiting the discharge of projectiles and explosives from airships. Such methods of attack flagrantly increase the horrors of warfare and undo to a large extent the progress made in the last century toward a humaner consideration of the rights of noncombatants.

Neither Germany nor France signed the declaration of 1907 regarding aerial warfare, and neither of these countries holds itself bound by it. Belgium may not be able, therefore, to make out a direct case of treaty violation against Germany. The only international compact which holds Germany is article 27 of the rules of land warfare adopted by The Hague conference on Oct. 18, 1907. This says:

"In sieges and bombardments all necessary steps must be taken to spare, as far as possible, buildings dedicated to religion, art, science or charitable purposes, historic monuments, hospitals and places where the sick and wounded are collected, provided they are not being used at the time for military purposes."

It is evident that an airship operating at night at a considerable distance above a city cannot discern the marks which should give protection to such buildings. It is also evident that in a hurried night flight over a city "all necessary precautions" cannot be taken to spare the buildings which ought to be spared.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

[Copyright: 1914: By the Brentwood Company.]

ADMIRAL ANDREW DU PLESSIS DE RICHELIEU, who is about to revisit these shores in connection with business of the Danish transatlantic lines with which he is identified, is, in spite of his name, no relation of the Duc de Richelieu, who married Miss Eleanor Douglas Wise of Washington, D. C.

The admiral is a man, not of illustrious French ancestry, but of bourgeois German origin, and is descended from John Daniel Richel, a clockmaker of Coblenz.

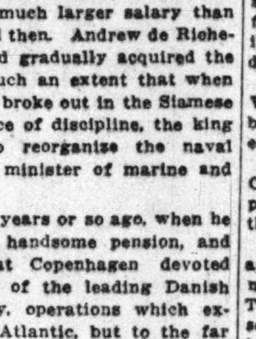
Driven by bad business to emigrate, the clockmaker found his way to Copenhagen, where his fortunes prospered, and where his son, after entering the Danish army, made by degrees his way up to the rank of colonel. Although he enlisted as "Richel," by the time he had attained the commissioned ranks he had Gallicised his name into "de Richelieu."

Among his descendants, right down to the admiral, there is no record of any French alliance. In fact, all the admiral's forbears are either Danes or Germans, and the armorial bearings granted to Col. de Richelieu early in the eighteenth century and which are borne by the admiral today have not the slightest resemblance to those of the famous Cardinal de Richelieu, nor to those of the French ducal house of de Richelieu.

The admiral's father was a Protestant divine who, born in 1821, accepted a pastorate in the Danish Antilles, where he married, lived, and died. He bore the name of Louis Armand, Emmanuel Septimanius de Plessis de Richelieu, and figured as such on the roster of the Danish Protestant clergy. His fourth son, Andrew du Plessis de Richelieu, was born in the Antilles in 1852, adopted the sea as a profession, and became a skipper in the Danish marine service. Like most other Danish sailing masters, he was made an officer of the Royal Naval Reserve of Denmark.

On one occasion when the merchant ship he was commanding lay at anchor at Bangkok he made the acquaintance of the late king of Siam, who took a fancy to him and invited him to take the command of his steam yacht at a much larger salary than he had been receiving until then. Andrew de Richelieu accepted the post, and gradually acquired the monarch's confidence to such an extent that when some years later a mutiny broke out in the Siamese navy, owing to the absence of discipline, the king appointed de Richelieu to reorganize the naval service, with the title of minister of marine and the rank of admiral.

This he held until eight years or so ago, when he resigned, in receipt of a handsome pension, and taking up his residence at Copenhagen devoted himself to the operations of the leading Danish steam navigation company, operations which extend not only across the Atlantic, but to the far orient. It was in connection with this company that he visited the United States and Canada in 1908.



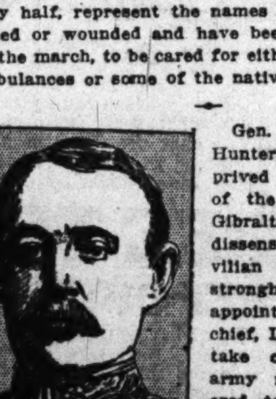
The war has brought about an enormous development of a form of literature about which th ordinary civilian know little or nothing. It i in the form of handbill asking for informatio concerning dead an missing soldiers. Th circulars are issued b relatives of the dead c missing soldier or off cer, requesting detail concerning his fate, an if dead regarding h' last moments. The idea of the relatives is that some of these circulars are bound to fall into the hands of comrades of the dead or missing man, who may be able to furnish the required data.

I have seen a number of these circulars occasioned by previous campaigns. In three, concerning the fate of those who fell in the disastrous fight on Majuba hill, in South Africa, more than a generation ago, one of the questions asked is as to whether the man to whom it related had been laid low by a Boer bullet, or had shot himself rather than surrender.

This recalls the persistent rumor, never substantiated, according to which Gen. Sir Pomeroy Colley, who was in command on that disastrous day, blew his brains out when he saw that everything was lost, unwilling to be taken alive.

Other circulars which I have seen related to men killed in the early engagements of the last war in South Africa, which was of a protracted nature, and the circulars in several instances subsequently followed the regiments of the dead men to the most remote portions of India in the quest for information. In one case a slender and delicate looking middle aged woman bore her circulars of inquiry into the heart of Burmah in search of information concerning her only boy, who had been reported as missing at the outset of the Boer war.

It will be noticed that in the list of casualties issued by the war department in London the figures regarding the dead and wounded are comparatively insignificant compared to the numbers of those reported missing. Some of these missing men are probably in captivity, but many of the others, probably half, represent the names of those who are killed or wounded and have been left somewhere on the march, to be cared for either by the enemy's ambulances or some of the natives of the district.



Gen. Sir Archibald Hunter, who was deprived a year or so ago of the governorship of Gibraltar owing to his dissensions with the civilian element of that stronghold, has just been appointed by his old chief, Lord Kitchener, to take command of the army now being gathered together on Salisbury Plain for early dispatch to France.

There is no better soldier than Hunter. His fighting record in the Soudan and in South Africa was of the very best. But he is not adapted for administrative work as governor, which requires a certain degree of civilian training.

He was a major general before 40, and did so well in South Africa that when Kitchener became generalissimo in India, Hunter received the command of the southern army of that great dependency.

He married a few years ago the widow of that second Lord Inverclyde, who succeeded his father in the presidency of the Cunard Steamship company; and Lord Kitchener officiated as best man at his wedding.

FEET OF CHILDREN.

SCHOOLS open this week throughout a good portion of the United States. Parents, teachers, and children are thinking about school today. No public movement has grown more rapidly during the last ten years than the inspection of school children. Although an organized group has opposed this work, the plain common sense of the people has led them aright, and school inspection has developed with but little hindrance.

In some places the system is elaborated. There are nurses, dentists, physicians, and clinics. At the other end of the line is the simple method of Hoag, where the teacher, the pupil, and the parent fill out blanks and answer questions, and there is almost no machinery.

In some places the inspection is merely to exclude contagion. In other places to the inspection for contagion is added inspection for minor communicable ailments. In others there is also physical examination, in others dental examination, and in still others the pupils have the advantage of help from nurses.

The general subject of school inspection is not in need of boosting from me Therefore this article is devoted to a division of the subject—the care of the feet of school children.

We sow in childhood by wearing tight shoes; we reap painful feet in adult life. It does little good to talk to the butterfly about the oncoming winter. It has done little good to talk to verdant youth about tight shoes. But then the warning "Boil the water" does little good.

The difference between the old and the new is this: The old appeal was to the individual; this one is to school authorities.

"One million school children in the United States (5 per cent of the total school population) have spinal curvature, flat foot, or some other moderate deformity serious enough to interfere to some degree with health."

This is the opinion of Prof. Thomas D. Wood of Columbia university, given in bulletin No. 24, United States bureau of education.

This estimate, according to Dr. Hills Cole of the New York state health department, is an understatement rather than an overstatement.

Do not understand from this that we are going to the dogs. The percentage is no higher than it was a few years ago There is no prospect that these 1,000,000 school children are doomed to die or even to be seriously sick.

What the statement means is that these 1,000,000 school children are doomed to go through life more or less incapacitated, more or less limited in their earning capacity, and more or less uncomfortable for the remainder of their lives.

The only difference between now and the past is that instead of putting up with the condition, because it was inevitable, we now know that it is not inevitable, that it does not have to be tolerated, and we are investigating with the intention of making things better for the people who are to be doing the work of society for the next thirty years.

There is any amount of evidence that painful feet are a most prevalent disorder. Dr. Osgood says that one manufacturer of arch supporters made the statement under oath that he sold 3,000 pairs of arch supporters each month.

In the German army 10,000 cases a year of painful feet are cared for. In a large German orthopedic hospital one-third of all the cases treated were cases of painful feet.

Ewald examined 500 school children and found one-third of them had painful feet and 60 per cent of them did not carry their weight properly on their feet. Of the girls at Wellesley, 60 per cent stood improperly on their feet. At Smith college Miss Rossiter found that 80 per cent of the girls had serious foot trouble.

Said Dr. Berry of Troy in the New York Medical Journal:

"Any one doubting the frequent occurrence of pronated foot [turning out of the toes] should stand in front of any public school at closing time and observe the feet of the children as they come out."

Some of the tests for bad foot conditions are easy of application. At the front part of the pelvic bones, ordinarily called the hip bones, there is a small, easily located knob, called the anterior spinoris process. It is easy to locate this knob by touch through the clothes.

When a child is standing a tape passed from this knob through the middle of the kneecap should strike the foot between the big toe and the second toe. If this line strikes the foot to the outside of this point, say toward the little toe, the person is pigeon-toed. If it falls to the other side of the big toe, the person is said to toe out, or to have pronated feet, or to be slew-footed.

This latter position is much the worse of the two, for it tends to break down the before-back arch in the foot, to flatten the instep and to cause the inner ankle to be carried lower than the outer.

Dr. Brown carefully examined the feet of 700 children in the Boston schools and reported the results to the International Congress on School Hygiene. Two-thirds of the boys and two-fifths of the girls bore their weight on their feet correctly. One-third of the boys and more than one-half of the girls stood on feet that either toed in or slewed out.

Another easily observed point is the condition of the toes. When the toes are found curled up, it is proof that the arches and the tendons are not what they should be. Generally it means that the arch under the ball from the big toe to the little toe is giving down. Curled toes was one of the points looked for by Dr. Brown and found to be present in 26 per cent of the boys and 34 per cent of the girls.

In old people we expect to find all the toes, except the big toe, rearing up and then curling as they go forward. But school children are not far away from babyhood or barefoot days, and it is surprising to learn that in so large a percentage the anterior arch is flattened and the toes curled.

An easily observed deformity is hallux valgus, or bending of the big toe toward the little toe. Whenever the point of the big toe points toward the little toe, its base points in the opposite direction. It is in this deformity that bunions develop. They develop to protect the ball of the big toe from being rubbed by the side of the shoe.

Dr. Brown found that 13 per cent of these boys and girls, partly as the result of short shoes and partly as the result of improper position in standing, had developed this deformity.

About the easiest of all the methods of judging the feet of children is to observe the way their shoes wear out. Sometimes the heels wear evenly. Sometimes they wear at the front inner corner; sometimes at the back outer corner.

Dr. Brown thinks that wearing of the heel at the front inner corner is proof the feet carry the weight incorrectly.

Another point bearing on the way the weight is carried is the direction of the wear of the counters inside the heel of the shoe.

Corns are not of the same importance as the other points noted. Yet corns can be quite disabling. Corns were found in 56 per cent of the pupils of this series, 49 per cent of the boys and 62 per cent of the girls.

In the primary grades one-third of the pupils had corns; in the grammar grades 57 per cent of the boys and 65 per cent of the girls; in the high school, boys 53 per cent, girls, 85 per cent.

The tendons, nerves, and vessels of the feet are carried in well defined tracks and channels. So long as everything in the foot is just as it should be, these channels protect their contents well.

In some cases of painful feet it is easy for any one to see that the arch has fallen; the foot lies flat.

However, there are cases where the foot is exceedingly painful and no break in the arch can be seen. It does not take much displacement of the bones of the feet to roll a nerve out of its channel and permit of its being pressed on, or to stretch a tendon so that it becomes sore at its point of attachment to the bone. Therefore, when the feet are being examined for broken arch, the examination should include a search for tender points.

The more important of these are: Just below the ankle bone on the inner side of the ankle; an inch in front of the outer ankle bone, where a bony prominence can be felt; the sole of the foot just in front of the heel; the ball of the foot, top, and bottom; the superficial bones.

When there is undue strain on the foot tenderness at some one or more of these points is liable to develop, even though neither arch goes down. Ofttimes the arch flattens without causing a painful foot.

When flat foot or toeing out was found, it meant that the weight was being poorly carried and that, in consequence, some time or other the feet were liable to give out. Tender points on the feet meant that the feet were already giving out. Dr. Brown found 10 per cent of these children with tender points on the feet. The percentage was higher in the upper grades.

Other points so difficult to determine were the relative strength of different groups of muscles and the position of a bony prominence, called the schaphoid tubercle. These are points of importance, and any school teacher or medical inspector wishing to examine with reference to them should read the article by Dr. Brown in volume V., "Transactions of the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene."

Dr. Osgood in his paper answers the question of what is the cause of foot strain. In some of the cases inheritance is a factor. The children of toed-out parents are liable to toe out. Bowlegs, knockknees, and bandy shanks run in families. Some of the German scientists think rickets is responsible for a large percentage of the cases.

A poor muscular development is an important factor in many cases. The flabby muscled children sag everywhere, including the feet. Faulty education is responsible for much of it.

"Bad habits of walking and standing and the admonition of mothers 'to turn your toes out' represent other causes. If I mistake not, boys in military schools are still told to turn their toes out. Finally, short shoes, narrow shoes, tight shoes, wrongly shaped shoes, are largely responsible. I should say that shoe faults are the largest single factor."

In answering the question as to what is to be done about it, the first suggestion of Dr. Osgood is that simple popular instruction be given to mothers, and especially to school children; that in a picture the arrangement of the bones, joints, tendons, and muscles of the feet be shown; the methods by which shoes contribute to corns, broken arches, curled toes, and bunions be demonstrated; finally, that the method of weight carrying by the feet held in different positions be made plain.

The second is that the physical examination of school children include examination of the feet and lower limbs. As a part of this routine when it is found that a pupil is wearing shoes which contribute to his foot trouble the child or his parent should be informed of the mistake and advised as to proper shoes.

The two most essential points in shoes, according to Dr. Osgood, are "roominess for the toes and an axis so parallel that when the heels of the shoes are placed together the inner borders of the soles touch each other from shank to toes."

Whenever there is tendency of the arch to sag, "elevation of the heel of the shoe on the inner side, provided the counter of the shoe is stiff and fits well, will tend to correct the inward sag and restore proper weight bearing lines."

Dr. Osgood thinks many minor defect can be corrected simply by tilting the heels, and he may be right. The scientific horseshoer can do many things by varying his shoes, varying their setting, and changing the calks.

Dr. Hills Cole advocated wearing shoes with a sole wide enough and counters strong enough, and then pitching the feet as desired by thickening the sole on one side or the other. He says:

"It is the bottom of the shoe which controls the position of the foot which rests upon it, just as the foundation of a building governs its stability."

Of course, special shoes are more expensive than stock shoes. But if our horse interferes, do we hesitate to spend a little more on its shoeing that its efficiency may be increased?

Finally, the speakers agreed that students must be taught how to walk and how to stand. Many postural shortcomings are easily remedied if only it be somebody's business to tell the child about it, to show him how to remedy it, and then to remind him of it occasionally.

For foot trouble due to lack of muscular tone the remedy is exercise in the open air.

DISPENSING OF CORPORATION LIABILITIES.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a law in Illinois where a corporation is placed in the hands of a receiver, and whose liabilities exceed over 50 or 100 per cent of the capital stock, that the board of directors individually, or the stockholders individually, are liable for the liabilities, providing the assets do not pay all the liabilities?
J. J. H.

The stockholders are liable individually for the debts of the corporation to the amount of their stock which has not been paid to the corporation.

Where the indebtedness of a corporation exceeds the amount of its capital stock the directors and officers assenting to the indebtedness are liable personally to the creditors for such excess.

HOLD WAGES FIVE DAYS.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have been served with a notice of garnishment, wages due a person in my employ, a widow. Am I compelled to withhold these wages and must I pay the sum demanded, or should I wait until suit is brought? H. J. P.

You must hold any wages due for five days. If no suit is brought in that time you may pay the wages to the woman. If suit is started you should file an answer in court stating the amount of wages which you hold.

The naturalization law provides that an alien must reside in the United States for a period of at least five years continuously immediately preceding the date of filing his petition for naturalization. The question of whether or not a brief absence from the United States on a visit will break the continuity of residence is one for the court to determine at the time of final hearing. Each case must be governed by its own merits.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

THE SLAV INVASION.

Chicago Sept. 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your editorial "Liberty Imperiled" you touch the truth of the European situation. Were the allies, in their shortsightedness, successful in crushing Germany, the buffer state of western enlightenment against Russian despotism, it would be the worst thing that could happen to Europe eventually. In twenty-five or thirty years the western powers would be forced to unite in one mighty effort to push back the hordes from Russia and Siberia that would surely roll down to the Atlantic seaboard like a huge tidal wave; and it might then be too late!

But this will not happen, for Germany will save the western nations from their own folly by defeating them now. And, in spite of them, she will drive back the Russian now. It is a matter of only a few weeks until we shall hear that the Russian forces, having reached the place best adapted for the shambles, have been cut to pieces with immense slaughter.

The majority of our people seem inclined to blame Germany for her militarism; but with Russia, whose territorial hunger is insatiable, on the one side, and with France, whose avowed purpose, as stated by all its leading men, newspapers, and periodicals since 1870, has been to retake Alsace-Lorraine some day by force of arms, on the other, what could Germany do but prepare herself and keep prepared? PHILIP BURKE.

LAWLESS OFFICEHOLDERS.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—We have a fine set of office holders, such as Judge Owens, of whom you say his rotation of names on ballot move is "judicial anarchy"; Brady, who boasted to his wife to assure her of his political strength in his office of auditor of Illinois, "I can do anything I want and get away with it"; Hoyne: consider the manner of his election; O'Connell, of whom A. A. McCormick says "he is withholding to his own personal use $750,000 of interest belonging to the taxpayers."

We have jury fixers, bank "split interest" sharks, tamperers with water office accounts, commissioners who threaten to "burn the records," school board members bent upon crippling our schools politicians corralling public utilities, and enemies of equal suffrage aiming to annul the women's vote.

Let us face the issue—the lawless officeholder must go. A. G. BETTS,

THE MARKSMEN'S PRIZE.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Its donation of a cup to be contested for by riflemen of the Illinois National Guard is an act of highest patriotism. Encouragement is needed for the sparse battalions of national guardsmen striving without thanks to perfect themselves in the highly skilled craft of the modern soldier. But more than this, the posting of a marksman's prize by THE TRIBUNE is one sign of the great, hospitable movement which shall revive a healthy military spirit in the United States and condemn the poltroon efforts of disarmament fans and peace-at-any-price howlers.

Already the epidemic of "pacificism" has produced rottenness in our national morale. Too long have we refrained from challenging the seditious utterances which declare that there can be no war with honor, that this nation can never be in danger, and that, anyway, a Paul Revere and a handful of minute men can ably cope with airships and automobile siege batteries.

THE TRIBUNE has performed admirable service in showing the inadequacy of our navy and the pitiful deficiencies of our army skeleton. But in donating the sharpshooter's cup, THE TRIBUNE adds a torch to the dying flame of interest in affairs military. In order to build up our army and increase our navy, we must have, in addition to congressional appropriations, a military spirit in times of peace. By this I do not mean a predatory "war spirit," but a zest for preparedness in national defense—at least as great as baseball enthusiasm or the cabaret fever. EX-FIRST INFANTRY.

Instead of preventing war, it guarantees a continuance of wars. For God's sake, let us stop increasing our military forces and build up our intellectual and moral and let our chief trust rest on God and the right. FILIPINOS NEED COMMON TONGUE

Confusion of Dialects in the Islands Handicaps Political Progress.

OPPOSITION TO ENGLISH

BY H. D. REILLY.
[STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

MANILA, P. I.—Many have the idea that Spanish is the language of the Philippines. This, however, is incorrect. There has not been and is not now any one language which all Filipinos understand. When the Spanish first arrived in the Philippines they found not only each tribe with a different dialect but in many cases subdivisions of a tribe with such difference in their tongue that it was impossible for the people of one division to understand those of another.

This condition has continued up to the present time. There are at least fifteen main dialects. When it comes to counting the number of dialects spoken, where the people speaking one are incapable of understanding those speaking another, the number jumps to between fifty and sixty. In each one of these fifty or sixty divisions there will be several groups which differ from each other considerably. There are many examples where the dialect spoken by people living in towns but a short distance apart varies to such an extent that the inhabitants have great difficulty in understanding each other.

Groups of Languages.

One of the main divisions is Visayan. This is divided into three different groups, the Samar, Panayan, and Cebuano. The people speaking the Samar and Panayan are entirely unable to understand one another. Each of these two groups can understand a small amount of Cebuano, and the Cebuano can understand a small amount of the other two groups. In each of these three groups there is a number of smaller groups, each varying to some extent from the others. Tagalog, the next most important of the main groups, has about ten ramifications.

Education under Spanish rule was practically entirely in the hands of the friars. Until 1863 the teaching of Spanish was practically forbidden. In this year a law was promulgated making the teaching of Spanish compulsory. However, the friars did not obey the law. They had no desire to teach the natives Spanish, because with the use of a universal language the majority of the racial differences existing between the different tribes in the Philippines would have disappeared. Also the teaching of Spanish would have opened up to the people Spanish literature, and as a consequence a knowledge of the world, which could not be obtained from the few works in the native dialects.

Literature of the Philippines.

When the Americans first arrived in the Philippines but 20 per cent of the people 10 years of age and over could read or write at all in any language or dialect. Of the total population 10 years of age or over, but 7 per cent could read or write Spanish. In other words, the great majority of the natives were depending upon native literature. There were practically no newspapers in any native dialect. The Tagalogs, the most important people politically, and those who had come most in contact with Europeans, had but 161 volumes in their language. Of these 91 were purely religious, 50 were of verse, practically all doggerel, and dealing with fables and traditions. Of the remaining 20, 3 were grammars and conversational manuals, 1 an arithmetic, 3 were novels, 3 were plays of no value, and the remaining 10 had no literary or educational value.

One objection to Spanish is that the Philippine islands are the only part of the orient in which the language is at all the Filipinos would have aided them spoken. Thus, the teaching of it to all in no way to communicate with any of their neighbors or with the Americans.

Some have advocated the teaching of the native dialects. This, however, would only perpetuate the present existing confusion and tend to emphasize the tribal difference which it is so necessary to overcome if the islands are to possess a homogeneous population.

Poverty of the Dialects.

This brings up another question, and that is the poverty of each one of the dialects. Tagalog, for instance, which is probably the most virile of all, can be spoken easily once the student has acquired 150 of the most common words. Some of the Tagalog leaders are striving to construct a real Tagalog language by making changes and adding new words. Also they are sending broadcast amongst the Tagalogs circulars advising mothers to send their children to Tagalog schools and not to let them learn English. Even should this movement succeed in making Tagalog into a real language, the question would be no nearer settlement than before unless all the other tribes were forced to learn Tagalog. This would have the same objections as the teaching of Spanish.

The teaching of English has many advantages. In the first place, all American teachers understand and can teach it. It is the language of the American people, with whom the Filipinos come most in contact. It is the commercial language of the far east and is spreading in the far east more rapidly every day. It is the European language which the average Chinese who learns a European language at all is taught. It is taught in all the schools of Japan. Aside from the fact that English not only is taught but is used as the language of instruction in all the schools all over the archipelago, there are many signs to show that English is gaining ground.

Tagalogs Oppose English.

Some of the opposition to English is due to families who really have a Spanish education and do not wish to change their language. More of it is due to those Tagalog leaders who look forward to the day when the Tagalogs will rule the islands, and they can force their dialects down the throats of the rest of the tribes. Most of it is undoubtedly due to the fact that the upper class Filipinos who now exercise such complete control in all ways over the ignorant lower class, who make up the great mass of the people, realize that with the knowledge of English will come a knowledge of democratic government, which means the end of their power.

Concerning Diplomacy

by Robert Herrick

SHE was an intelligent, attractive woman, and if I had not been informed that she was a grandmother several times over I should not have guessed where to place her age, so much she possessed that extraordinary power women have today to keep themselves youthful even beyond three score and ten. I knew also that hers was an old Maryland family, and that her husband had been a Democrat in those days before the war when Democracy held its head high in the and. So I considered it safe to launch at once into politics, which was more or less on my mind.

"You and I," I began, "are of the same political faith, I believe. We must be the only Democrats at this table."

"I am an old school Democrat," she replied cautiously.

Thinking that she referred to her family's well known devotion to the lost cause, I said: "And I belong to the new school, necessarily. But I suppose we can agree in admiring the present administration at Washington?"

"You don't mean to say that you believe in Wilson and Bryan," my table companion cried, as if I had confessed to a liking for anarchy and incendiarism.

"Well, why not?"

"Not Mr. Bryan?"

"What has Bryan done that is so villainous?" I asked a little impatiently. "You don't lay up against him his fondness for grape juice nor the chautauqua habit?"

"But think what he has done to the diplomatic service. I cannot understand why Mr. Wilson has permitted him to disgrace the country by the appointments he makes to the diplomatic corps. Why, Mr. Blank, the well known banker, was telling me only yesterday that for the first time in his life he felt ashamed while he was abroad this year of the United States. He says we are the laughing stock of the civilized world."

"I don't believe you would find that we as a people are such a laughing stock if it came down to brass tacks, as your banker friend seems to think. Any way, the making of diplomats isn't the whole game, or even a tenth part of it."

"Don't you think it is essential that this nation should be represented creditably at the courts of Europe?"

"Well, not so essential that it would worry me—compared with some other things I might mention."

I have encountered the same sort of criticism of the present administration frequently these last months, especially in this part of the country where the leisure class seems to abound more abundantly than in more active centers. To a certain type of citizen, of the New England variety, and especially to his citizeness of almost any variety who has social aspirations, diplomacy—meaning "representing our nation' at some agreeable European capital—would seem to be all that government exists for. "The disgrace of our diplomatic force" is the phrase that they use most often with symptoms of real distress.

When one sounds the depths of their fears, one finds that they suspect the gentlemen chosen to fill these positions of prominence of being unacquainted with the usages of the best society, and ignorant of foreign languages, especially French, which, as any schoolgirl knows, is the one chief requisite for becoming a diplomat. They exhibit a vague alarm that the mistakes which such persons, unacquainted with French, may commit will put this nation at a disadvantage with foreign diplomats, all of whom speak French as easily as their native tongue and are experienced diners out. It is that which makes this great nation a 'laughing stock" for Europeans. . . . But to continue my conversation, in the course of which all the main points of this common delusion concerning diplomats and diplomacy bobbed up.

"I can't see," I resumed, "that Messrs. Wilson and Bryan have done very much worse in this matter of making diplomats than any other administration. Of course they have tried to pay off a few awkward political debts with a few useless gilt edged jobs that no live man could be induced to take. As long as we finance party expenses in our usual informal manner, we must expect to square things by putting over a few rich supporters of the successful candidate upon the defenseless courts of Europe."

"Still it is humiliating to us all to have our country represented by such men as Mr. Blank One and Mr. Blank Two," the lady persisted, coming down to concrete personalities as the best bred lady will.

"Mr. Blank One," I suggested, "is supposed to represent literature, which is an honorable profession—or trade—as you take it (and," I added under my breath, "literature won't miss him at all)."

"Mr. Blank Two can't even speak the language—I know that for a fact, for he once tried to order luncheon for me in Paris, and I had to help him out."

"I've no doubt he has a secretary now who can speak all the languages. I am sure that Mr. Blank Two is a very amiable person, just the man to call at the foreign office and express the condolences of these United States when the king loses a valued relative through the indiscretion of an anarchist. I know he would do it very feelingly and in the best taste."

"I am afraid you are not serious," my companion replied severely, and turned to her other neighbor, who was telling a story on the secretary of state, one of the many gossipy anecdotes that have been going the rounds of Washington drawing rooms this last year. "And so he kept the ambassador out there in the anteroom cooling his heels while he went off to lunch with that bounder—think of that, now!" And little gasps of horror went up from these good people over the "lack of form" in the present administration.

This sort of snobbism, which is fairly prevalent in our republic, is all the worse to me because the choice between the so-called incompetents appointed by the Democrats and the Republican ornaments which they have replaced is so largely a choice between socially skillful plutocrats and ones a little less socially skillful. There is no question of personal ability or achievement.

Time was, of course, when diplomacy was an important if not very respectable profession, but the cable has stopped all that. Plenipotentiaries, ministers extraordinary, and plain ambassadors can no longer play an exciting game of international poker all by themselves. They have become what they should be, national agents or lawyers, who do what they are told to in the matter of passing communications that might as well be exchanged directly between the various foreign offices. The rest of their time they must put in being sociable and amiable, introducing to their courts ambitious mammas with daughters, if there happen to be courts, extending courtesies to bore some globe trotters, and now and then getting up at a public banquet and emitting a few well guarded platitudes that mean nothing at all to sensible folk.

That there is nothing more than this in being a diplomat today, one might almost say in diplomacy itself, was never better illustrated than in the present unpleasantness among the European nations. The failure of diplomacy was never more amply displayed than in the rapid way in which these five great powers got by the ears. Apparently none of the diplomats even knew what was going on beneath the surface until it was almost over and the irreparable crime was about to be committed. If diplomacy really meant anything these days, it might have delayed the barbaric folly of the present débacle.

It may be that the peoples of the earth are too close together, know too much what is happening, to permit of a free use of the ancient diplomatic jugglery between states. The great days of diplomatic trading have gone—the world game must be played more and more with cards on the table, or not played at all, which would be better still.

There is, of course, something useful in the antiquated office of diplomat, and that is excellently illustrated in the present crisis by the heroic efforts of our ambassadors in Europe to extricate American tourists from the predicament of being in a fearful row without ready money to pay their passages home. It would seem that all our foreign representatives, no matter how defective their training in diplomacy may have been, are doing manly service in this way and representing the United States quite creditably. They are working at the business as much as eighteen hours a day, we are told in the newspaper dispatches. They calm the excitement of hysterical women whose letters of credit won't work, supply what small change they can for the impecunious, cable frantically to the state department to hurry up, and do everything else demanded by the circumstances.

But even this unexpected European crisis, which has upset the plans of so many American tourists, would not seem to require exceptional powers or abilities or special training for our diplomats. An honest and competent and kindly man who has had any good business experience might make shift to succeed in an emergency of this kind. He must know the rules of the game, naturally, but they are not extremely difficult to acquire. Besides there is always a secretary or attaché whose business it is to know the rules by heart. Even a good country editor might get along as an ambassador without "disgracing his country."

But diplomacy, as the excellent lady who started this discussion understands it, and as her crowd generally conceive it to be, is the shrine of good society. Foreign missions exist for the sake of introducing Americans, nice one, into the very heart of European society. Naturally they believe that the diplomatic posts should be reserved for the scions of American wealth who have enjoyed the advantages of long foreign residence, who know how to speak French and conduct themselves gracefully in any social emergency that may arise. Such persons usually know too little about their own country and have too little individuality to cause trouble or make bad breaks. And, thanks to their vulgar forbears, who sweated in the office, they can pay the bills that such free intercourse with the best socley must create without feeling it, or can easily marry some woman who in exchange for the exciting life of diplomacy is content to pay the bills.

As the real business of diplomacy is likely to grow less rather than more, it might be well to dispose of the vexed question by creating a college of diplomats, graduation from which would depend upon the possession of a sufficient fortune—say fifty millions—the ability to speak French, to enter a drawing room impressively, to say nothing at all with grace and conviction, and a few other similar accomplishments. Thus we could dispose of our increasing crop of jobless millionaires of the second generation, satisfy the aspirations of ambitious daughters and mothers in the smaller towns and cities all over the country, and incidentally leave our overworked president more time to devote to his real job.

ENGLAND CHEERED BY WAR TIDINGS

ARMY STEADILY INCREASES

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.
[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]
[Copyright: 1914: By The Tribune Company.]

LONDON, Sept. 12.—This week sees a revolutionary change in the whole military and political situation. The first weeks of the war consisted of almost daily accounts of the onward march of the irresistible and splendid German fighting machine and the daily retirement of both British and French troops until the capture of Paris seemed a question not of days but of hours.

British confidence that the forces united against Germany must ultimately conquer never wavered and the resolution to pursue the fight to a bitter and victorious finish never changed one moment.

Human nature must assert itself and these daily stories of continual failure did produce a feeling of momentary gloom underlying a steady and fixed purpose. The publication of Gen. French's dispatch lifting the veil for the first time over the military operations reveals what terrible grounds there were for this feeling of uneasiness and shows that it was only the splendid courage and coolness of the British general and soldiers in the face of apparently desperate danger that saved the British army from complete annihilation.

Cautioned Against Undue Elation.

Another and another army would have succeeded this army, even if annihilated, but still such a gigantic disaster could not but influence disastrously for some time the whole campaign of the allied forces. But suddenly on top of this story of unrelieved retreat comes the glad news of the Germans retreating and the French and English as steadily advancing. Military writers caution the English public against undue elation, but again human nature will not be denied, and today there is a new spirit of hopefulness everywhere and renewed and increased enthusiasm for the war. Even the stock exchange felt the reaction, and though closed was able privately to do better business than at any time since the declaration of war. By a fortunate coincidence there came on top of this announcement of a series of events which still more inflames enthusiasm, and even more securely promises ultimate success. First there was the remarkable proclamation of the India rulers and people, whose united and fervent offer of support to the British cause with blood and treasure produced an immense sensation and unrestrained emotion especially in view of Germany's outspoken and impotent hopes that Indian disaffection might be one of Britain's embarrassments.

Indian Troops in Readiness.

This means that in addition to the British armies hundreds of thousands of splendid Indian troops can be counted on to enter the conflict when wanted. Indeed, some are said to be already in France. Finally, there was Mr. Asquith's speech demanding money for 500,000 more men and setting forth the truly astounding number of those who have already answered Kitchener's appeal. Nearly half a million already have joined. One fact brings into relief the immensity of this response—namely: that on Sept. 3 alone 35,000 joined; that is to say, as many as ordinarily join in the course of a whole year.

Indeed, recruits have come in such rapidity that it was found impossible to house and feed them all, and there were loud complaints of some hardships; but these defects of congested machinery are now being removed.

Recruiting in Ireland is going on well; Irish opinion remains universally and even fiercely on the side of the allied armies.

Buying Home on Installment Plan.

L. H.—If you buy a house and lot for $7,500, pay $1,000 down and $50 a month thereafter, interest on the unpaid balances being at 6 per cent, it will require seventeen years, six and one-half months to extinguish the debt. In the first year the interest will amount to $384.15 and the principal will be reduced by only $215.85. The second year the principal will be reduced $229.20 and the interest will be $370.80. In the third year you will reduce the principal $243.30, the rest of the $600 going to pay interest. The fourth year you will reduce the principal $258.35, the fifth $274.27, the sixth $291.23, and the seventh $309.15.

From this time on, progress is faster, the interest charge now being less than half of the $600 you pay each year. In the eighth year you pay $328.20 of principal, in the ninth $348.47, in the tenth $370, in the eleventh $392.83, in the twelfth $416, in the thirteenth $442.65, fourteenth, $470, fifteenth, $498.95, sixteenth, $52.75. seventeenth, $562.41, leaving $319.40 to be paid in the last six and one-half months.

You will pay a total of $10,525.30, of which $4,025.30 is interest.

Whether this is a good investment depends chiefly on your own circumstances. If the $1,000 is all the capital you have and $50 is as much as you can spare from your earnings each month to pay on the house, it would be more prudent for you to buy a less valuable house. Under your plan it will take eleven years to get the house half paid for, and probably not until then could you get a deed. If illness or any other cause should stop your payments or interrupt them for a long time during the first ten years, you might lose the property. Such a misfortune during the earlier years would almost certainly bring total loss.

If, instead of buying a $7,500 house, you took a $6,000 property, you would start with a debt of $5,000 and that would be reduced to $2,500 in about six years and extinguished in four and a half more. If you start with a $5,000 house, it will take you only eight and a half years to pay for it.

If your means are such that you will never be in danger of losing what you have paid in, and if the $7,500 house is just what you want, you cannot do better than to buy it.

Suppose that instead of buying the house you rent an apartment for $50 a month. You would be saving perhaps $180 a year that taxes, repairs, and fuel would cost you if you bought the house. Your $1,000 at interest at 6 per cent with $180 a year added, and all compounded yearly, would amount to nearly $8,100 in seventeen and a half years. You would gain a total of $600 by living in a flat instead of the house. Probably, however, you would not be able to keep your money safely invested at 6 per cent throughout the seventeen year period, and therefore would have only about $7,500 at the end of it.

Travelers Insurance.

MRS. J. C.: The Travelers' Insurance company of Hartford, Conn., has been in business fifty years, has more than $300,000,000 of insurance in force, and a net reserve of $61,362,689. The company is economically managed and the mortality rate is low. The company is controlled by stockholders, policy holders having no voice in the election of directors. Large dividends have been paid to shareholders. In January, 1913, the capital stock was increased from $2,500,000 to $5,000,000 by letting each holder of a share buy a new share at par. Last year $1,780,000 was paid as dividends to stockholders.

Illinois Bankers Life.

F. B. F.—The Illinois Bankers Life association has been in business seventeen years and has $45,996,250 of insurance in force. It operates on an assessment basis and its plan involves some unusual features. An insurance authority says of it: "It's statement shows an apparent surplus of $565,838. It is able to show this surplus, however, only because no adequate provision is made for the increasing cost of insurance due to the increasing age of the membership. On the scientific basis adopted by the legal reserve companies no surplus would be shown, but, instead, a deficiency."

Denver Irrigation Bonds

J. B. W., Virginia, Minn.—The Denver-Greeley valley irrigation district forms part of the Denver reservoir system and its bonds are in the same position as other issues of the Denver company. An assessment has been levied on them to pay organization and other expenses, and most of the bondholders have paid the assessment. Returns on the bonds depend on sales of land in the district. Much of this land is near Denver.

Overproduction of Oil.

A. J.—Oil well promotions are speculations rather than investments. At the present time, too, there is the greatest overproduction of oil ever known. Millions of barrels are going into storage tanks for an indefinite time.

The Why and the Wherefore of Japan's Descent on Kiau-Chau.

BY J. O. P. BLAND.
[STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Sept. 1.—To appreciate the significance of Japan's dramatic and dignified descent into the arena of European strife, we must turn back some pages of history in the far east. We must look to the foundations of the policy which led Germany, sixteen years ago, to establish its model colony on the bleak coast of Shantung, after its diplomacy had compelled Japan to hand back Wei-hai-wei and the Liaotung peninsula to defeated China. The subject is one which concerns the American people, since it is intimately bound up with the future balance of power in the Pacific. I propose, therefore, to touch on certain of its political and economic aspects which appear to have been either overlooked or imperfectly appreciated by the press on both sides of the Atlantic.

Japanese Sentiment Anti-German.

In the first place, there are certain considerations which should tend to reassure public opinion in America concerning Japan's object in attacking Germany at Kiau-Chau, over and above the specific pledges which have been given by the government at Tokio to the United States and to Great Britain. Most important of these, and most convincing, is the fact that the Japanese government has been moved to take up arms against Germany not as the result of any deliberate policy of aggression or profitable expediency but because of the unmistakable sentiments of the Japanese people. As far as Japan's obligations to Great Britain are concerned, under the treaty of alliance, there was nothing in the situation in the far east to make Japanese intervention absolutely necessary; no immediate danger threatened "the territorial rights of the high contracting parties in the regions of eastern Asia and of India."

Initiative Came from London.

Kiau-Chau was behaving itself with that discretion which is the wiser part of valor, not as a base of hostilities, but as a harbor of refuge. Nevertheless (the fact is not generally known), the initiative for joint action came not from Tokio but from London. It is quite possible that had Japanese national sentiment not been so deeply involved the mikado's government might have thought twice before incurring the heavy expense—not to speak of the political liabilities—of going to war with Germany. As it was, however, neither the cabinet, nor the elder statesmen, nor the emperor himself could have faced the storm of popular indignation that must have broken out if the government had refused to settle the Japanese people's long nursed grudge against Germany.

To Avenge Humiliation.

Certain writers in the Japanese Socialist press have declared that the cabinet has embarked on this naval and military adventure in order to divert popular attention from the country's economic and political difficulties. No doubt the government has, so to speak, Irish problems of its own; but those who speak with authority in this matter testify to the depth and strength of the common people's determination to take a hand in this war of the worlds, and in so doing avenge the humiliation which Germany put upon victorious Japan in 1895. Underlying this high crested wave of national sentiment there must, of course, be unsentimental business considerations, visions of trade in China relieved for some time to come of German competition, rapid expansion of Japanese shipping and mining interests in the Yangtsze.

An Example of Retributive Justice.

The sober wisdom of Japan's elder statesmen, that wisdom which, despite perils of change, still guides and restrains the volcanic passions of this warrior people, bides its time—but it never forgets, and it will choose its day of retribution with all the Samurai's oriental sense of artistic fitness. If any one doubts this, let him study the terms of the Japanese government's ultimatum of Aug. 15. He will find that they reproduce the very spirit, and, in parts, the actual letter, of the diplomatic document which compelled Japan to forego her fruits of victory in 1895. "The imperial Japanese government sincerely believes it to be its duty to give advice to the imperial German government to carry out the following propositions."

Could retributive justice be more dramatically applied? We are justified in accepting as something more than diplomatic formulæ the assurances recently given to the powers that Japan seeks no territorial expansion at China's expense, and that Kiau-Chau and the German hinterland in Shantung will be handed back to China: because everything points clearly to the fact that the real object of the present expedition to the Yellow sea is "to wipe something off the slate."

Benefits to Japan.

I do not mean to say that Japan is not looking ahead. Naturally enough, she hopes to derive political and commercial advantages from her share in the business of "eliminating from continental China the root of German influence." In the first place, the government will strengthen its authority at home and its prestige abroad by being able to speak as one of the belligerents in the conference of the powers which must eventually determine the penalties of war and the price of peace. In the second place, Japan stands to gain more than either England or America, from the destruction or dislocation of Germany's scientifically organized business of exploiting the resources of China.

Germany's traders, railway builders, armament agents, and bankers, energetically supported by the kaiser's "bagman diplomats," have been Japan's most formidable rivals in the type of business which combines commercial enterprise with ulterior political aims in the far east. Even in ordinary legitimate trade, in the development of new business in the interior, the German merchant usually displays more energy and more aptitude than the somewhat easy going Britisher.

Fulfillment of a Silent Vow.

In this eemrgency, as throughout the whole policy of the Japanese government, the weight of economic factors in undeniably great. If the nation is to maintain its position as a first class military power it is bound to develop new and profitable markets for its industries. Its trade with China [already second only to that of Great Britain] is therefore a vital matter. Certainly the government and the educated classes are alive to this fact, but as far as the people are concerned the expedition against Kiau-Chau stands for the fulfillment of a silent vow which the nation made to itself twenty years ago.

The Song the British Are Singing in France.

CHORUS.
It's a long way to Tip-per-ar-y,
It's a long way to go;
It's a long way to Tip-per-ar-y, To the sweet-est girl I know!
Good-bye, Pic-ca-dil-ly,
Fare-well, Leices-ter Square,
It's a long, long, way to Tip-per-ar-y, But my heart's right there!

[The English newspapers explain that "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" is the British equivalent for "It's a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," to the strains of which American soldiers marched through Cuba and the Philippines.]

WHEAT FUTURES ON DOWN GRADE

Big Receipts Check Outside Buying; Export Sales Liberal on Break.

COARSE GRAINS FIRMER

The price tendency in wheat yesterday was towards a lower level. Final prices were 2@2¼c lower. The outside demand was slow most of the day, and the market was affected by the increasing receipts northwest and by the weakness in northwest markets. The cash demand was better and there were good sales on the decline, about 500,000 bu, most of which was to exporters.

Cash prices here were about steady relatively and there was no great pressure to sell from the country. The decline in futures has checked the selling of wheat to arrive and the wet weather in the southwest also put a damper on sales from that section. The main factor in the market, however, was the absence of the big outside buying demand which was the mainstay of the market for so long.

Primary Receipts Enormous.

Primary receipts for the week were enormous at 15,886,000 bu, or about 50 per cent larger than a year ago. Northwest arrivals were 1,134 cars, against 846 cars a year ago, and Winnipeg had 1,359 cars, compared to 420 cars a year ago. The Canadian wheat is expected to be marketed as rapidly as possible, owing to the tight money conditions prevailing in western Canada. Prices are high, also, and attractive to growers, who have been getting low prices the last few years.

Receipts here were 410 cars, with 196 cars inspected yesterday. Indications are for more moderate receipts here. Liverpool cables were ½d higher for futures and unchanged to ½d higher. The international review forwarded by Broomhall was a little bullish, and cables indicated a good inquiry for wheat from all countries outside of Germany and Austria, which are shut off from receiving supplies.

Rain in Western Canada.

In the northwest there was a change for the better in weather conditions, although there was a little rain in western Canada. Country offerings of wheat in the northwest were reported light, the big receipts at Minneapolis being due to the cleaning up of stocks accumulating along the lines of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Armour, Logan-Bryan, Gifford, Lamson, and Jackson Bros. were the leading sellers of wheat. Bartlett-Frazier, Bennett, Barrell, and Knight-McDougal were buyers on the break. Minneapolis wheat stocks increased 175,000 bu for one day, and Duluth stocks gained 884,000 bu for the week. Clearances were 711,000 bu.

Corn Shows Strong Tone.

Corn showed a good deal of strength in the face of the weakness in wheat, and prices at the close were ⅛@¾c higher. Cash corn prices were 1c up, and there was a better demand from shippers, which helped the buyers of futures materially. Offerings from the country were light, and smaller receipts are expected the coming week. Weather conditions were more favorable over the belt, but country reports indicate supplies back on the farms are light of old corn, and it will be some time before the new corn will be shipped.

Liverpool cables were ½d higher. Weather conditions in Argentina were more favorable, and the condition of corn was said to be improving. Receipts here were 207 cars, with 131 cars inspected yesterday. Primary receipts were 491,000 bu, compared to 899,000 bu a year ago.

Export Oats Sales Large.

The cash demand for oats was again active and there was good buying of futures credited to export houses and local shippers. Sales were 750,000 bu. As a result there was less pressure to sell and the market showed the effect of the large sales of cash oats for shipment. Final prices for futures were ⅛@¼c to ⅝c higher. Offerings from the country were lighter. The cash market was ½@1c higher. Receipts here were 360 cars, with 208 cars inspected yesterday. Primary receipts were 1,325,000 bu for the day and for the week were 6,851,000 bu, against 7,016,000 bu a year ago.

Hog Products are Lower.

Provisions were again weak, with further liquidation in evidence. The reports in regard to the cash trade were mixed and the inquiry from the south was said to be slow. Hog prices were 10c lower at the close and receipts here were 9,000, with 28,000 the estimate for Monday and 105,000 is the estimate for the coming week. Liverpool prices for products were unchanged. Gregson, Hately and Tietgens led the selling of products. The buying was scattered, with some covering by shorts.

Rye Market Steady.

Barley was steady, with malting 70@76c; feed, 65@66c, and screenings, 50@64c. Receipts, 44 cars.

Timothy seed was quiet at $4.75@6.00. Clover seed was slow at $15.00@18.25 for cash lots.

Duluth flax closed 1¼@2c lower, with cash on track and September, $1.51½; October, $1.53; November, $1.55½; and December, $1.56½. Minneapolis was 1½@2c lower, at $1.49@1.54 for cash on track. Receipts, 39 cars. Winnipeg closed 2@2½c lower, with October, $1.31½; November, $1.33½; and December, $1.34¼. Receipts, 6 cars.

GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Cash sales of wheat from Chicago yesterday were about 500,000 bu, most of which was for export or to exporters. At Minneapolis receipts were again large, owing to free arrivals over several of the big roads. Country deliveries in many sections in the spring wheat country were reported light. Mills were fair buyers. Flour sales were not quite so heavy as recently, but mills as a rule have all the orders they can take care of at present. In the southwest markets the cash wheat tone was easy. The break in prices checked the selling from the country, but in a few instances fair sales to arrive were made. The wet weather in the southwest also has served to check selling to some extent.

"The hog receipts continue very light and the indications are that they will be very moderate for some time," said W. L. Gregren. "The southern demand was better later in the week and the cash lard demand improved on the decline. The fresh meats keep high because the supply is inadequate, and pork products face light competition from any other fresh meat. Renewed activity in the January futures will be liable to make wide fluctuations."

Edward L. Adams and Charles A. Lindley made application for membership on the board of trade, while John C. Wilson and Ernst M. Markwald posted memberships for transfer.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 196 cars; corn, 131 cars; oats, 206 cars; rye, 6 cars; barley, 44 cars; hogs, 28,000 head. Hogs for all next week, 105,000 head.

Broomhall's international wheat review was to be bullish.

LESS PROFIT FOR LOCOMOTIVE CO.

Annual Report of American Company Shows Decrease of 66.4 Per Cent.

BETTER BANK FIGURES.

Net earnings of the American Locomotive company for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, were $2,076,127, against $6,185,305 the previous year, being a decrease of $4,109,177, or 66.4 per cent. Earnings applicable to the common stock were $326,127, against $3,835,305 the previous year. The figures represent 1.30 per cent on the common, against 15.34 in 1913.

The falling off in profits may be ascribed to the reduced orders of the railroads for locomotives, the manufacture of engines being the principal business of the company. About one year ago the directors decided to discontinue the manufacture and sale of automobiles and motor trucks, the vehicle business not having proved profitable.

		Decrease.
Gross earnings	$29,987,438	$24,880,736

Edison Lays Off Employes.

It is announced that the Commonwealth Edison company has laid off something over 800 employés in various departments.

According to an official of the Chicago Railways company the business of the surface lines has decreased on account of diminished traffic in the manufacturing districts. Since both light and power are consumed in these districts it is probable the decrease in the light company's business is in part due to this situation.

Bank Statement Improves.

The New York bank statement made a favorable exhibit in that there were large increases in both deposits, loans, and cash. The latter item showed a gain of $6,419,000. Meanwhile the deficit in the surplus reserve decreased over $2,000,000.

The deficit in the reserve now stands at $35,065,000, against a surplus last year of $4,596,750 and $1,071,800 two years ago. The figures of the average statement follow:

Letters of Credti Abroad.

International conditions abroad, in a banking way, show some improvement, at least so far as the United States is concerned. The National City bank of New York reports having received the following cable from its correspondent in Vienna, the Wiener bankverein: "All our branches and correspondents are at the entire disposal of American citizens in Austria-Hungary regarding the payment of travelers' checks and letters of credit."

Decrease in Clearings.

Local bank clearings for the week showed a decrease of $71,909,945, or 23.6 per cent. The figures, however, represent only four days' business, against six days last year.

Dividends Declared.

The State Bank of Chicago has declared its usual quarterly dividend of 3 per cent, payable on Oct. 1 to stockholders of record at the close of business on Sept. 30.

The Chicago Title and Trust company has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent, payable Oct. 1 to stockholders of record Sept. 19.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent, payable Sept. 25 to stock of record Sept. 19.

The Ohio State Telephone company declared an initial dividend on its 7 per cent paid stock to cover the period from July 23 to Sept. 30, 1914, payable Oct. 1 to stock of record Sept. 25. This amount is necessary to bring subsequent dividends into the usual quarterly divisions of the year.

Stock Exchange Notice.

The clearing house committee of the New York stock exchange issued the following notice:

"Members desiring to buy or sell, loan or borrow securities in conformity with the rules are requested to confirm before 12 o'clock noon on Monday, Sept. 14, all orders with the clearing house. If not confirmed by that time they will be considered canceled."

Investments for Trust Funds.

The Trust Companies' Magazine of 1 Liberty street, New York City, has issued a book entitled "Legal Investments for Trust Funds." The volume is a rather comprehensive survey of the laws and decisions of the various states governing the investment of trust funds and legal investments for savings banks. It contains a discussion of the principles of the law of trusteeship. There is given a list of investments which are legal for trust funds and savings banks in the various states.

Financial News Notes.

It is reported the National Fireproofing company has entered about $750,000 new business on its books.

Earnings of the Consumers' company of Chicago are reported to have shown an increase of $188,000 for the first six months of the current calendar year.

The Prairie Oil and Gas company is now running about 58,000 barrels a day from the wells in Oklahoma. For the first three weeks of August the average was 86,000 barrels a day. June and July runs were close to 130,000 barrels a day.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The coffee market was more or less unsettled again today. Private cables report that the Brazilian government is considering an issue of paper money to assist growers in holding their coffee off the market in the interior. No further change was reported in the cost and freight market. Local spot prices, however, were a shade lower and some operators predict that values here will gradually work nearer a parity with Brazil should the foreign exchange situation continue to improve. Rio 7s were quoted at 6¾@7c and Santos 4s at 11½@12c. Milreis prices were unchanged in Brazil at the close yesterday. SUGAR—Raw steady; molasses, 5.62c; centrifugal, 6.27c; refined steady.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—SUGAR—The following prices were quoted by wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $8.78; powdered, standard $8.03; eastern granulated, $7.58; beet granulated, $7.88; extra C, $7.83; canary, $7.08.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—There was no fresh development with reference to the liquidation of old contracts on the New York cotton exchange today. Liverpool has adopted the plan of reporting Saturday's spot business on Monday, and there was consequently no ballot for orders in the local market.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 12.—COTTON—Spot quiet; moderate business. Sales, none. Imports, 3,626 bales, including 3,148 American.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Reports that cotton markets in some sections were firmer today caused mills to refuse to sell wide print cloths at the lowest prices. Colored goods remained firm. Fine yarn cloths were steady. More buying was reported by cotton yarn dealers. Underwear and hosiery were more active.

Hog prices sold 5@10c lower than on Friday and the market was slow and weak under receipts of 9,000 head. Prime lightweight hogs appeared to be the only grade for which there were urgent orders, and they sold at $9.55. All other grades were slow at prices that covered a wider range than at any previous time this season, the bulk of sales being from $8.50 to $9.25. Pigs held without material change.

Final quotations made prime light and butcher hogs 15@20c higher than a week ago, while heavy and mixed packing grades showed a loss of 10@15c. Total receipts this week aggregated less than 68,000 head, being among the lightest of the season and showing a decrease of 36,000 head, while being less than half the arrivals a year ago. The average price for the week's run was placed at $9.00, against $9.20 last week. Shipments for the week were 15,100 head, or only 400 head short of last week's.

CATTLE.

Good to choice fat beef steers at Chicago this week advanced 15@20c and sold at the highest prices of the year, with tops at $11.00. Less desirable grades did not show so much improvement, but they also held on a firm basis and closed strong for the week. The scarcity of prime corn fed beeves is becoming more apparent as the season progresses, and the trade is looking for extreme prices to reach still higher levels. Common to good lightweight steers are selling freely, but contributions from range districts are keeping the market well supplied and checking the upward tendency of values. Fat cows and heifers held steady to firm with a week ago, but cheap canners were in excessive supply and closed at a loss of 35@50c. Calves advanced 25@50c to the highest level reached in recent weeks. Quotations:

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 145,900, against 141,700 the preceding week, 187,000 a year ago, and 204,400 two years ago. Total for 1914 to date, 4,043,000, against 4,809,000 the same period in 1913.

SHEEP.

Fat sheep advanced 15@35c this week, while lambs made a gain of 35@50c. Receipts for the week were lighter than usual for the season of the year, while the demand was of urgent character, muttons being in high favor because of the high cost of beef and pork. The trade was broad and active, with all classes of sheep, yearlings and lambs selling briskly at the appreciated values. Lambs topped the week at $8.40, against $7.90 the preceding week, and closed at the highest figures made in recent weeks. Sheep sold up to $5.85, against $5.60 last week and $4.75 a year ago. Buying of feeding and breeding stock was of good volume and prices of thin lambs advanced 10@15c, closing strong at the upturn.

PUSH NEW OLEO FRAUD CASE.

Grand Jurors Will Continue Inquiry Involving Firm in the Stockyards.

Investigation of a new oleomargarine fraud case, involving one of the largest packing houses in the stockyards, will be renewed by the federal grand jury which adjourned nearly a month ago when it returns on Sept. 18. Mynel E. Fowler and his wife, Mrs. G. E. Fowler, owners of a delicatessen at 4515 Wallace street, were indicted on a charge of selling artificially colored oleomargarine without paying the 10 cent tax per pound in accordance with the federal revenue laws. The jurors held to the opinion that the packing house which sold the coloring is equally guilty and refused to be dismissed when the Fowler case was disposed of.

U.S. MAY NOT NEED BIG CREDIT FUND

Exchange So Much Better $150,000,000 Pool Is Held to Be Unnecessary.

MONEY RATES HARDEN.

New York, Sept. 12.—The week's notable achievement in finance was the perfecting of the bankers' plan for reopening the foreign exchange market by subscriptions to a gold fund of $150,000,000 from the banks of the whole country, to be available for deposit in Canada to the credit of the Bank of England. Advices from Washington indicate, however, that conditions are now so much relieved as to make the actual consummation of the plan unnecessary.

The proposed gold pool, the $100,000,000 New York City loan, and advances to southern banks to finance cotton holdings made their influence felt in hardening money rates. Future protection of our supplies of liquid capital, with any resumption of relations with foreign markets, must depend, in fact, on keeping up interest rates to a figure which will keep capital at home.

War Result of Great Moment.

The price movement in wheat, the only available medium for speculation, continued to reflect the opinion that German reverses might shorten the war and German success prolong it. On this question depends not only the period for which Europe's great central banks must be strained with the guarantees they have given of uncollectable commercial and exchange discounts, but whether these shall be ultimately collectible at all.

The government crop report disclosed that excess of yield of food crops was confined principally to winter wheat. Measures of railroad retrenchment accompanied the appeal to the president by railroad executives for lenient treatment by the commerce commission. The president's response to this appeal had a hardening effect on financial sentiment. Decreasing demand for steel products was attributed to lack of capital for new enterprises.

Cash Gain in Bank Statement.

In its loan increase of $26,000,000 the bank statement reflected the shiftings of money incidental to the city loan, the success of which has gone far toward dispelling recent depression. A substantial cash gain and a further reduction of the deficit in cash reserves were the other noteworthy features of the exhibit.

WANTED

The vacuum latent in the atm s here can exert a maximum force of more than a ton a square foot.

After long and careful experiment I have been led to the discovery and combination of principles which properly embodied will, I believe, make it possible to lift 50 or more tons of free weight directly up into the air and transport it at great speed. The mechanism is simple, mechanical and practical and steam is the motive power. The importance of such air navigation for war and commercial purposes is apparent.

I desire a backer, an individual or a syndicate, and I urge your favorable consideration.

WHEN it is considered that to the distractions of the European war with its attendant financial and general business disturbances there were added last week the Labor day holiday and a most absorbing primary election, it is not surprising that business in the real estate market was on a somewhat reduced scale. This was shown both in the reduced number of transfers filed for record as well as in the paucity of the reports received from brokers' offices, which were fewer in number and of a generally less important character than has been the case for many weeks. If these factors are to be taken as evidences of the market's actual condition, then it is in a bad way, but it is probable that this combination of adverse conditions had not a little to do with the week's poor showing.

Of course there is no denying the fact that the real estate market, in common with many other lines of business, is exceedingly dull owing almost entirely to the monetary stringency, which has paralyzed building operations on a large scale as well as large land transactions requiring considerable sums of money to swing. There naturally are a good many pessimists who view the outlook with a doleful eye, but on the other hand a better feeling is creeping into the market, in the opinion of representative brokers, and there is a steady, if slow accession to the ranks of the optimists.

This opinion was heard quite frequently last week by men who do big things in the market and who come in contact with people of large means. Some of these who held rather gloomy views as to the future two or three weeks ago actually see things from a comparatively cheerful viewpoint now and express the opinion that matters never have been as bad as many people have been made to believe they were and that a steady improvement is to be expected.

One of these men is Edgar M. Snow of Edgar M. Snow & Co., a naturally conservative man and one with a broad experience in both the real estate, as well as mortgage loan fields. His estimate of the situation is decidedly encouraging in view of the amount of pessimistic talk heard. He says:

"The demoralization in the real estate and mortgage market, felt immedately following the declaration of war in Europe, has been followed by a feeling of greater confidence affecting the whole business situation in the United States, and while there is retrenchment in expenditures in many directions, there is indication that a more normal condition soon will be realized through outlets abroad for our merchandise.

"The real estate market, while not reflecting yet the buoyancy manifested earlier in the year, giving promise of an active fall market, is, generally speaking, in a healthy and wholesome condition, with a tone indicating that no panicky feeling exists on the part of sellers or prospective buyers.

"Prices are being well maintained and are still correspondingly lower than in the other cities of the United States of much smaller population.

"The absence of speculative activity since World's fair time has inspired a confidence in the stability of Chicago real estate values which has directed attention and aroused the interest of buyers and mortgage lenders all over the country, who have in increased numbers come into this market for real estate investments and mortgage securities. The latter, in fact, have found a substantial world wide market, particularly during the last few years.

"Mortgage interest rates are still abnormally high, but this particularly affects the higher grade of loans, where minimum interest rates usually are granted.

"Loans outside of downtown and the immediate downtown district may be had at but little advance in rates above ante-war times, but in the downtown district and in the territory adjoining rates are at present substantially as high as for small loans in outlying territory.

"This situation practically reflects only a narrower demand, probably temporary, for these securities among lenders of large lump sums, who are accumulating large reserve resources. When these large funds begin to be released and again seek our downtown mortgages, lower interest rates will again obtain.

"A particularly healthy feature in the present situation is the continued active demand for lots and small properties, and the demand for mortgages by small mortgage buyers. There is a demand which exceeds the supply of desirable mortgages at current rates and which marks the confidence of the many, as compared with the few, in this existing situation and outlook."

This kind of talk from a man of Mr. Snow's standing is most encouraging, and it is likely to help the market in that it should inspire confidence on the part of many would be investors, who are holding aloof because of the generally disturbed business and financial conditions.

That the situation here is thoroughly sound is shown by the fact that despite the greatly disturbed conditions since the opening of the war the movement of real estate has been on a practically normal basis, while the volume of building for the month of August, despite the difficulty of securing building loans, was fully up to that of August a year ago. The significance of this becomes apparent when it is stated that for the eighty-eight principal cities of the country there was an average decrease of 26 per cent as compared with a year ago.

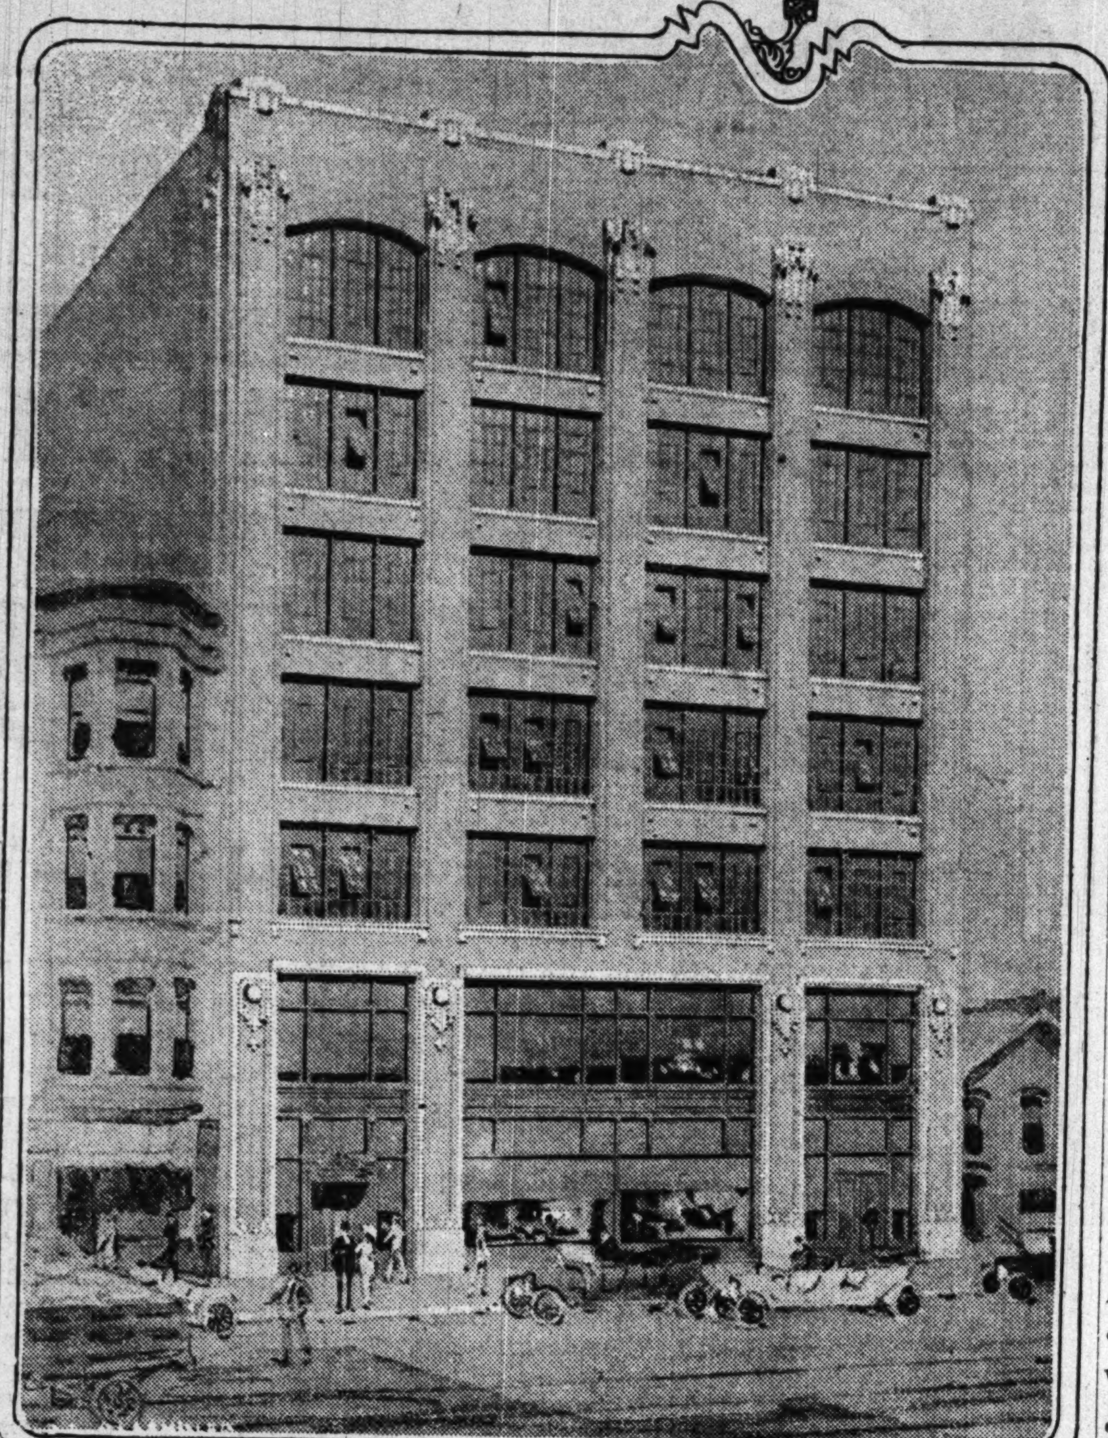
The present trouble is purely a monetary one, and just as soon as large lenders, both individuals as well as the insurance companies, get over their nervousness and make up their minds that this country is on the road to prosperity and not to the demnition bowwows there will come a revival that will put to shame the calamity howlers. One reason why the monetary stringency at that time. Despite tempting interest rates, 5½ per cent downtown, large lenders are still holding on to their funds, and in this respect they offer a striking contrast to the small lenders, who are taking all the small loans they can get hold of. As Mr. Snow says, the demand for these loans is far in excess of the supply. And it is to be hoped that the object lesson of these small lenders, to whom the small loan means as much as the large loans to the big lenders, will not be lost upon the latter.

The real estate market is absolutely healthy, values being on a sound basis, with buying for investment and improvement, and not of a speculative character. Improvement is being checked because of the difficulty in large or even medium sized loans, but building in a small way shows little diminution for the reason that small loans can readily be secured.

Man's Body Taken from Lake.

The body of a man believed to have been in the water for three months was taken from the lake yesterday at the foot of Ardmore avenue. The body was clad in a black suit, white shirt with purple stripes, purple necktie, one blue sock, and one blue and black sock, and black lace shoes. The body was that of a man apparently about 5 feet 7 inches tall.

New Manufacturing Building on South Side.



An attractive building is being erected in South Wabash avenue by Benjamin J. Rosenthal. It will occupy 70x170 feet of ground at 1510-1516 South Wabash avenue and will cost in the neighborhood of $130,000. It will be seven stories and basement high, with equipment to make it particularly suitable for light manufacturing purposes. The front is of attractive design, with a finish of light gray vitrified brick with unusually large glass area. There will be a large light court. The Efficiency Construction company has charge of the designing and construction of the building and has negotiated a loan in connection with the construction of the building. A. S. Alschuler is the architect.

BIG DEALS ON SOUTH SIDE FEATURE WEEK'S TRADING.

Large Apartment Building to Be Constructed at Drexel Boulevard and Forty-fourth Street.

In addition to Robert M. Fair's purchase in the Kingsbury street district there were several other large outside deals during the week in which the south side appeared conspicuously. One of these involved the construction of a large, high grade apartment building at Drexel boulevard and Forty-fourth street, to cost between $150,000 and $200,000.

The property to be improved comprises 98x200 feet at the southeast corner of the two streets, and was acquired by Edward I. Bloom, the builder, from Edward S. Hunter and others, the consideration being withheld.

Another big south side transaction was the purchase by George S. Ballard, president of the Hamilton club and a member of the real estate firm of Ballard, Rowe & Whitman, of the colonial twenty-one apartment building at the southeast corner of Ellis and Bowen avenues. The building was purchased from Ella B. Harriss of Ottawa, Canada.

Another important south side deal comprised the long term lease of the ground at the southeast corner of Ellis avenue and Seventy-fifth street, the lessee purchasing the improvements, comprising a three story building containing stores and offices, thirty apartments, and a thirty room hotel, which was erected by the late Montgomery Ward about eighteen years ago. The lessee is Charles Spare and the lessor Charles A. Winston.

REAL ESTATE BOARD HOLDS ANNUAL OUTING THIS WEEK.

Chicago Body Expects Events at Ridgemore Country Club to Be Must Successful Ever Held.

If weather conditions are favorable the annual outing of the Chicago real estate board at the grounds of the Ridgemore Country club in Jefferson Park next Wednesday promises to be an unusually successful affair, as more than ordinary interest is already shown by the members of the board. Owing to the energetic efforts of President Ennis and ing committee of the board, who is also Charles B. Moore, chairman of the out- a member of the Ridgemore club, the grounds of the latter were secured.

A special train will leave over the Chicago and Northwestern road at 10 o'clock a. m. Luncheon will be served at 11:30, after which there will be a brief business meeting, but of an informal character.

PLANS NEW HOME SITES.

Shane & Brown Announce $200,000 Building Project in Northwest Part of City.

A $200,000 building project is announced in the northwest part of the city in connection with the purchase of two tracts of twenty lots in the new subdivision bounded by North Campbell, Cullom, and Berteau avenues, by John A. Shane and A. K. Brown. Twenty of the lots front on Cullom avenue and twenty on Aubert avenue. Foundations already have been begun for forty two flat six and five room brick apartment buildings, representing an expenditure of about $200,000.

Leases and Loans.

Paul C. Loeber & Co. have been appointed the exclusive agents of the new six story and basement building of reinforced concrete construction, with a frontage of 87 feet and a depth of 100 feet, which Thomas F. Leahy is now erecting at the northeast corner of Ontario and Franklin streets; also for the adjoining property at 220-222 West Ontario street, where Deahl Bros. are constructing a six story and basement building of reinforced concrete construction, with a frontage of 50 feet and a depth of 100 feet. These buildings will be modern in every respect.

A lease has been made by Anna Rew Gross and Irving Rew to S. A. Maxwell company, large dealers in wall paper, for the store and basement 72-74 East Randolph street, which is between Wabash and Michigan avenues. The lease runs for a term of years commencing May 1, 1915, at an aggregate rental of $60,000. These premises will be completely remodeled and used as the retail department of their business. This lease will bring another prominent retail tenant to the north end of the loop district, which is destined to develop into a good retail center. Albert H. Wetten & Co. negotiated the lease.

Ballard, Rowe & Whitman have closed the lease of 3,000 square feet of space in the Madison Terminal building at the southwest corner of Madison and Clinton streets to the Novelty News company for a term of seven years at a gross rent of $20,000.

The Catholic bishop has given a trust deed to the Hibernian Banking association to secure a loan of $75,000, eight years, at 5 per cent, on the property at the southwest corner of Wallace and Forty-fifth streets.

E. A. Cummings & Co. have opened four subdivisions this week. One is the southeast corner of Fifty-fifth street and California avenue, one at the southwest corner of Forty-fifth avenue and Division street, one at the corner of Ogden avenue and Greenwood street, near the Berwyn station on the Burlington road, and one at Twelfth street and Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park. They are the 172d, 173d, 174th, and 175th subdivisions opened by this firm.

FAIR AGAIN IN BIG DEAL.

Purchaser of North Side Property Last Week Buys Another Costly Site in Same Vicinity.

The Kingsbury street district again appeared in the most important deal of the week, which was closed yesterday. The transaction is of unusual interest, as well as significant, both because of its magnitude and for the reason that the purchaser was Robert W. Fair, who appeared as the purchaser in a big deal in the same locality dring the previous week.

The property just acquired by him comprises the premises 445-459 West Erie street, between Kingsbury and Townsend streets. The lot has a frontage of 150 feet in Erie street with a depth of 100 feet running back to the switch track of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul tracks.

The present improvements are a two story and basement brick building occupied by Frank Voigtman & Co., manufacturers of metal windows and doors. Voigtman & Co. had an option to purchase the property from the former owner, Abraham J. Franks, and exercised their option, the latter making deed direct to Mr. Fair.

CHATHAM FIELDS PARKING SYSTEM FEATURE OF SITE.

Harmon & Co. Report Rapid Development of Residence Subdivision on the South Side.

William E. Harmon & Co. are making progress in the development of their new high class subdivision, Chatham Fields, in Cottage Grove avenue, Seventy-ninth and Eighty-first streets. The tract comprises 150 acres and the plans of Harmon & Co. provide for an even more attractive subdivision than their Ravenswood Manor and Garden, and Belmont Garden subdivisions on the northwest side, which have attracted much favorable comment.

While a great deal of attention is being given to the appearance of the two family house, especially in regard to the beautifying of the rear elevation and the back porch, yet a considerable section of Chatham Fields has been set aside for one family detached houses only. In this protected section no apartments will be allowed.

Another feature that is attracting much interest is the parking system, by which the breadth of the street seems accentuated and the boulevard appearanceis maintained.

Meinhardts Become Reconciled.

At the request of Mrs. Nellie Meinhardt her divorce suit against Dr. Maximilian Meinhardt, part owner of the Lake Shore hospital, was dismissed yesterday by Judge Mangan in the Superior court. Counsel for Mrs. Meinhardt informed the court that a reconciliation had been effected.

Real Estate Transactions.

NORTH SALES.

NORTH FRANKLIN STREET.—Julius Freed has sold to Herman Emerman the property at 1002 North Franklin street, being seventy-three feet north of Oak street, lot 24x100 feet, east front, with improvements, a consideration of $1 being given in the deed, subject to an incumbrance of $10,250.

IRVING PARK BOULEVARD.—Mollie Wayman has sold to Sol Klausner the property in Irving Park boulevard, 222 feet west of Lincoln street, 25x118 feet, south front, and other property, the consideration in the deed being $10, subject to an incumbrance of $9,100.

CLIFTON AVENUE. — The apartment house property in Clifton avenue, 260 feet south of Sunnyside avenue, with 60x145 feet of ground, east front, has been sold by Mrs. Irma H. Carnahan and husband to Addie Hechinger for a stated consideration of $20,500, subject to an incumbrance of $12,000. R. Hobbs of Gordon, Strong & Co. was the broker.

KENMORE AVENUE.—John Z. Anderson has sold to Andrew J. Johnson the apartment house property in Kenmore avenue, 100 feet south of Foster avenue, with 50x150 feet of ground, west front, the consideration in the deed being $10, subject to an incumbrance of $18,000.

DIVERSEY AVENUE.—John J. Germaine has conveyed to Alice and Gertrude Weiss the property at the southwest corner of Troy street and Diversey avenue, 29.6x125 feet, with brick improvements, for a stated consideration of $15,800, subject to an incumbrance of $5,500.

LAFAYETTE PARKWAY—August F. Hardt has purchased from Christina Neebe and others the apartment house property at 839-43 Lafayette parkway, with 66 2-3x130½ feet of ground, north front, the consideration in the deed being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $15,375.

LINCOLN STREET—John H. Miller has sold to the Eldridge Coal company the property in Lincoln street, 129 feet south of Bryn Mawr avenue, 163x254 feet, west front, a consideration of $10 being given in the transfer.

BALMORAL AVENUE—Metta E. Hartman has purchased from R. V. Petersen the apartment house property on Balmoral avenue, 311 feet east of North Clark street, with 50x125 feet of ground, south front, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $12,500.

WEST SALES.

OGDEN AVENUE.—The property at the northeast corner of Ogden avenue and Congress street figured in an important transaction made a matter of record yesterday. The lot is triangular in shape, fronting on Honoré and Congress streets as well as Ogden avenue, with a northwest frontage of 170 feet on the latter by 125 feet on Congress street and 124 feet east front on Honoré street. It is improved with a two story building having six stores on the ground floor and eighteen apartments on the second floor. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of about $5,000. It was conveyed by Louis Frank to Edwin L. Coyle and John F. Lusher, the consideration being withheld. The transfer is subject, however, to an incumbrance of $45,500.

ST. LOUIS AVENUE.—A noteworthy transaction in west side property made a matter of record is the sale by Max and Louis Paulson to Louis Walensky and Harry Rabinovitz of the property on St. Louis avenue thirty-two feet south of Thirteenth place, 75x106 feet, west front, with apartment house improvements. A nominal consideration is named in the transfer, but the sale is made subject to an incumbrance of $31,000.

DIVISION STREET.—The property in West Division street, 96 feet east of Robey street, lot 24x110 feet, north front, with store and flat improvements, has been sold by Isaac Bass to Oscar Stone and Nathan Mesirow for a stated consideration of $15,500.

JOHNSTON STREET.—Record has been made of the sale by the Consumers company to Isaac Sandrovitz of the property on Johnston street, 48 feet south of West Fourteenth place, 175x100 feet, west front, for a stated consideration of $15,000, subject to an incumbrance of $1,000.

ARTESIAN AVENUE.—The property in Artesian avenue, 275 feet south of Potomac avenue, lot 25x125 feet, east front, with flat improvements, has been sold by Louis Feurzeig to Billy Koda for a stated consideration of $14,240, subject to an incumbrance of $6,240.

MADISON STREET.—Samuel Foreman has purchased from Joseph Savalson the property in West Madison street, 150 feet east of Forty-second avenue, 50x175 feet, south front, with store and flat improvements, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $18,700.

LINCOLN STREET.—The property in Lincoln street, 250 feet north of Twelfth street, 25x100 feet, east front, with brick improvements, has been sold by John J. Callas to Basel Varishpolsky, for a stated consideration of $10,000 subject to an incumbrance of $5,500.

KEDZIE AVENUE.—Record was made of the sale by Knud Sparesus of the property at the northeast corner of Kedzie avenue and Cortland street, 50x125 feet, with store and flat improvements, for a stated consideration of $36,000, subject to an incumbrance of $24,000. In part payment Mr. Sparesus took the property at the southwest corner of Hoyne avenue and Lexington street, 61x90 feet, with flat improvements, from Alexander Weicz for a stated consideration of $12,500, subject to an incumbrance of $6,700. Also from Bertha Weicz the property on West Adams street, 50 feet east of Hoyne avenue, lot 25x125 feet, with flat improvements, for a stated consideration of $13,000, subject to an incumbrance of $5,500.

RICE STREET.—Louis Bromberg has sold to Cyrus Cutaia the property in Rice street, 119 feet east of Western avenue, lot 32x128 feet, with store and flat improvements, for $13,500, subject to an incumbrance of $10,050.

TAYLOR STREET.—The property at the southwest corner of Taylor and Wood street, 48x100 feet, north front, with store and flat improvements, has been sold by Herman M. Goldberg to Annie Slavik for a stated consideration of $32,000, subject to an incumbrance of $14,000.

PARK AVENUE.—Lavinia E. Smyth has quitclaimed to Louis and Nicholas C. Nissen and Louis N. Turner the property in Park avenue 168 feet north of Lake street 57x130 feet, east front, also 25x51x150 feet west of Park avenue and about 163 feet north of West Lake street, a consideration of $1 being given. Winfield S. Smyth, trustee, also conveyed to the same grantee, a consideration of $19,000 being given.

CHICAGO AVENUE.—Record has been made of the purchase by the Commercial Furniture company from Jens C. Hansen of 200x124 feet vacant, north front, in West Chicago avenue, 129 feet east of California avenue. The property, which is across the street from the plant, was purchased for future possible requirements.

SOUTH SALES.

SEVENTY-FIFTH STREET.—Another important transaction has been closed along Seventy-fifth street, comprising the property at the southeast corner of Seventy-fifth street and Ellis avenue. It has a frontage of 205 feet on Seventy-fifth street and 125 feet on Ellis avenue, and is improved with a three story building erected by the late Montgomery Ward about eighteen years ago. It contains nine stores, thirty apartments of four, five, and six rooms, a thirty room hotel, in addition to halls and a few offices. It is said to have a gross annual rent of about $12,500.

The ground was leased by Charles A. Spare from Charles A. Winston for a term of ninety-nine years at an annual rent of $4,000 for the first twenty years and $5,000 for the remaining seventy-nine years of the term. The average annual rent is $4,798, which, capitalized on a 5 per cent basis, gives a leasing value of $95,960, which is at the rate of $767 a front foot for the Ellis avenue frontage.

The lessee purchased the building, but the terms are withheld. It is the purpose of the lessees to erect on a lot 40x110 feet in the rear a theater with a seating capacity of about 500, and which is expected to cost about $20,000. The plans are being prepared by Architect Albert Anis. The lease was negotiated by Victor Polakow and Henry White, who represented both parties. This lease is the last of several important transactions in this part of the city during the last few months.

GREENWOOD AVENUE.—The new twelve apartment building on Greenwood avenue, 99 feet north of Forty-fifth street, with 100x175 feet of ground, west front, has been sold by Thomas D. Kyle to Hugh R. Stewart, a consideration of $10 being given in the transfer, which is made subject to an incumbrance of $34,000.

The attractive residence property at 4447 Greenwood avenue, comprising a modern three story brick dwelling on a lot with a frontage of 100 feet and a depth of 175 feet, west front, has been sold by Edward I. Bloom to Mrs. Bessie Baumgarden Rosenthal. There also is a garage in the rear. The deed names a consideration of $10, subject to an incumbrance of $11,500, but the actual consideration is said to have been $30,000. J. E. Bistor of W. K. Young & Bro. was the broker, representing both parties to the transaction.

Elsa N. Johnson has conveyed to Janet A. Royer the residence property on Greenwood avenue 385 feet north of Forty-fourth street, with lot 49x127½ feet, west front, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $14,000. The property was first conveyed by the estate of Louisa L. Tabor to Mae Tabor, then by Mae Tabor to Elsa Johnson, who conveyed to the final grantee, a nominal consideration being given.

SIXTY-THIRD STREET.—An undivided half interest in the property at the northwest corner of Sixty-third street and Vernon avenue, 174x125 feet, has been sold by William Kamin to Albert Triester, the consideration being withheld.

GREENWOOD AVENUE.—Joseph I. Cooper and others have purchased from Peter J. Bassett the property in Greenwood avenue 98 feet south of Sixty-sixth street, 50x125 feet, west front, the consideration being withheld.

INGLESIDE AVENUE.—There was filed for record the sale by Gustav G. Anders to William F. Loake of the property in Ingleside avenue, 100 feet south of Fifty-second street, 70x165 feet, east front, a nominal consideration being given in the transfer.

FORTY-FIRST STREET.—Milton E. Robinson has purchased from Samuel P. Parmly the property in East Forty-first street, 255 feet west of Cottage Grove avenue, 147¾x180½ feet, the consideration being nominal.

FIFTIETH STREET.—William Lobell has sold to Harry Birkenstein the property at the northwest corner of Fiftieth and Aberdeen streets, 29x477 feet, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $7,500.

PRAIRIE AVENUE—The six apartment building at 4931-33 Prairie avenue, on a lot 48½ feet, west front, to the elevated road right of way, has been sold by Thomas E. Mayer to William S. Hennessey, a consideration of $10 being given in the transfer, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000.

STATE STREET—The property in South State street, fifty feet north of Garfield boulevard, 75x100 feet, east front, with brick business improvements, has been sold by Morris Bloom to Bert Schreiber, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000.

SITE TAKEN ON LONG LEASE.

Property at Northeast Corner Market and Randolph Streets Figures in Downtown Deal.

The first deal for several weeks in downtown property was closed during the week by Frank G. Hoyne of Frank G. Hoyne & Co., who leased for a long term the property at the northeast corner of Market and Randolph streets, belonging to the Busch estate. The property, which fronts 20 feet on Market street, with a depth of 90⅞ feet on Randolph street, was leased to Dr. William A. Fisher of the Chicago Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat college and hospital for a term of ninety-nine years at a graded annual rent, beginning with $2,500 a year for the first five years, $3,000 for the following five years and $4,000 for the remaining eighty-nine years of the term.

The average annual rent is $3,874, which, capitalized on a 4 per cent basis, gives a leasing value of $96,850, which is at the rate of $53.78 a square foot and $4,843 a front foot for the Market street frontage.

The board of review valued the property at $62,962, of which amount $4,000 is in the building, a two story structure. Under the terms of the lease, Dr. Fisher is to erect within ten years a new building to cost not less than $20,000.

HIGH MASONS GATHER HERE

Thirty-third Degree Lodge Members to Hold Yearly Meeting.

HEAR SERMON TODAY.

Thirty-third degree Masons from the middle west and northwest began arriving in Chicago yesterday for the one hundred and second annual meeting of the supreme council, thirty-third degree Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rites of the northern Masonic jurisdiction of the United States, which begins this morning.

TAME FOR A "WILD WEST."

Judge Landis Investigates Claim That Assets of Show Are but Six Freight Cars.

Federal Judge Landis settled himself yesterday to hear arguments on a motion for an appraissment of the assets of the Young Buffalo Wild West show.

"What are the assets?" asked the court.

"Six freight cars."

"And——," suggested the court.

"That's all."

"Well, it must be a pretty tame show."

"Oh, you see one company owns the cars and another owns the rest of the show."

"Well, I guess I'll have to continue this until Monday, so that I may learn a little more about it," said the court.

FARWELL FIGHTS RUM TAX

Writes President U. S. Should End "Partnership."

PRAISES PEACE POLICY.

But Warns Against Plan for Increasing Revenue.

Arthur Burrage Farwell, president of the Chicago Law and Order league, has written a letter to President Wilson complimenting him upon his efforts to bring about peace in Europe, but expressing disapproval of any plan to increase the tax on intoxicating liquors for revenue purposes.

Mr. Farwell wrote that he hopes the tax on liquors will be taken off altogether and the government "go out of partnership with the liquor business."

Here Is Letter.

The letter was as follows:

"I congratulate you personally on your efforts for peace among the warring nations of Europe.

"I notice with sorrow the attempt of some legislators to increase the tax upon intoxicating liquors as an aid in raising revenue. It would seem as if the time had come when as a nation, a state, or a community we cannot afford to raise revenue on an article which degrades and destroys humanity—namely: intoxicating liquor.

"In 1906 I personally approved of the increase of the license fee in the city of Chicago from $500 to $1,000 a year. I can see now that I made a mistake—that every tax put upon the liquor business helps to postpone its abolishment through the fact that it furnishes public revenues. The city of Chicago receives about $8,000,000 a year from the sale of intoxicating liquors, and it has been estimated by a former saloonkeeper in Danville, Ill., who thoroughly understands the business, that the amount paid for liquor by the people in the city of Chicago was in the neighborhood of $100,000,000 a year.

"Is It Good Business?"

"Is it good business for the city of $15 to $20 for every dollar received from Chicago or the United States to spend that business, not considering the enormous amount of resulting expenses in the administration of our criminal courts and penal institutions?

"In 1911 I spoke to about 1,150 men in the penitentiary at Joliet. The chaplain informed me that at that time there were 158 life men, and all but four or five had committed their crimes while under the influence of liquor. A former state's attorney of this county informed me that intoxicating liquor, the social evil, and gambling were responsible for 75 per cent of the cases that came into the Criminal court of Cook county.

"I trust that the United States government, instead of increasing the tax upon intoxicating liquors, will take it off altogether and go out of partnership with the liquor business."

CASTLES UNFIT FOR HOSPITALS

Stately Homes of England Too Insanitary for Government Use.

SHUN THE COUNTRY.

BY LADY MARY.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—[Special Correspondence.]—"It is an ill wind that blows nobody good," and at least one class of people—the builders and plumbers—are not entirely condemning the war, for it is the existing state of things that has revealed the insanitary condition of many of the oldest and most stately homes of England, which have been refused by the government as hospitals for the wounded.

This has opened the eyes of the owners of noted mansions to the fact that it is time they were put in order. In Scotland, especially, some of the famous castles that Americans have rented in the past are known to be in a most insanitary state.

It was not until the arrival of the young heir that the Roxburghes took it into their heads to find out how they were situated with regard to drainage at Floors. Just before the wonderful baby came the duchess had some experts up from London to explore and to report to her. They informed her that the drainage system was about as antiquated as it well could be and that it was necessary to overhaul it completely, which was done at an enormous cost. Now it is the most up to date castle in all Scotland in this respect.

As for Walmer castle, it was there poor Lady Curzon laid the foundation of her delicate health, which rendered her incapable of fighting the trouble from which she afterwards died. It was not till the late King Edward came to the throne that Balmoral castle had a modern system of drainage installed and a sufficiency of bathrooms added.

Lonsdale Hard Hit by War.

Lord Lonsdale, that plucky, jolly, human peer, is more hit by the war in a personal way than any one else. He was such a real pal of Wilhelm II. I hear all the numerous gifts he received from the kaiser, which used to be displayed so proudly and so conspicuously at Lowther castle, have been removed to the cellars. These include a fine picture of the kaiser himself, which used to hang in the hall and another of Lord Lonsdale, painted by the German ruler and for which Lord Lonsdale went especially to Berlin to sit.

I have the best authority for stating that the owner of the famous yellow vehicles went to Berlin on "his own" to see Wilhelm several weeks ago, when the war was only mooted, in the vain hope that he might do something to maintain peace, but he did not succeed even in seeing the emperor, who managed to get conveniently out of sight.

At many garden parties that take place these afternoons society amuses itself by taking shots at some effigy of his imperious majesty, and the other afternoon no less a personage than Princess Henry of Battenberg had the best aims of all the participants in the game. Which, by the way, recalls a story of her and her nephew.

As a small boy Wilhelm came over here with his mother for the wedding of the late King Edward, at which he was to wear a little uniform for the first time. His aunt, Princess Beatrice, a child herself, and he had been for days quarreling bitterly, and on the auspicious morning when the cocky young German was to disport himself in the gay uniform it was found the tails were cut off the coat. From that day to this his Aunt Beatrice and he have waged war.

No Shooting Parties in Scotland.

Americans have scored in regard to some of the shooting in Scotland, for which early in the season they declined to pay the prices asked. A fabulous sum was demanded for the deer forest of Mull, the property of the new Duke of Argyll, who is one of the best business men in the north.

George Gould was one of those who were after it—it is the finest deer forest in Scotland—but he would not go beyond a certain price, and others of his compatriots were of the same mind. Lord Eglinton, however, is supposed to have given what was demanded.

Now, of course, there are no shooting parties, and when such are erroneously announced in the papers the people whose names are mentioned are furious and promptly write and contradict the statements.

Smart Set Stays in Town.

The Row in Hyde Park will this autumn and winter be the smartest spot in Europe, as all the fashionable people in London mean to assemble there on horseback every morning with the king and Princess Mary. There will, of course, be no hunting this year, which is a matter of tremendous regret to American women like Lady Beatty and the Countess of Ancaster, to mention but two. People must have exercise and to take a morning ride won't be looked upon as if they were amusing themselves. This will mean the revival of breakfast parties to discuss the news of the day.

I hear the Beattys mean to shut up Brooksby hall, their Leicestershire hunting seat. It was to have been all newly decorated for the winter sport. Like all the smart world, Lady Beatty will be in town. She did want badly to join her great friend, Millicent, Duchess of Sutherland, in Belgium, but her lord would not hear of it.

It was an awful trial to the king and his daughter to have to give up their morning rides in the Row all the summer, but as they did not want to have scenes with the suffragists it had to be done. Now, of course, the boisterous dames have loyally ceased, "for the present," from troubling.

BRISCOE

Announces 1915 Car at $785 Completely Equipped

Including electric self-starter, electric lights, generator, one-man mohair top and boot, wood or wire wheels, speedometer, high-tension magneto, windshield, etc.

IN THE BRISCOE you are offered a car not copied from a foreign design, but, in itself, an original foreign masterpiece. Benj. Briscoe has combined in this car all the refinements of European mechanical skill and artistry with American manufacturing efficiency.

No one knows more about American automobile construction methods than Benj. Briscoe. Everyone in the industry knows Briscoe, his record, and the many successes for which he is responsible.

Two years ago he went to Paris, taking with him two experienced automobile engineers. And in co-operation with prominent French and German designers the BRISCOE car was worked out at Billancourt, near Paris, after a most careful study of the best of several foreign practices. Cars were then brought to this country where Briscoe began their production, on a large scale, with infinite pains and fidelity to detail—and with alert discrimination as to the material used.

The BRISCOE has now been fairly launched upon the market as the finished product of several years of painstaking investigation and study—the concentrated effort of prominent engineers from three of the most famous automobile producing countries of the world.

It is the "first French car at an American price."

Over two hundred dealers are now handling it enthusiastically—and expressing their unqualified approval of its excellent performance and freedom from trouble.

It is the "car with the trouble left out": a really well-built, high-grade small car—of as fine materials, of as assured reliability, as highly finished, and as thoroughly out of the ordinary low-value class, as the highest-priced large cars.

Note carefully the following features, boasted of in cars costing $1100 to $1400. You would demand them if you were paying $1500 or $2500. The BRISCOE has them—without additional charge:

French Chassis
French Line body designed by Carrousserie Internationale, Paris
107-inch wheel base
Sunken center headlight
Electric lights
Silent electric starter
Wire wheels (wood optional)
Full floating rear axle
Continental type front axle

Six Passenger Six—$1550

Two New 1915 Models
SIX $1550 Auburn FOUR $1075

Lower Prices and Higher Quality

ANYBODY can make a new "announcement." We are making new cars. Buy your new car of a factory that sold every one of their machines last year. We sold every 1914 Auburn long ago—every one is giving satisfaction. We have none of last year's models to disguise as new cars. The new 1915 Auburns are absolutely new, not changes for the mere sake of changing, but actual improvements. For fourteen years the Auburn has enjoyed a steadily increasing annual business, because we have kept good faith with our customers. These two new Auburn cars are our 1915 proof that the Auburn builders continue their policy of better cars for less money. A factory loaded down with "left-over cars" and handicapped by the loss of business cannot give you as up to date a machine and can not give as much real quality for the money as we can who start this new season with nothing to "live down." Last year we built the Auburn cars the best we knew how. That we sold every one is sufficient evidence that we do know how to build good cars. This season we have improved and are giving more for the money.

You save money, and get a better car, by buying of a successful and permanent factory. Beware of the car whose big argument in its favor is its "cut price." The Auburn is truly a cheap car, one you can afford to buy and afford to drive. It is cheap because it is good. A car that is not properly designed, not properly built and not properly guaranteed by a solid factory is not an economical car no matter how low the price is. Then there is the extra pleasure your Auburn gives you, greater power, greater comfort and convenience, and a longer life of satisfaction. You are never uneasy when driving your Auburn, but always confident and safe.

Judge these new Auburn cars by their Looks, Comfort, Convenience, and their Performance. Then consider the reliable and successful factory behind them with a clean record for 14 years.

A Few of the 1915 Auburn Features

Powerful motor, either Four or Six cylinders, cast en bloc.
Electric starter.
Electric lights.
Stream line bodies.
Access to all four doors.
Instrument board in cowl dash.
Tonneau longer and wider.
Seats larger and upholstery deeper.
Windshield, electric horn, and simple and convenient top with boot.
Crown fenders.
Jump-spark ignition.
Gear driven centrifugal pump, water cooling.
Wheelbase, 126 inches for Six, 114 for Four.
Springs, semi-elliptic front. ¾ elliptic rear.
Demountable rims; tires, 34x4 for Six; 32x4 for Four.
Complete equipment, without extra cost.

Ready For Immediate Delivery

Looks These new Auburn cars have decidedly advanced design that makes them look new and attractive. And this new design has a greater value to you than its outside appearance, for it actually adds to your ease of riding, roomy comfort and convenience. Both the Six and Four have stream line bodies, finished exquisitely with royal blue and the crown fenders, hood and flashings finished with heavy black enamel.

Comfort Where is the pleasure of a car, no matter how good it runs, if it is a constant irritation and a source of discomfort and annoyance? We believe the owner of an automobile is entitled to luxurious comfort in his machine and we provide it in these new Auburns. The design of the bodies, their balance, the distribution of weight, the special springs, the roomy interior, the deep cushioned upholstery all combine with other features to insure maximum comfort. Comfort to which you are entitled and comfort that makes driving an Auburn a perpetual pleasure.

Convenience Auburn conveniences are more than the lack of inconveniences. We give you access to both front doors—and they are wide doors, too. The center control, and the left side drive on the Four and either right or left side drive on the Six has been properly demonstrated as fully meeting all requirements. The electric starter, electric lights, the complete and handy dash equipment and accessibility of all parts are features that help produce Auburn convenience.

Performance We mention this last because it is the most important. It would be unfair to these new Auburn cars to pick out any one particular part and judge the entire car's merits by it. Reliable and efficient performance is the result of the sum total of all parts put together right, made of the right materials, and working as a unit. The value of one part is its co-operation with all other parts. When all parts are correct, then the car as a unit is correct. The performance of the Auburn is the performance of a unit. Quiet, dependable, easily controlled and capable in excess of demands.

Your letter to us will receive instant and personal attention of the executives. Let us give you complete information on thes two new cars. If you are a dealer, or if you want to become one, we can positively give you "inside" facts and figures that will be more than worth your while to write to us.

CHANCE RESIGNS AS YANKEE HEAD, BUT RECALLS IT

Quarrel with Farrell and Devery Believed to Presage Retirement.

IRWIN CAUSE OF FRICTION

New York, Sept. 12.—[Special.]—Manager Frank Chance of the New York Yankees, dissatisfied with the scouting ability of Arthur Irwin and the efforts of the owners to secure new blood for the team, has offered his resignation, to take effect Sept. 15, providing his salary is paid until the end of the season. President Farrell was willing to accept the resignation, but balked at the salary proposition. Therefore Chance declared tonight that he would serve out his contract, which has another year to run, at a salary generally understood to be about $20,000.

The friction which has existed for some time came to a climax after today's game at the Polo grounds, when Chance had an argument with President Farrell and "Big Bill" Devery, former chief of police, who has been a silent owner of a big block of stock. Although the matter appeared to be patched up, it is believed the row presages Chance's ultimate retirement as leader.

Chance Asks Better Players.

The wordy quarrel was the outgrowth of the affairs of the New York club on the field this season. The Yankees have enjoyed one or two spurts which promised to carry them into the first division, but have been doing poorly lately, hovering between sixth and seventh place. The playing of the team has not been pleasing to Chance, who as manager of the Chicago Cubs was used to being in the race, not trailing. He became convinced that he needed more playing strength if the club was to make a better showing. Several days ago he and Owner Farrell discussed the situation.

According to Chance, he told Farrell that it would be necessary to get more ball players. "I can't do any better with the present material," he said, and added that he didn't insist on drawing a big salary for managing the team, which wasn't better than a seventh or eighth place prospect as at present constituted, if the club officials felt they could get along with a less costly manager.

Willing to Quit Job.

The meeting between Chance and Farrell took place last week, but nothing more was done until Farrell received a letter from Chance in Washington bringing up the matter again. Chance offered to resign, if that was considered best, but said he would expect his salary in full for the remainder of the season.

It was the answer to this letter that led to today's developments and unpleasantness. Chance sent word to the newspaper men that he had something to tell them in the clubhouse after the game. When they arrived he showed the Farrell's answer to his letter.

Farrell Balks on Salary.

"Of course you know it was your own proposition to give up the management of this club on Sept. 15, which I accepted much against my wishes," wrote Mr. Farrell in reply, and then went on to say in view of the circumstances he could not see his way clear to accede to Chance's request for a full season's salary.

"I have never interfered with Chance in any way," said Farrell, "and the suggestion about resigning came from him. If he wants to quit on the 15th of his own volition, I don't see why I should be expected to pay him for the rest of the season."

Chance reiterated what he had previously told Farrell—that he was willing to step aside if a cheaper manager was wanted, but that he certainly wasn't considering any resignation that would deprive him of his salary for the full term of the season.

Devery and Chance Quarrel.

Former Chief Devery and Farrell were standing outside the clubhouse when Chance came out and saw them. There were angry words between Chance and "Big Bill," who replied with spirit to a remark by Chance at which he took offense. For an instant it seemed blows would be struck. Chance apologized, but feelings were still ruffled when he retired to the clubhouse to doff his uniform.

"I'll be here next year managing," exclaimed Chance as he walked away, to which Owner Farrell replied: "Well, nobody is trying to get rid of you."

Friction between Chance and Farrell is said to have existed for some time, but the trouble recently was centered on Arthur Irwin, scout of the club. Chance insisted that Irwin be discharged, as he alleged that Irwin had been of no use to the club and was interfering with his management.

HANK O'DAY NOT WORRYING OVER HENDRICKS RUMORS.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—"I'm not going to be canned," declared Hank O'Day when asked if he expected to be succeeded by Jack Hendricks as manager of the Cubs.

"Why, they can't can me," said Hank. "My contract is, of course, a private matter between the club and myself, but you can gamble it isn't for one year. Why should they get rid of me? My team is doing good work. Where is there any reason for firing me?

"I'll be on the job, no matter what they do. I do not believe I am going to be canned, but if I am, you'll find that I'll light on my feet, no matter where I strike. I've got a contract for some years. Just remember that."

Notes of the Cubs.

Viox was put out of the game by Umpire Eason in the middle of the opening contest.

Honus Wagner hit seven fouls in the fifth inning of the second game and then drew a base on balls.

Pete Knisely got his fourth hit since joining the Cubs, when he smashed one at Leonard in the second game. It was too hot to handle.

Heine Zim had the crowd joking him all afternoon and they had something to josh him about, too, for he went to bat eight times and got nary a blow.

Derrick twisted his back in swinging at a ball in the ninth round of the first game. He had to be replaced by Bresnahan and then stayed out of the second.

Manager O'Day announced Bob Fisher, shortstop of the Toronto team, had been procured and would report next week. Fisher was with Brooklyn last season and had his first big league tryout with the Cubs in 1911. He is a sterling fielder, but only a fair hitter.

DOOIN ALSO AWAITS SKIDS BECAUSE OF CLUB SHOWING.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—"Honestly, it looks as if I wouldn't be with the Phillies next year," said Charley (Red) Dooin, manager of the Phillies, as his team left the city early today after an unsuccessful series with the Braves.

Dooin said he would go where the money was, and when Erskine Mayer, one of the Phillies' pitchers, introduced a friend seeking a trial next spring, Dooin remarked: "Guess you'll have to see some one else about that next spring, Ersk."

Dooin said his difference with President Baker was in the method of building up a pennant club. "A couple of hundred dollars," he said, "would have kept Seaton and Doolan from jumping to the Feds. Their departure was fatal to the Phillies' hopes."

PIRATES WRECK CUB FLAG HOPES; TAKE TWIN BILL

Pittsburgh Makes Clean Sweep of Series by Winning Twice, 5-4 and 4-0.

NO LUCK FOR HANK'S MEN

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—Wrecking pennant hopes is the business of the Pittsburgh Pirates these days. By winning both ends of the double header with the Cubs today Clarke's crew made a clean sweep of the series of four games and shattered the flag aspirations of O Day's boys into fragments. The scores were 5 to 4 and 4 to 0.

Any luck that was present today favored the pennant hope wreckers. In the first game the Cubs outhit the home boys two to one, and played better on the defense, but they did not get enough runs. It was a game they deserved, and they might have had it except for a bad decision at the plate in a terrific ninth inning rally.

Bum Guess Ends Game.

The decision was made by a recruit umpire and cut off the tying run after the man had scrambled to the plate, and was lying there apparently as safe as a national bank. But the young umpire seemed lost and made a bad and costly guess. There were two out at the time, and the bad guess ended the game.

Lavender was pitted against Adams in the opening fray, but retired after much suffering in the third round. Hageman finished in good style.

In the second game the Cubs did not do any hitting, getting only three blows off young Kantlehner, while Humphries and Cheney were touched for a total of nine. The defense of the Cubs was bad, and all their fight and ambition seemed gone.

Two exciting innings featured the first game. The Pirates staged a slaughter in the third, getting four runs, and were handed another in the eighth. All this time the Cubs toiled without getting a tally, but in the ninth they put on a tremendous rally which would have tied the score except for a punk guess by a recruit umpire named O'Connor.

Lavender was on the slab for the third round mêlée. Coleman and Adams started the assault with singles and Carey beat out a bunt, filling the bases. Costello singled, scoring Coleman and Adams, and Carey took a chance on scoring when the Cubs loafed after he was at third. He made good because Sweeney pegged wide of the plate.

Costello Scores Fourth Run.

Costello made second on the error and Collins sacrificed. Viox walked and was forced by Konetchy, Costello scoring. Wagner ended the rumpus with a fly ball. There wasn't another ripple of excitement until the eighth, when Carey beat out a bunt. He took third when Hageman pegged wildly to first base and scored on Collins' sacrifice fly.

Saier started the ninth inning rally with a single to right. Heine Zim flied out, but Schulte doubled to right, Saier stopping at third. Sweeney singled and Saier scored, while Schulte stopped at third. Bresnahan hit for Derrick and produced a sacrifice fly, Schulte scoring. Archer singled. Corriden hit for Hageman and singled, sending Sweeney home and Archer to third.

Johnston ran for Corriden and went to second on the first ball pitched. Coleman's throw went to center field and Archer scored while Johnston scooted to third. There Jimmy saw Collins fumble in center and dashed for home. He slid under a high bounce, but didn't reach the plate.

Coleman missed his man on the first stab and went after him a second time as Jimmy scrambled to the plate. He looked to be lying on it when Coleman finally came down on him, but Umpire O'Connor called him out.

Change Lineups in Second.

Both lineups were changed a bit for the second game. O'Day sent Knisely to left field in place of Schulte, as a left hander was on the slab. Corriden took Derrick's place, the latter having injured his back again. Clarke put three more of his recruits in the game to see how they would perform, Siglin and Leonard going to the infield and Collins to the outer garden.

Another third round assault started the Pirates off in front, though only one run was made this time. Young Siglin led off with a blow to right, and after Coleman fanned the recruit stole second. Kantlehner walked and Carey popped to Zim. Costello, who won the first game, made good again with a single to center, scoring Siglin.

Another Run for Pirates.

Nothing more occurred to injure the Cubs until the seventh, when the Pirates drove home another run. With one out, Konetchy beat out a bounder to Corriden and Wagner was hit by a pitched ball. Siglin followed with a single to left, sending Koney home. Wagner was trapped between second and third, but got to third when Sweeney made a bum chuck to Zim. Humphries tightened up in this crisis and fanned Coleman and Kantlehner.

Humphries gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth and Cheney went to the slab. He got in trouble at once when Carey began by beating out a bunt. Costello laid one down toward third and beat it for a hit, and when Cheney heaved the ball to the grandstand Carey got all the way home and Costello reached second.

Collins fanned, but Leonard got an infield single. Konetchy poled to the left for a base, sending Costello in. A wild pitch put Leonard on third and Koney on second, then Wagner walked, filling the bags. Siglin flied to Knisely and Leonard was nailed trying to score after the catch.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 12.—The Irish-American Athletic club of New York today won the senior championships of the National Amateur Athletic union at Homewood field, scoring 61 points. Other leading clubs were the New York Athletic club, 31 points; Chicago Athletic association, 25, and Boston Athletic association, 24 points.

J. Loomis of the Chicago Athletic association, who won the 100 yard dash in the junior championships yesterday, captured the same senior event today, won the 220 yard low hurdles, equaling the senior championship record of :24 4-5, and was first in the running high jump.

Other Chicago athletes also performed well. A. W. Koehler of the Illinois A. C. was second in the discus with a throw of 131 feet 9½ inches and third in the sixteen pound hammer throw with 132 feet 9¾ inches. A teammate of Koehler's, J. W. Ray, was third in the mile run and fourth in the five mile run. Goelitz of the Chicago A. A. won the 120 yard hurdles in :16 1-5 and was second in the 220 yard hurdles. M. Phillips, also a Cherry circler, was second in the pole vault with 12 feet, while D. F. Ahern of the Illinois A. C. won the hop, skip, and jump with 48 feet 6¾ inches.

Weather Against Records.

Rain this morning and the heavy atmosphere this afternoon militated against record breaking in the sprints, but three championship records were made in the field events. Emil J. Muller of the Irish-American Athletic club, New York, broke the former discus throwing championship record by making a throw of 137 feet ½ inch. G. A. Bronder of the Polytechnic Preparatory school Brooklyn, who made a junior championship record for javelin throwing yesterday of 165 feet 2 inches, set a new senior championship mark today with a throw of 166 feet 8½ inches.

A 440 yard hurdle race was run today for the first time in a senior championship meet in this country. W. H. Meanix of the Boston Athletic association made the distance in 57 4-5 seconds, which is one second behind the world's record made by G. R. L. Anderson of England in 1910.

Mel Shepperd Beaten.

Mel W. Shepperd, the famous New York sprinter, who holds the senior championship record for the 880 yard run, did not get a place in that event, which was won by Homer Baker of the New York Athletic club.

A. W. Richards, the American high running jump champion, also failed to make a showing in today's jump.

Villie Kyronen of the Kaleva Athletic club of Brooklyn, who won the five mile junior run yesterday, was victor in the same senior event.

Summary of Meet.

Sixteen pound shot put—Won by Pat J. McDonald, Irish-American A. C., New York, 46 feet 3½ inches; J. C. Lawler, Irish-American A. A., Boston, 44 feet 2¾ inches, second; A. W. Kohler, Illinois A. C., 43 feet 6¼ inches.

BILL TO STEVE.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., September 12.—Steve: Well Steve when I seen my name posted in the club house last Tues. that I was going to be tooken a long to Pittsburgh I figured that O'Day had got orders from Taft and was going to give me a chance to show what s it I am made from and I supose you read in the papers last week that stuff a bout O'Day and Thomas going to loose there job and I figured it was on acct. of O'Day refuseing to let me play that he was going to get fired so him and Thomas got to gether and desided I was to play so Taft would not fire them but we come over to Pittsburgh and O'Day kept me on the bench and did not give me no chance to get in there and I seen it was just like its been all season and I come back to the hotel with Roger Bresnahan after the d. game and I says What do you supose he brung me a long on this trip for and then dont let me get in there and Bresnahan says O did not you know that O Day was figureing on tradeing you to Pittsburgh and thats why you was brung a long and I asked him where did he get the dope and he says that O'Day told him that Pittsburgh was after me and asked him if he thought he should ought to trade me and Bresnahan says if he was O'Day he would not trade me for no body on the Pittsburgh club out side of Wagner and O'Day says All right he would ask Clarke for Wagner and if Clarke would not aggree to give Wagner for me then O'Day would hold on to me and I guess Clarke must of turned O'Day down and would not let loose of Wagner probly because Wagner is a old freind of Clarkes and he dont want to let him go. So the deal has fell threw but may be they will fix up some thing else because I know Clarke is pretty anxius to get a hold of me and why not and I guess may be they will fix it up to trade me for Carey and Viox or may be a couple of there pitchers say Mcquillan and Adams. I will be tickeled to death to come to the Pittsburgh club because I know Clarke will stick me in there regular and the Pittsburgh are way down in the race this year all they need is a man like I and 1 or 2 others to make a ball club out of them and then if I was here I could run home for over sundays when the club was home but of coarse I could not get a way to go home most days because Clarke could not spair me. But it shows that Bresnahan nor O'Day dont neither of them know nothing trying to trade me for Wagner and of coarse I have not got no repitasion like him because I have not had no chance but he is a old man and pretty near threw and I am a young man with 10 or 11 good years in front of me in the future and I bet I can hit just as good as Wagner the best day he ever seen tho of coarse I cant hit nothing while I set on the bench.

The club gos back to Chi tonight and plays there tomorrow and next week the club gos east and I dont know am I going a long or not but if O'Day cant fix up no trade with Pittsburgh he will probly take me east and try to trade me off to 1 of them eastren clubs because he has not got no use for me on acct. of me not being a scared of him. The Cubs needs a short stop and a couple pitchers and may be he could trade me to Boston for this little runt of a Maranville thats to little to hit a ball hard and may be Boston would throw in Tyler. Or may be he could trade me off to N. Y. giants for Fletcher and Marquard or Tesreau. I would certanly like to get with them giants and live in N. Y. and play for Mcgraw who knows how to treat a man and give a man a square deal. I guess that would make the giants some team with I and Robertson and Burns in the outfield and stick me 4th in the batting order to clean up and if I am not a better out fielder than some of them men Mcgraws useing regular I will quit the business. I am glad of 1 thing and that is they is not no chance of me getting traded to Brooklyn because the only man Brooklyns got that would be a even trade for me is Daubert and the Cubs dont need no new 1st base man because Saier is getting a long pretty fare and hitting good and he hits at a ball some thing like I do only he dont get so much strenth in to his swing.

Well Steve what do you think of this here O'Day keeping me on the bench wareing out my pants and sending this here Kniseley up to bat in a pinch and if he only drawed his pay as often as he gets a base hit he would be broke all the time and if the only times it rained was when he got a base hit all the crops would dry up and if the only times we win games was when he broke them up the national comishon would fire us out of the league and stick the Zanesville club in there in our place. Some of the boys says he can hit a ball hard but if he can why dont he and may be he is saveing up his base hits for next year and if he is he should ought to bat 9 hundered when he gets ready to let loose of some of them. And me setting on the bench all the time.

Schulte says the reason O'Days got it in for me is that I dress to good and O'Day dresses good him self but he cant begin to look as swell as me and thats why he is sore on me. Well Steve I guess if I want to get a fare deal I will half to throw a way my good shirts includeing the new 1 I just bought with the big pink and green stripes and throw a way my ice cream suit and all the rest of the swell stuff I got and run a round with a swetter or overalls or some thing but I guess it would not do no good to throw away my close because the close dont make a man and I would not be no rotten looker if I did not ware nothing.

The little girls went over to St Joe for a few days with some freinds of hern and she wont be there to see me tomorrow when I get back and she wont see me for pretty near 3 weeks if I tooken on the eastren trip and may be she will see some body she likes better then me but I guess they is not no danger of that eh Steve. You would not think so if you seen the letter I got from her and it ended up with a lot of little round marks that means kisses. O you Steve. Yours resp'y,

BILL.

TWO WINS MAKE TINX LEADERS

Buffalo Beaten by 6-1, 4-2 Scores, in Both Ends of Doubleheader.

HENDRIX IN STAR ROLE.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sep. 12.—[Special.]—By a fraction of a point Chicago's Federal leaguers went into the lead as the result of a double victory over the Buffaloes, while the Hoofeds dropped a pair to Baltimore.

Claude Hendrix played the part of the iron man and his sterling performance assisted by the slugging of his teammates, enabled the Chifeds to win both games here today. The first score was 6 to 1 and the second 4 to 2, the latter game being called at the end of the eighth inning.

Hendrix pitched the first game, allowing only four hits. Erwin Lange, who started the second, was touched for four hits and two runs in the first four innings. Up to that time Chicago had made only one hit off Krapp. In the fifth they got to the opponent and made four runs off five hits, giving the Tinx a two run lead.

Hendrix Rushed to Rescue.

Hendrix then grabbed his glove, began warming up, and relieved Lange in the last half of the fifth inning. Not the semblance of a hit was made off Claude during the four innings he worked in the second stanza.

The Chifeds looked like their real selves in today's double performance. Probably the presence of President Weeghman may have been an incentive.

Tight pitching by Claude Hendrix and unusual slugging on the part of his teammates gave the Tinx an easy victory over the Buffaloes in the first game by the score of 6 to 1. Russell Ford was knocked out, all the runs being made off him in the first and third innings. He then retired in favor of Lefty Moran, who checked the Chifeds, but Hendrix, with a commanding lead, never allowed the opponents to get near the plate until a freak play in the ninth.

Two were gone and one on when Chase sent a long fly to Zwilling. Dutch caught it, then turned to throw to Flack, and as he did so dropped the ball. Umpire Mannassau ruled it an error. Downey scored and Chase went on to third when no one made any effort to stop him. He died there when Engle fanned for the third out.

Gilmore Pitches First Ball.

President Gilmore pitched the first ball of the first game and Senator Malone, representing Gov. Glynn, pitched the first one in the second game. All the players headed by a band, marched to the center field just before the start of the second game and raised a new flag.

More than 10,000 fans attended the twin bill, the occasion being Greater Buffalo day. Weeghman and Gilmore were honored guests of President Robertson of the Buffalo Feds and took part in the ceremonies.

The Chifeds jumped on to Russell Ford without pity in the first inning of the opening game and pounded out four runs. Flack was out when Zeider singled to left. Wilson drove a safe one to center, Rollie halting at second. Zwilling doubled, scoring Rollie and sending Wilson to third. Wickland bounced a grounder to Chase, and Wilson beat his throw to the plate. Manager Tinker tripled to the center field fence, but overslid the bag and was nipped by Engle. Beck smashed a single to right, but Farrell popped out.

Freak Homer by Wilson.

Art Wilson added another tally in the third when he bagged a freak home run. McDonald backed nearly to the fence the ball hit his glove and bounced among the fans. Wickland poled a single to center and stole second. Tinker drew a pass, and while Chase was playing back Ford wheeled and threw wildly to first.

Notes of the Tinx.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—Hendrix, Lange, Fisk, Jackson, Clemons, and Black did not accompany the team on the trip to Chicago, but went direct to Pittsburgh

Manager Tinker says he will remain in the lineup in every game from now on to the close unless serious injury prevents.

Rankin Johnson and Ad Brennan are slated to pitch the two games in Chicago tomorrow, which will be celebrated as Williams' day.

President Gilmore pitched the first ball and threw wild. He tried another, which was little better. Manager Tinker then yanked him.

President Gilmore of the Federal league and President Weeghman of the Chifeds were met by State Senator John F. Malone as Gov. Glynn's representative and were his guests during the day.

MISS BROWNE KEEPS TITLE.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Miss Mary Browne of Chicago defended her title as tennis champion of the Great Lakes and western New York today by defeating Miss E. E. Rotch of Boston in straight sets. The score was 6-4, 6-2.

Sox Sydelights.

Detroit once more today.

Last chance at the Tigers of 1914 today.

The Sox can't get out of the second division by backing up.

Cobb used to hate to play on Comiskey park because he couldn't hit much there. He may like the place hereafter, as he has made only six hits in the last two games there.

Schalk cut loose a two bagger to left with one out in the ninth and reached third while the side was being retired. Schalk's was one of the few solid raps made by the White Sox.

Wolfgang made a pretty play to get Bush out in the third inning. The Tiger tried to bunt and popped a fly a little way outside the first base line. Wolfgang had to hustle to reach the ball on the fly but nabbed it.

In six of the nine innings the White Sox got the first man up to first base. In two of the other three innings the second man up reached first or second and in the other round two men got on after two were out. In all twenty two White Sox reached first base. Two of them scored.

Two of Manager Callahan's recruits did not tarry long this year. Outfielders Wolfe and Altman were released yesterday to the Lincoln club. Altman was recently purchased from Grand Rapids and Wolfe was recalled lately from Pittsfield where he was planted early last year in the hope he would develop.

SOX FAIL TO HIT IN RIGHT SPOTS; TIGERS WIN, 4-2

Three Cals Fan with Bases Full, While Errors Give Detroit Tallies.

BOOTS BEAT WOLFGANG

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Striking out in the pinches and booting in the tight places cost the White Sox the second game of their final series with the Tigers yesterday, and they literally gave Detroit the 4 to 2 victory.

Errors by Fournier and Wolfgang proved more costly than those made by the rest of the Callahan gang. Fournier's was good for half of Detroit's runs and Wolfgang's for the other half.

In spite of those misplays, however, the Sox would have won the game but for their traditional weak knees while at bat with men on bases. They had chances to score in every one of the nine innings but wasted most of them. Three different Sox struck out with the bases full.

Fournier Fans in Pinch.

Fournier, who just loves to bat against Walter Johnson, was one of the culprits. He left three runners stranded in the third. Roth and Baker were the other two pinch whiffers. They came up one after the other with the bags loaded in the seventh and both fanned.

The Sox did a lot of hitting in passive voice as usual. They worked Reynolds for six passes and two other batsmen were hit by stray curves. In spite of this they could not win, although they made ten safe hits. Only three of these hits passed the infield, and one of those was a Texas leaguer. The Sox scratched Reynolds out of the game in the seventh, but Main held them easily.

Wolfgang outpitched his rivals, allowing only six hits and two passes, but his support was wretched and he threw himself down in one inning. Cobb made half the hits off Wolfgang and his trio included a pair of three baggers. None of them figured in the scoring.

Sox Fail in Opener.

The Callahans fell down on a swell chance in the first, when Demmitt worked a free passage to first and took second on Weaver's suicide. Collins hit to Bush, who cut Demmitt down at third and Shano perished trying to pilfer.

A boot by Weaver gave Moriarty a life with two gone in the second, and he proceeded to steal second and third while Stanage was drawing a pass, but Reynolds skied. Fournier's scratch single and two infield outs worked the big Frenchman around to third in the home half. Baker walked and started a double steal, but Stanage caught Fournier in the ancient bluff throw trap.

Ty Cobb Wastes Triple.

Cobb sailed a three bagger straight over Collins' head with two out in the third, but Manda threw out Crawford. More Sox chances went wrong in their half. Manda walked and was put on second by Wolfgang. Demmitt popped out. Weaver beat out an infield hit and Collins was punctured, filling the bases. Up came Fournier and struck out. But if only Walter Johnson had been pitching!

The same Fournier then blew an easy chance to retire Veach at the beginning of the fourth and gave the Tigers two runs. Burns forced Veach out, but Moriarity doubled and Stanage singled, putting two men across the pan.

Wolfgang's Heave Costly.

Wolfgang himself threw a cinch into the game in the fifth. He passed Vitt, who stole second before anybody was out. Cobb bunted and Wolfgang made a three base wild heave, letting Vitt score. Crawford struck out. Veach hit to Wolfgang, who threw him out at first, but Cobb scored on the play. Burns popped.

The Sox managed to count in the fifth, when a pass to Demmitt and Weaver's bounder put Ray on second with two out. Collins delivered a pinch single, driving Demmitt home. Fournier walked and was forced out by Schalk.

Two infield scratch hits got the Callahans nothing in their sixth because two already were out and Demmitt skied. Two Tigers were out in the seventh when Cobb laced another liner over Collins' head. This time he tried to make four bases on it, but swell hustling by Collins and Weaver nipped him at the pan.

Reynolds Routed in Seventh.

The Callahans drove Reynolds off the mound in the seventh. Weaver, Collins, and Fournier singled, scoring Weaver. Schalk was hit, filling the bases with nobody out. Main was called to the slab. Callahan watched two of his recruits, Roth and Baker, strike out in this pinch, then sent Chappell to bat for Manda. Larry did a little better. He forced Schalk and the side out. Score:

RALLY BY ROBINS IN NINTH ROUND CHECKS BRAVES

Error by James and Cutshaw's Triple Beats Boston Wonders, 4 to 3.

NOW FIRST BY TWO GAMES

Boston, Mass., Sept. 12.—Brooklyn won the first game of the series from Boston, 4 to 3, after the home team apparently had it won. As a result, Boston's lead over New York is now two games. An error by James, together with Cutshaw's triple, gave Brooklyn the winning tally in the ninth.

Boston scored three in the fifth on two errors, a base on balls, and a single. In the eighth two singles, a double, and Maranville's error gave Brooklyn three runs. Score:

GIANTS AND PHILLIES EACH SCORE A SHUTOUT.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 12.—Philadelphia and New York took turns in shutting out each other today, the home team winning the first game, 1 to 0, and the visitors the second, 8 to 0. Alexander held New York to four hits and struck out eight batsmen.

Marquard also was effective, except in the fifth inning. Then Byrne singled and was caught going to third on Paskert's single. The latter took second on the play and scored the run which decided the game on Martin's double. Scores:

HOOFEDS DROP TWO GAMES TO BALTIMORE, 6-4, 2-1.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 12.—Inability of Indianapolis batsmen to hit at opportune times, coupled with sensational fielding by Baltimore, gave the home team a double victory, 6 to 4 and 2 to 1. The double reverse relegated the Hoofeds to second place. Scores:

TWO WINS MAKE TINX LEADERS

Wickland scored, while Joe went to third. Tinker was injured sliding, and Stanley ran for him and replaced him at short.

Flack executed a concrete play in the fourth which robbed Chicago of another run. He singled to center and reached second on Zeider's out. Wilson walked, and with two out a double steal was started. Blair threw wild, and the ball rolled to left field. Flack walked home, but Wilson was caught trying to reach third. The out was made before Flack reached the plate.

Hendrix got out of a bad spot in the sixth when he wabbled and walked Moran, who was forced by Agler, and Downey and Loudon followed with singles, filling the bases. McDonald then hit into a double play, forcing Agler at the plate, and was nipped at first, ending the inning.

Bisons Score Early.

Buffalo went to the front in the second game with a counter in the first round. Chicago had a chance to tie the score in the fourth inning when Zeider, the first man up, drew a pass and stole second, but Wilson, Zwilling, and Wickland fanned in a row.

Buffalo added another run to its count in the fourth. Louden was walked. McDonald singled to left, but kept on running, and was nabbed trying to return to the bag, Wickland to Zeider to Beck. Stanley fumbled Chases' grounder and Louden reached third, from where he scored on Hanford's single, too hot for Zeider to handle. A sharp double play ended the inning.

Eugene Krapp weakened in the fifth and the Chifeds pounced upon him without pity, sending four runs across the plate on timely hitting and a base on balls. One was gone when Beck started trouble with a single and Farrell did likewise. Walsh batted for Lange and walked, filling the bases. Flack singled to center scoring Beck and Farrell. Zeider poled one to center, sending Walsh and Flack across. Wilson fanned and Zwilling beat out a hit, but Wickland died on an easy grounder.

Giants to Play Today.

Chicago and American Giants will meet for the first time in many weeks today at the American Giants grounds and a big crowd of the local negro fans are expected out. The Normals and Senecas will face each other in the only other important contest of the day in semi-pro circles, the clubs being billed to meet at Sixty-first and Racine avenue this morning for the south side championship.

BUTLERS BLANK PACKERS, 10 TO 0

Eliminate Swift Nine from Race for National Amateur Title.

CHRISTOPHERS WIN, 11-2

Butler Brothers' nine, champion of the Merchants league, defeated the Swift & Co. team, 10 to 0, at Tigers park yesterday, thereby eliminating the packers from the national amateur title series.

"Tacks" De Lave allowed the Swifts only five scattered hits and was invincible in the pinches. Butlers scored in the first inning on an error by Wiesner, two infield hits and a base on balls. De Lave's single scored the run. The Merchants league champs cinched the game in the seventh, scoring four runs on singles by Ward, Sullivan, and Asmussen and a double by Martin, and an error by Toemmel also helped. Score:

Title Games Set for Today.

Championship games are billed in many of the amateur baseball leagues for today, among them being the second battle between Henry Clay and the Republics of the Knights of Pythias league at School street and California avenue. The clubs met last Saturday with the Clays taking first blood. Victory for them today will entitle them to meet the E. C. Race for the league pennant. The Chicago and Blue Island teams of the North American Union league will meet at 1:30 o'clock at the American Giants grounds in the second game of the semi-finals.

HOMER IN NINTH WINS FOR YANKS

Sweeney's Wild Throw Gives Macks Tally, Then He Hits Four Bagger.

ATHLETICS BEATEN, 2-1.

New York, Sept. 12.—Sweeney's home run in the ninth inning gave New York a victory over Philadelphia, 2 to 1. The local catcher had allowed the visitors to tie the score in their half of the ninth by hurling the ball to the outfield, in an endeavor to catch Strunk stealing. The wild throw permitted McInnis to score. Daly, a former Philadelphia player, put New York in the running in the eighth with a single which scored Cook, who had doubled.

Keating had the better of Bender in the pitching duel, the local man giving his best exhibition of the season. A double play engineered by Maisel in the second, when Philadelphia had the bases full, was the fielding feature. Score:

K. C. NINES IN TITLE ROUND

University Council Trims Carrolls at Fed Park, 14-4.

O'CONNOR ALLOWS 4 HITS.

Fort Dearborns Blanket Phil Sheridans by Count of 5 to 3.

University and Fort Dearborn councils were victors in the first round of the games for the championship of the Knights of Columbus league yesterday, the north shore council trimming Carroll at the Federal league park, 14 to 4, while Fort Dearborn nosed out Phil Sheridan, 5 to 3, at American Giants' park.

O'Connor twirled a great game for University, holding his opponents to four hits, two of which were scratch, while Murray and Mokate of Carroll were touched for thirteen safeties. Wagner, Tobin, and Keenan were big factors with the stick, while Tobin played a strong fielding game.

"Butch" McKenna twirled a sensational game against Sheridan, allowing the latter club only two hits up to the eighth inning, while he fanned ten. The combat was close to the seventh inning, when Fort Dearborn scored two runs, which decided the battle. Errors by McGarry and Prendergast, combined with a pass, a steal, and a wild pitch by Bellock, were responsible. Scores:

WILLIAMS CELEBRATION FEDERAL FEATURE TODAY.

Friends of Charley Williams will gather at Weeghman park today to pay their homage to the world's greatest baseball secretary. The Williams celebration will be put on as an added attraction to the double header carded between the Tinx and the Buffalo Federals. The rival teams will jump to Chicago from the east, and tonight the Tinkerites will hop back to Pittsburgh to start a series against the Stogies.

Several gifts will be presented to Williams before the ball games start. It is understood that some one has purchased another loving cup for the secretary, and there is at least one other little remembrance which is expected to prove a pleasant surprise to Charley. President Weeghman will have a band present, as well as several vocalists.

The advance sale of seats indicates there will be a big crowd out for the doings. "Booster club" tickets, which sell for $1, will admit the holder and one woman to the grand stand.

ONE MANAGER WILL STICK; HERZOG TO HOLD HIS JOB.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 12.—Buck Herzog will manage the Reds next season. This has been settled with the exception of signing a contract. The directors want Herzy, Buck wants to stay, and the testimonial to be given him tomorrow at Redland field indicates the fans want him.

A double event will be celebrated tomorrow. It will be "Herzog day" and two games will be played with the Cardinals. It is expected the crowd will be the largest in a long time.

Herzog will be given a handsome chest of silver in recognition of his ability as a manager and ball player, his hustling disposition, and fighting spirit.

CUBS' PRESIDENT DENIES JACK HENDRICKS RUMOR.

President Thomas of the Cubs yesterday wired a further denial of the report that he had offered the managership of the west side club to Jack Hendricks, present leader of the Indianapolis team of the American association. In a telegram to his local office Thomas requested his secretary to notify the Chicago papers that there was no truth in the report. Just why he made his hurried trip to Indianapolis last Thursday Thomas neglected to mention. Bobby Fisher, the shortstop secured from Toronto, will make his first appearance with the Cubs today when they line up against the Pirates on the west side.

FINAL LEAGUE CARD TODAY.

City league clubs will play their final games today, an extra game having been added to the schedule by President John Byrnes last Monday to take care of some postponed games earlier in the year. The White Giants have a chance to pass the Tigers in the race by beating the Mutuals. If the Chicago Magnets can down the Tigers at the same time the pennant will belong to Manager Kozlek of the Giants. The Romeos and Ideals, two bitter rivals, will clash in the third game of the day. Games billed are as follows:

Powers Bros. will meet the Berwyns for the championship of the Junior Amateur Baseball league this afternoon at Kedzie avenue and Van Buren street. Each club has lost only one game out of twenty played, and the winner today will become the possessor of the Allen cup, emblematic of the junior amateur championship of Chicago.

SWEITZER CUP GAMES TODAY

The second round in the Sweitzer cup contests for the amateur free-lance baseball championship of Chicago will be staged this afternoon with practically all of the strong clubs left in action. Dope on all the contests favors the home clubs, although some upsets are likely to occur. The schedule follows:

Wilsons at Roseland Eclipse park.
Johnson Tigers and Pirates at Forty-seventh and Indiana avenue.
Cicoros and West Sides at Forty-eighth and Twelfth.
J. N. Cigars and Mathiessens at Logan Square.
Topas and Kramer Colts at Twenty-fifth and South Park.
Century Rubbers and Murleys at Elston and Kedzie.
Loudins and Netzel Trouters at Southport and Marianna.

Inquisitive Fans.

Mason City, Ia.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] Catcher misses the third strike and throws to first base for a putout. [2] Same as question one, only catcher fails to get the runner at first. Does the pitcher get credit for a strike out in both of these cases or only when the batter is retired? No runner on first base in either case. [3] Does pitcher get credit for a strikeout on an attempted bunt [after having two strikes on batter] which goes foul?
E. A. P.

Yes in all three cases.

Louis Shorris, Chicago—The largest paid attendance at the Sox park during the city series of 1911 was 36,308.

Clinton, Ia.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Is a ball batted too fast to be fielded counted as an error?
F. W. BAKER.

Not if the scorer thinks it was too fast to be fielded.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Runner on third base. Batter hits for two bases, but cuts first base. Umpire sees same and ball is returned to first base and base runner is called out. Does the runner on third base score? Umpire ruled he did and that batter is also credited with a base hit.
C. A. READING.

If there were less than two out when the ball was hit the run counted. If there were two out already the run should not count, as the third man never reached first base legally. The scorers, not the umpire, have authority in the matter of crediting base hits, and this could not be a hit.

Raub, Ind.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—B is on second base. A is on third base. A starts for home plate and B goes to third and touches the base. Ball is thrown to catcher, who holds it on home plate before A reaches it. A runs back to third and B runs back to second. Is A out?
E. WILHITE.

Certainly not.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] What year did Cobb become a member of the Detroit team? [2] What is his age? [3] The pitcher stands in box without the ball in his possession, but makes no motion. Is this a balk?
W. G. KIBBY.

[1] In 1905. [2] Twenty-seven. [3] If you mean on the pitcher's plate, it is not a balk. There is no pitcher's "box."

L. L., Bourbon, Ind.—On Sept. 7 Chicago gained one game on New York and one game on Boston, a total of one game gained on the leaders, who were tied.

Herbert Albien, Chicago—Philadelphia Americans won the world's championship in 1911, Boston Americans in 1912, and Philadelphia Americans in 1913.

Battle Creek, Mich.—Editor of The Tribune.]—Batter hits wicked low ball [so fast pitcher could not get his hands down to protect himself], hitting pitcher on shin, the ball rolling out of the diamond half way between home and first base. Batter trotted toward first. First baseman ran after the ball, fielding it three or four feet outside the line, threw to second baseman, who covered first. Umpire called batter out. Was it correct?
W. R. RIPLEY.

Certainly, if the second baseman held the ball on first before the men who hit it reached first. The ball was in play and first touched a fielder on fair ground.

R. W. Clossom, Logansport, Ind.—C is in third place.

L. L. Miller, Fort Madison, Ia.—The pitcher faces northwest.

Pentwater, Mich.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Base runner out at second trying to steal. Second baseman returns ball to pitcher, who delivers it to the batsman before the base runner has time to leave the diamond. Umpire calls strike. Is umpire right?
READER.

The umpire's judgment controls in such cases, but he was foolish to permit play to go on with an unnecessary man on the field.

UMPIRE BECOMES SLEUTH; DISCOVERS "EMERY BALL."

New York, Sept. 12.—[Special.]—When Tommy Connolly, the American league umpire, went to his dressing room after the ball game today between the Yankees and Athletics he had in his possession two scarred baseballs and one small piece of black emery paper.

The balls had been used in the game, and the emery paper he had taken from the glove of Ray Keating, the New York pitcher. He will send the "evidence" to Ban Johnson to see what the president has to say about the newest wrinkle in pitching equipment, the emery ball.

Connolly found the emery paper, about an inch square, in the hollowed out palm of the pitcher's glove, and he confiscated it. The two balls had scraped fuzzy spots about the size of a silver dollar, as if ground against sandpaper.

Surprising Play Due to Chance to Get Increased Pay at St. Louis.

SALARY SCALE SLIDING.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

The other day I ran across the reason for the great race the St. Louis Cardinals are making for the National league pennant this year with a team which was considered something of a tragedy last year—too serious for a joke even. Most people who have discussed it explained the form reversal in Huggins' camp by the trade which he engineered at the expense of Pittsburgh last winter, and surely the correspondingly poor showing of the Pirates would bear out that explanation.

There is no doubt B. Dreyfuss, or whoever was responsible for the Pittsburgh end of that deal with St. Louis, got badly stung, or was chloroformed before consenting. The Pirates gave up a real all round ball player in Miller, one who can play many positions, hit well, run bases better, and a fighter. They gave up a sterling outfielder in Wilson, who never has attracted much attention because he is so quiet about his work, a good deal like Schulte of the Cubs. And they gave up a good pitcher in Robinson. Konetchy was the man Pittsburgh wanted most and Dreyfuss got him. Probably Dreyfuss now knows Konetchy's faults, or at least Fred Clarke does, and is sorry. Harmon may be a better pitcher than Robinson, but we doubt it.

So the trade itself might account for a lot of improvement in the St. Louis Cardinals, but that is not the real reason for the showing they have made. There's another and more potent one.

Work on Sliding Scale.

The Cardinals are working on a sliding scale bonus this year. If the team finishes third or better the players get a bonus of 20 per cent of their regular salaries. If they finish fourth they get a 15 per cent gratuity, and if they lead the second division they get 10 per cent. There isn't much chance they will fail to get at least the 10 per cent bonus.

This arrangement was entered into last spring when the Federal league was making its play for talent. The St. Louis club owners had to raise salaries some, but the tempting bait of a sliding scale gamble was added to other financial inducements to hold the Cardinals in line. As the salary list of the Cardinals is a heavy one—between $80,000 and $90,000 for the season—it is easily figured that the players as a whole stand to win $16,000 or $18,000 if they finish third or better in the race.

That amounts to quite a bit per man. Of course, the world's series receipts are incentive enough to incite any team to play for first place as long as there looks to be a chance, but the Cardinals could not figure themselves pennant contenders last spring, so the cash prices for lower positions are responsible for a lot of the resultant improvement in the team this year.

Life Saver for League.

The outcome has been a life saver for the National league. The St. Louis club was one of the weak sisters last year and the year before, but this season the team has been a winner financially and the owners can afford to pay the bonus, whether it be merely $8,000 or $18,000, and still profit by the arrangement. Also it has helped the old league tide over a rough spot in a bad year.

But the dicker is a bad one for baseball. It will have a harmful effect in the long run. The bonus proposition always has been bad for the game, and several means have been adopted to fight it without entire success. This precedent set by the St. Louis Cardinals is well enough known among ball players so that the men of other teams are likely to seek some such arrangement for next season, and, with the prospect of war conditions continuing, the club owners will not be in position to conduct their own affairs exactly as they would wish.

Other Clubs May Adopt Plan.

The result in the end may be that a lot of teams will be working on bonus scales. At first thought, of course, this seems an all right method of inciting ball players to the limit. It is all right from the players' standpoint, as they cannot lose anything. But any dicker is not equitable unless there is a chance to lose as well as win. In other words, the players are paid high salaries to give the club their best services at all possible times and to do their best to win every game. It should not be necessary to offer them a team bonus to do what they already are well paid for doing. But those in favor of the scheme argue that if the team which wins a pennant is to be rewarded by heavy world's series receipts, it is right to reward teams which make a good fight and fail by one or two places.

That would be all right, too, if the players who loaf and shirk their work did not expect full contract pay, no matter how poorly their team shows in the race. If the players of a team which finished sixth or worse would accept a cut of 20 per cent in salaries it would not be so bad to expect that percentage as a bonus for finishing third or better. But not one in 100 players ever would enter into that sort of a deal, and if he would the players' fraternity wouldn't let him.

So far as known the St. Louis Cardinals are the only major league team working under a bonus arrangement of this sort. There might be a suspicion that the Boston Braves had something of the kind to stir them to that magnificent spurt, but they are nearly all young players with sufficient ambition to explain their great improvement over last year.

BANKARD LEADS GOLFERS IN PLAY FOR CLUB TITLE

Upsets Tradition by Topping Qualifiers at Midlothian with 74 Card.

PAUL HUNTER NEXT BEST

BY J. G. DAVIS.

E. H. Bankard, the former Baltimore player, who helped win the Olympic cup at Grand Rapids, broke into the limelight by leading a field of seventy starters in the qualifying round for the Midlothian club championship yesterday with a score of 74.

Top position in the medal play round generally has been taken by either the Edwards, Hunter, or Phelps family and it was expected that the same order of things would prevail. Bankard, however, was at the top of his game, and, going out in 39 and home in 35, he turned in a card of 74, one stroke over the par of the course.

Best by Four Strokes.

This was four strokes better than the card of Paul Hunter, who was second with 78, while Kenneth Edwards had 79 and Donald Edwards, the present champion, had 80. It was an ideal day for golf, although the course was a little on the slow side from recent rain. The first match round will be played on Tuesday and the battles for premier honors should be hard fought.

In the playoff for the Goodman cup Paul Hunter beat E. L. Ives by a two stroke margin. Paul played from scratch and had totals of 79—78—157. Ives held an allowance of 18, and had a gross of 177, giving him a net of 159.

E. H. Bankard won the three cornered playoff for the choice score prize, 71—1—70, Hunter having 73—scratch—73, and C. W. Booth 81—6—75.

Westward Ho.

G. M. Walker won from H. C. Quest by default; C. L. Peniston defeated W. Kettlestrings, 2 and 1; J. E. Nyman defeated A. L. Goodman, 5 and 4; R. A. McClevey defeated J. A. Hughes, 2 and 1; J. G. Hodgson defeated T. H. Jones, 4 and 3; H. R. Curtis defeated A. A. Basse, 4 and 3; J. R. McGregor defeated E. S. Kennedy, 3 and 2; W. H. Spear defeated L. W. Beebe, 2 and 1.

C. B. Ford, who had a handicap of eleven, defeated T. S. Swirles [6], 1 up, in the final for the Veterans cup. S. C. Bightly had low net in the handicap, getting a card of 88—15—73. Other leading scores were: H. E. Turner, 84—9—75; J. C. Fargo, 96—21—75, and R. B. Wilson, 97—21—76.

Ridge.

Results in the second round for the Directors' cup at Ridge were as follows:

W. S. Kline and G. W. Critchell defeated C. Blackburn and Dr. German, 2 and 1; J. R. McKee and A. D. White defeated W. A. Patterson and M. Levings, 5 and 3; H. S. Graver and H. T. White defeated W. F. Graver and P. S. Graver; J. S. Sanborn and C. A. Nash defeated C. H. Wood and M. Bransfield, 2 and 1; J. K. Lamb and E. L. Baker defeated C. T. Spence and L. C. Hartley, 3 and 1.

M. Le Bosquet had low gross of 78 in the handicap, W. M. Gilmore getting low net of 84—16—68. J. L. Lamb was second with 79, and F. M. Baker third with 82.

Park Ridge.

Several upsets and a number of heavy defeats marked the first round of play for the club championship at Park Ridge. C. E. Cleveland, who was one of the favorites for the title, was defeated by W. Wickersham, 5 and 4. Summary:

H. L. Johnson defeated J. Greiwe, 2 and 1; W. Wickersham defeated C. E. Cleveland, 5 and 4; J. W. Spray defeated C. A. Brooks, 2 and 1; W. W. Smythe defeated R. A. Sundvahl, 4 and 3; W. B. Jackson defeated C. E. Hudson, 5 and 3; C. Dorticos defeated A. F. Johnson, 5 and 3; C. D. Atwell won from E. B. Calvert by default; S. J. Knowles defeated G. M. Lewis, 3 and 2.

E. W. Wagensil won the trophy presented by L. A. Woodworth for the handicap against par, finishing 2 down. W. V. Ghislin was second, 3 down.

Westmoreland.

Results in the first round of the championship and first flight matches at Westmoreland were: J. D. Archer defeated E. F. Fitch, 3 and 2; F. B. Farnsworth defeated C. Schaffer, 1 up; J. M. Boggs defeated W. M. Bond, 1 up, 19 holes; E. L. Angle defeated F. T. Murray, 2 up; W. C. Wilson defeated C. W. Tank, 3 and 2; W. L. Jackson defeated E. M. Ashcraft Jr., 6 and 4; D. McCurrach Jr. defeated F. J. Burns, 2 and 1.

Second flight—J. A. Childs defeated K. King, 1 up, 19 holes; T. R. Hair defeated C. M. Newton, 2 up; W. T. Sheffield defeated R. S. DeGolyer, 3 and 2; A. H. Williams won from T. C. Moulding by default; J. E. D. McMechin defeated C. R. Belknap, 1 up; D. DeGolyer defeated N. J. Bennett, 5 and 4; J. G. S. Orchard defeated J. W. Douglas, 2 up.

J. T. Ling had low gross of 82 in the ball sweepstakes, F. B. Farnsworth finishing second. T. C. Moulding had low net.

Exmoor.

A quartet of veteran golfers headed by D. J. Evans, whose net score resembled a gross total by "Chick" Evans, won the four ball team match at Exmoor with a total of 303. The individual contributions were: D. J. Evans, 96—22—74; R. F. Carr, 100—14—86; R. Mott, 88—13—75; F. P. Boynton, 85—14—71. Total, 303.

Jackson Park.

With the return of Pat McCann from Ireland competitive events at Jackson park again are running smoothly. Mr. McCann, who is master of ceremonies, brought back a number of new ideas from the "ould sod," but as he has not yet gotten rid of his sea legs he has not been able to display his importations to the best advantage. W. N. Moren won the handicap against bogey with a score of 7 up. F. L. Horner was next, 6 up, J. H. Cameron finishing 5 up and D. T. Magill, A. G. Samuelson, and Joseph Pratt, 4 up.

Edgewater.

In the four ball match, aggregate score of partner event at Edgewater, H. A. Lundahl and E. E. Beach, with 173—24—149, were the winners. H. H. Dietrich and H. Pickrell finished second with 175—22—153. Dr. J. B. Ellis won the Directors' cup when he defeated L. E. Baxter by 1 up in the final.

Skokie.

Skokie players competed in the second match round for the club championship and flight cups. The play for the third Saturday cup resulted in a tie between N. A. Street, F. C. Thomas, and W. W. Wheelock. Each finished with a net score of 71. Results in the championship follow:

President's cup—G. Copeland defeated T. Williams, 6 and 5; F. Hale won by default from R. L. Davis; F. W. Hill defeated S. A. Wilmarth, 1 up; M. P. Noyes defeated J. M. Witherspoon, 2 and 1; P. Manchester defeated L. K. Stewart, 4 and 2; match between D. Smith and C. W. Kittleman postponed; G. Ridgeway defeated R. B. Scribner, 3 and 2; N. L. Hoyt defeated D. Lloyd, 3 and 2.

Directors' cup—F. E. Compton defeated G. D. Forrest, 5 and 4; G. H. Leslie defeated E. S. Layman, 5 and 4; match between W. H. King and Thomas Drever postponed; L. P. Moore won by default from L. M. Allen; J. H. Bullen defeated M. C. Shope, 1 up; L. A. Calkins defeated W. E. Burch, 1 up; J. E. Bradstreet defeated F. P. Patton, 3 and 2; B. F. Buck won by default from G. E. Schnur.

Flossmoor.

Warren K. Wood led the big field competing in the qualifying round for the club championship at Flossmoor, having a card of 40—41—81. R. T. Rolfe, the titleholder, qualified with 88. Qualifiers for both the championship and second flight for the T. M. Hardie cup follow:

Championship—Warren K. Wood, 81; G. W. Mosher, 83; George S. Patterson, 83; Morgan Prescott, 85; I. W. Lincoln, 86; J. I. Cooper, 87; C. V. Essroger, 87; R. T. Rolfe, 88; M. R. Kimball, 91; Raymond J. Daly, 92; George McCandless, 92; F. S. Wilson, 93; C. O. Goss, 94; G. W. Ristine Jr., 94; T. M. Hardie, 94; A. B. Cody, 95.

Hardie cup—T. S. Hammond, 95; G. G. Olmsted, 97; E. L. Beatie, 98; W. H. McSurely, 100; Marquis Eaton, 100; C. L. Scroggs, 101; R. M. Shankland, 102; H. P. Henschien, 102; C. C. Paddleford, 102; R. G. Shankland, 104; G. R. Mitchell, 105; O. Remmer, 106; E. K. Findlay, 107; W. N. McChesney, 108; F. W. Root, 110; W. C. Griffith, 110.

Wheaton.

Douglas Tweedie paved the way for a new club champion at Wheaton by defeating S. H. Lyons, the titleholder, 2 up in the first round. George Fisk proved too sturdy for Frank J. Douglas, but "Old Doc" Coffey came through with colors flying, defeating H. A. Schryver, 3 and 2.

Douglas Tweedie eliminated S. H. Lyons, the club champion, in the first match round. Results of the championship matches follow:

First round—J. L. Miller defeated H. W. La Rue, 5 and 4; Douglas H. Tweedie defeated S. H. Lyons, 2 up; George Fix defeated F. J. Douglas, 2 and 1; W. G. Coffey defeated H. A. Schryver, 3 and 2.

La Grange.

Harry Simons defended his club title at La Grange by defeating H. E. Spear, looked upon as a strong contender for the honors this year, in the first match round, by 3 and 1. He also tied N. D. Parsons for the special prize for low score on the pond ninth hole, par 3, both getting a 2. Results of the match play follow:

Championship, first round—S. B. Moody defeated J. M. Pratt, 7 and 6; H. C. Dewey defeated F. J. Gambrill, 6 and 4; C. M. Denise defeated F. L. De Witt, 5 and 4; A. B. Hall defeated R. H. Kidston, 1 up; A. M. Rutzen defeated William Mullin, 1 up, 19 holes; E. M. Hicok defeated J. A. Connell, 2 and 1; W. E. Daniels defeated C. W. Sherman, 2 up; H. C. Simons defeated H. E. Spear, 3 and 1.

Edgebrook.

Results in the first round for the Kirchner cup at Edgebrook were as follows: A. B. S. Wolf defeated M. J. Mellum, 1 up, 20 holes; J. H. Stedman defeated M. E. Gempel, 2 and 1; S. W. Kasehagen won from F. W. Nogens by default; G. J. Crandall defeated C. A. Lahey, 3 and 2; D. G. Heinly defeated A. G. Burt Jr., 6 and 5; T. Reidy defeated P. Hough, 1 up, 19 holes; W. J. Henderson defeated A. F. Wanner, 4 and 2; R. B. Hurd defeated H. D. Weeks, 1 up.

Chicago.

Huntley H. Gilbert had the winning net in the medal competition for the Saturday cup at the Chicago Golf club, coming in with a gross card of 100 and carrying an allowance of 22, which gave him the low net of 78. H. A. Blair finished a stroke behind, with a card of 95—16—79.

Beverly.

W. F. Bode won the eighteen hole handicap event at Beverly with a card of 86—19—67. A. G. Fitch took second with 75—6—69. The qualifying round for the Hooper trophy was decided as follows: W. E. Bode, 86—19—67; A. G. Fitch, 75—6—69; J. A. Mudd Jr., 75—5—70; J. A. Rankin, 90—19—71; E. A. St. John, 85—13—72; F. Eulette, 93—21—72; A. H. Haigh, 85—12—73; C. R. Terry, 81—8—73; P. J. Lawler, 81—7—74; J. A. Bender, 81—7—74; M. A. Donohue Jr., 81—6—75; S. K. Milligan, 83—8—75; C. H. Kingsbury, 83—8—75; A. C. Frudbloom, 83—8—75; J. W. Parker, 93—18—75; W. W. Kennedy, 94—18—76; S. W. Earle, 89—12—77; A. J. Atwater, 87—10—77; H. C. Edmonds, 94—17—77; W. C. Staley, 93—16—77; S. W. Widney, 85—8—77; C. B. Sexton, 92—15—77; B. A. Duffy, 82—5—77; B. Starbird, 94—17—77; H. L. Osman, 95—17—78; W. C. Cook, 92—14—78; W. D. Hurlbut, 98—20—78; F. Nay, 93—15—78; F. F. Holmes, 92—13—79; H. J. Gonden, 99—20—79; W. H. Eagle, 89—9—80; L. R. Maxwell, 89—9—80.

South Shore.

Kenneth P. Edwards led a field of 208 golfers in the qualifying round for the South Shore championship, which he now holds. Kenneth went out in par 35, but extra strokes at the tenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth put him three over coming in for a 38 and 73 total. Edwards' card and the pairings for the first match round follow:

Out—
K. Edwards	4	3	4	5	4	3	5	3	4—35
Par	5	3	5	4	3	3	4	4	4—35
In—
K. Edwards	6	3	5	4	3	4	5	4	4—38	—73
Par	5	3	5	4	3	3	4	4	4—35	—70

Pairings—K. P. Edwards [73] and David L. Tait [81], John M. Tait [80] and R. B. Upham [84], E. I. Stephens [81] and E. J. Lawler [85], and A. F. Henning [80], J. A. Sheean [82] and Dr. Frank Brawley [80] and G. S. Patterson [82], H. M. Sedgewick [87] and C. F. Wiley [81], H. H. Logan [85] and E. F. Olson [80], J. W. Carey [82] and A. C. Jackman [76].

Ridgemoor.

By defeating T. C. Hodge in the final for the club championship at Ridgemoor, J. F. Bailly won the title for the fifth time. Bailly defeated Hodge, 5 and 4, and gained the second victory on the cup. He already holds a cup which he annexed by three wins. L. E. Rein won the H. G. Zander cup when he defeated H. A. Smith by 4 and 3 in the final. Only two matches were decided in the second round for the House Committee cup. C. W. Hageman defeated W. A. Harmon by 3 and 2, while E. A. Herrick defeated J. I. Oswald by 5 and 4. M. J. Fletcher won the blind bogey event, and H. M. Kirk finished second, while W. C. Toles was third.

Windsor.

S. S. Jackson had low gross score of 78 in the qualifying round for the E. P. Cockrell cup at Windsor. Low net went to E. H. Keller with a card of 90—15—75. Qualifying scores with pairings for the first match round are as follows: L. L. Cossett, 94—10—84, and S. S. Jackson, 78—2—76; F. S. Boyden, 91—8—82, and E. W. Rogers, 89—9—80; S. W. Tracey, 95—15—80, and E. E. Harwood, 87—3—84; A. C. McFarland, 85—3—82, and G. E. Smalley, 86—6—80; S. L. Moore, 96—18—78, and L. Brock, 84—7—77; W. S. Eagle, 91—13—78, and J. V. Wiggins, 107—25—82; J. E. Sandmeyer, 84—6—78, and G. W. McFall, 86—6—80; W. W. Seymour, 97—13—84, and E. H. Keller, 90—15—75.

Calumet.

George Lindsay and J. N. McDonald, the intercollegiate champion, will meet in the final for the club championship of Calumet next week as a result of the semi-finals. Lindsay defeated C. F. Grimes, western junior champion, 1 up, while McDonald won from G. E. Folk by 6 and 4.

Onwentsia.

Wallace C. Winter captured the trophy in the match against par at the Onwentsia club, finishing 3 up. He had the best gross of 77, taking 39 out and 38 in, and held an allowance of 5 strokes. Leverett Thompson was second, 83—9, 1 up. A. A. Sprague II. was next in line, 91—14, 3 down.

Glen View.

Forest Hopkins won the blind bogey handicap event at Glen View with a card of 100—23—77; M. K. Wilson took second prize with 87—10—77, while W. P. Dwight was third with 102—26—76.

WORLD AIR RACE OFF: EUROPEAN WAR CAUSE.

New York, Sept. 11.—The round-the world aeroplane race, which was to have started from San Francisco in 1915, has been abandoned by the Panama-Pacific exposition, according to an announcement by the Aero Club of America today. The impossibility of preparation on the part of the foreign aviators was given as the reason. It was stated that a race from New York to San Francisco by the way of the Panama canal may be held instead.

TWO GAELIC GAMES TODAY.

Two Gaelic contests will be staged this afternoon at the Illinois State Gaelic Athletic association park, Forty-sixth street and Kedzie avenue, this afternoon. The feature match will be the hurling game between the leading Brian Borus and the second place Shamrocks. If the former team wins it will practically clinch the title, but a victory for the Shamrocks will place the two teams in a tie. The curtain raiser will be a football scrap between the Shamrocks and the Emmetts, who are battling for second place. Several track and field events also will be on the program.

SPORT ENJOYS BOOM IN BOSTON

CHAMPION IS POPULAR.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

With the Boston Braves making a strong bid for the championship of the National league and with the golf championship stowed away, it looks like a good year for Boston in sport.

Ouimet's win of the amateur golf championship at Ekwanok gave to the Hub its first amateur title. Last year John G. Anderson of Boston was a finalist, and this was the farthest any Massachusetts player had gone in the national classic.

It is doubtful if any player in the country could have scored a more popular win than Ouimet, and while there may be some regret at the failure of Jerome Travers to improve his record by scoring a fifth win, there is no doubt the majority of golfers are pleased that the youthful player who vanquished Harry Vardon and Ed. Ray in the national open event last year should attain the highest amateur honors this country has to offer.

Byers Match for Evans.

Westerners hoped to see Charles Evans Jr. in the final in place of Travers, but the fates decreed otherwise. Some people have been inclined to criticize the western champion for losing to Eben M. Byers in the first round, but the Pittsburgh player is only two strokes behind "Chick" in the ratings, and the fact that he carried Evans to the thirty-ninth hole in the preceding year indicates how close their games are.

Since his sudden rise to fame Ouimet has made many friends. He was popular in England, and on his recent visit to Chicago for the national open tournament he made many friends. His work at Ekwanok further demonstrates that his great feat in winning the national open championship last year was not a fluke.

Local Caddies Promising.

As the new champion rose from the ranks of the caddies, it is pleasing to note that Chicago is producing some boys who may in the near future make golfing history. The great success of the caddie tournament staged by the Chicago District Golf association at Hinsdale was a source of great satisfaction to President Frank S. Peabody and other officials of the new organization, who are trying to make real boys and men of the youngsters who are part and parcel of the game.

The Hinsdale course is 6,072 yards in length with a par of 74, yet several boys, ranging from 15 to 17 years in age, were only a few strokes over par. These youngsters, if given the proper encouragement, should be able to climb to the top of the ranks, as McDermott, Brady, Hagen, and other former caddies have done.

DORAIS TAKES UP DUTIES.

Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—Charley Dorais, Notre Dame's star and 1913 all-American quarter back, who has been engaged as athletic director at Dubuque college, has issued a call for football candidates. About seventy recruits answered and Dorais expressed himself as being very favorably impressed with his new charge. The forward pass in which Dorais is the most proficient man in America, will play a great part in his team's activities. Dorais had a nucleus of seven letter men around which to build his team. Practice will start Monday.

West secured nine tricks.

At trick five, west should have led a club from dummy, in the hope that south had the ace of that suit. West then could have picked up the trumps, put dummy in with the ace of hearts, and by leading clubs from the dummy a second time secured the game.

The argument of west for his play at trick five was as follows:

South was evidently in the position to trump the heart suit, and had north held the ace of clubs, west would have lost his contract had he failed to pull the trumps at tricks five and six.

Winning the game, however, is of far more consequence than fulfilling a contract, and west should have risked his contract for the chance of game.

The play of north was careless in discarding a club, and south played cleverly throughout in refusing to be tricked into a discard of either of his apparently worthless clubs.

Fostoria, O.—[To the Editor.]—A and B are partners. C and D are partners. A bids one no-trump, C passes, B bids two hearts, D bids two no-trump. The bidding is closed. Does A or D play the hand? It is contested that since the original bid of no-trump remains, A should play the hand, even though the raise was made by A's opponent. H. H. H.

Answer—D would play the hand and A would have the original lead. See page 159, Complete Auction Bridge.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—A, B, and C are playing pinochle. A takes the bid. He discards two cards, plays a king of clubs, then finds he only discarded two cards and discards another. If the king of clubs is not covered can he discard the third. L. D.

Answer—A should lose the game and his opponents score double the amount of the bid. This is according to A. P. George of New York, the foremost authority on auction pinochle.

ENGLISH DERBY WINNER NOW OUTSIDE WAR ZONE.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Herman B. Duryea, the American turfman, was advised today that Durbar II., this year's Epsom Derby winner, and Shannon, the winner of several French races, are safe outside the war zone in France. Ten other valuable race horses, however, still are in danger of being captured.

The American negro caretaker in charge of Durbar II. and Shannon, when near Chantilly, twenty-three miles northeast of Paris, wrapped American flags about the horses and fastened to Durbar II. a banner reading:

"This is Durbar II., the English Derby winner. He is neutral."

The horses were permitted to leave the army lines without interference.

PRIOR WINS CONSOLATION.

Dayton, O., Sept. 12.—Tony Prior of San Francisco won the consolation handicap in the final shoot of the Grand American handicap shooting tournament. Prior broke 97 out of a possible 100 targets. F. J. Coburn of Mechanicsburg, O., took second place with a score of 95. There were three tied for third, these being A. H. Caplinger of Xenia, O.; A. C. Connor, Springfield, Ill., and William Whettleaf, Good Cheer, Ia. In the shoot-off, Caplinger broke 19 out of 20 targets, taking third place.

GOLF TITLE WON BY YOUNG ALLIS

Harvard Captain Plays Brilliantly in Intercollegiate Singles.

CLOSE TO COURSE MARK.

Garden City, N. Y., Sept. 12.—In winning the individual championship of the Intercollegiate Golf association on the Garden City Golf club's link today, Edward P. Allis III. of Milwaukee and captain of the Harvard team, came within one stroke of the amateur record of 71 for the course, made by "Chick" Evans of Chicago a year ago.

Allis had his opponent, L. M. Washburn, a Princeton student, who comes from Philadelphia, 10 down in the morning round of eighteen holes, which he made in 72 strokes to 87 by Washburn. Allis put up a splendid game, quite worthy of his reputation as amateur state champion of Wisconsin, while Washburn played indifferently and putted poorly.

At the finish of the first half of the match Allis was so far in the lead with a margin of 10 up on Washburn that the title practically was conceded to him.

From the outset Allis played a steady game and had his opponent 5 down for the first nine holes which the Harvard player had negotiated in thirty-six strokes, two under par.

Victory for Allis.

Coming in Washburn won the tenth in 3 to 4, a beautiful approach landing his ball within a few inches of the hole. Again at the thirteenth a splendid approach enabled him to win another hole in 4 to 5. Allis took the other seven, his incoming strokes for the nine holes being 36 at a total of 72, two under par for the course. Following are the cards:

Allis—Out	3	3	4	4	4	5	5	4	4—36
Washburn—Out	5	3	4	5	5	5	5	6	5—43
Allis—In	4	3	5	4	4	5	4	3	4—36	—72
Washburn—In	3	5	5	6	5	4	5	7	4—44	—87

Washburn Fights Doggedly.

When the pair started out for the second round the match was as good as over, but Washburn stuck to his task pluckily. He halved the first four holes, but lost the fifth. Although hopelessly beaten at this stage, Washburn held Allis to halved holes up to the eighth green, where the match ended, Allis winning by the wide margin of 11 up and 10 to go.

The card for the last eight holes follows:

Allis	4	3	5	5	4	5	6	4
Washburn	4	3	5	5	5	5	6	4

WEST CHICAGO FEATURE CAPTURED BY ARDMORE.

Ardmore, which probably has won more races than any horse now matinéeing on the west side, was the star again yesterday at the West Chicago matinée. He defeated Helen Bondsmore in two hard heats, the last in 2:16½. Rondo Grattan accounted for the free for all trot over Stults Chimes and Trix and showed that he is rounding into his old time form. Jake Weinberg won a nice race with his recent purchase Harry L., which acts like a fast pacer. Summaries:

NOTRE DAME AND INDIANS TO PLAY HERE ON NOV. 14.

Athletic Director Jesse C. Harper of Notre Dame university visited Chicago yesterday and completed arrangements for the use of Comiskey park for the football game between Notre Dame and the Carlisle Indians, to be held on Nov. 14.

Profiting by the mistakes of managers who have attempted to intrust the ticket selling and ticket taking to student volunteers, Harper closed with Secretary Grabiner of the White Sox to handle the pasteboards for the contest, which is expected to attract an immense crowd, especially since the University of Chicago will be playing Illinois at Urbana on that date.

A Notre Dame alumnus will exercise general supervision over the publicity for the game and the handling of tickets, but Grabiner consented to assume direct charge and to man the box offices and turnstiles with experienced men.

SIXTY-SEVEN TURNERS ENTER FOR TRACK MEET.

Sixty-seven contestants representing the International Gymnastic union have filed their entries with the Gymn club of the Hebrew Institute for its annual invitation track and field handicap meet at the institute field next Sunday. These athletes come from fourteen different units of the I. G. U. and are named in nearly every contest of the fourteen on the program.

Altogether nearly 200 athletes are expected to enter, as 150 have registered to date. The list closes tomorrow night. Cups will be awarded the winners of three places in each of the events, while in the twelve mile contest a dozen cups will be presented.

The modified marathon is expected to draw forty long distance men, ten more than the record number of last year. In this event William Kennedy of the I. A. C., will make his first appearance since his illness over a year and a half ago.

BURMAN CUTS MOTOR MARK.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 12.—Bob Burman, in a Peugeot, today established a new world's dirt track record when he drove fifteen miles in 12:47. The new mark, which was made in an official time trial as a feature of the closing day's races at the national implement show at the fair grounds track, broke the old record of 13:30 held by Louis Disbrow.

Burman, who had gone out after the ten, fifteen, and twenty-five mile record, had just completed his nineteenth lap when he blew a rear tire and was compelled to quit at a time when he seemed certain to establish new twenty and twenty-five mile marks.

Soon after Burman had established his new mark, a telegram received from Minneapolis stated that Louis Disbrow in a Simplex Zip also broke the fifteen mile record today. His time, though, was not as good as Burman's, the watches showing 13:03 for the Zip.

BANTAMS TO STAGE FAST GO.

New Orleans, La., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—When Kid Herman of New Orleans meets Eddie Campi of San Francisco, Cal., in twenty rounds at the West Side Athletic club tomorrow the local fight fans will see one of the best scraps staged here in years.

SOCCER SEASON STARTS TODAY

Twenty-six Teams to Compete in Chicago's Ten Leagues This Year.

INCLUDE 500 PLAYERS.

The biggest soccer season in the history of the game in Chicago will open today when the Association Football league of Chicago and the Chicago Soccer league will inaugurate their championship schedules.

The major league will take the field this year with ten teams, while the Chicago Soccer league will start with sixteen, divided into two divisions of eight each. These leagues have a registration of close to 500 players.

As the Cook County and Suburban High School league will have twelve teams in action and the small parks system twenty there will be fifty-eight teams in competition for different titles, while the number of unattached teams such as Elmhurst college, McCormick Theological seminary, and others will bring the list up to seventy.

Many Changes in Teams.

Since last season the clubs in the Association Football League of Chicago have undergone many changes, a number of stars players have transferred to other teams. Pullman, which won both the league championship and the Peel cup last season, has retained most of its regulars. Bill Roberts, the most notable absentee, will play with the Hyde Park Blues. The Joliet team, one of the newcomers in the league, is expected to make a strong showing, as it includes several former Coal City players.

Harry Birchall, goalkeeper for Hyde Park, and Whiteside, one of the Blues regulars, have joined the Bricklayers and Masons.

Rovers Lose Three Players.

The Campbell Rovers who last year gave Pullman a hard fight in the league and Peel cup races, have lost Currie and Armstrong, who have gone to the Mason Park club, while Brand, who played so well at center, has signed with the McDuffs.

Fraser, the McDuff goalkeeper, who was home in Scotland, has joined the English army. The veteran Linley will again play in goal for the Rovers.

The new Washington Heights club, which has one of the best fields in the circuit, will make its league debut. The Calumet club, which last year was part of the Pullman club, will play entirely on its own hook, Valentine Gindra, former secretary of Pullman, being in charge. The Hibernians, composed mostly of West Side Ranger players, are expected to make a good showing.

Games Booked for Today.

Matches scheduled for this afternoon are as follows:

Campbell Rovers and Joliet at Joliet. Referee, Gemmill.
Pullman and McDuffs at Pullman. Referee, Rogers.
Mason Park and Hibernians at Evanston. Referee, Dempsey.
Bricklayers and Masons and Calumets at Forty-eighth avenue and Sixteenth street. Referee, Morris.
Hyde Park Blues and Washington Heights at Fifty-second street and Cottage Grove avenue. Referee, Atkinson.
All games begin at 3 o'clock.

SECTION A.

Norsemen and International Harvesters at Forty-sixth street and Fullerton avenue.
Western Electric and Savia at Twenty-fourth street and Forty-eighth avenue.
Cambridge United and Campbell Rover Juniors at Peel park.

SECTION B.

Ogden Park and Manchester United at Ogden park.
West Side Bohemians and Lincoln Park at West Side Driving park, Twelfth street and Central avenue.

WINDY CITY BOWLERS TO LIFT LID TOMORROW.

Bowlers are getting ready for the 1914 season, the big start being billed for a week from tomorrow. The Windy City league will get away tomorrow, once more setting the pace for the city. Ten clubs have signed the schedule this year and all look stronger than ever before. The following week the big leagues like the City, Randolph, and Business Men's will get under way, while many of the big organizations on the outskirts also will start play.

Indications point to at least forty leagues shooting in the loop district, nearly all of them from business houses or fraternal societies. Two leagues will be the only representatives in the "major" class, the City at Flenner's and the Randolph at Bensinger's Randolph alleys. Some of the outside leagues are organizing with strong clubs and may demand membership in the all star aggregations.

Some novelties in the way of competition are promised the players. The City league has arranged to start at 8 o'clock sharp and put on two-man and individual contests after the big show. The minor events will carry their own prize money and run all season. Many will start their games earlier than in former years and prospects are that all leagues eventually will start at 8 o'clock.

CATHOLICS PICK DIRECTORS.

At the initial meeting of the Catholic High School Athletic league at the Great Northern hotel the following board of control for the coming year was elected: President, J. F. Walsh, St. Ignatius college; vice president, the Rev. J. J. Barthouski, St. Rita's college; secretary, Brother Peter, Holy Trinity High school; treasurer, Brother Sylvester, De La Salle institute. The league comprises the high school department of De Paul university, the same of Loyola university, De La Salle institute, St. Rita's college, Holy Trinity High school, St. Cyril's college, St. Patrick's academy, and St. Philip's High school. The schedule for the coming football season will be completed this week.

Badgers Get Chicago "Prep."

Madison, Wis., Sept. 12.—William Carter, the star Chicago prep school athlete, has announced his intention of entering the University of Wisconsin in the fall. Carter, who was a member of the University High school team which captured the Michigan interscholastic meet and later won Stagg's meet, is one of the fastest sprinters in the country. He ran the hundred in :09 4-5 at Ann Arbor, but the mark was not allowed on account of a light wind which was blowing down the track.

Lawrence Holds N. E. Pennant.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 12.—The New England league baseball season closed today, Lawrence regaining the pennant, which it won in 1912 and lost to Lowell last year. Worcester, Portland, Lynn, Lowell, Lewiston, Haverhill, and Manchester finished in that order.

REIGN OF NEGRO IN RING CIRCLES NEARING AN END

Few Colored Fighters Left; All Are in the Heavyweight Class.

ONE STILL IS CHAMPION

By RAY C. PEARSON.

Has it occurred to you that the reign of the negro fighter in pugilism is near an end? A bunch of fighting men congregated in a Chicago gymnasium the other day were discussing the doings of the game, when one of them, Johnny Coulon, the wee Chicago boy who lost his title of champion bantam weight of the world recently to "Kid" Williams, remarked that "we won't have to swap punches with the black boys much longer."

Coulon's dope is right. The little bantam weight had been studying the situation, not only in his own class, but from top to bottom, and further conversation developed the fact that the colored fighter is about through. Here's what Johnny said:

"The only really good negro fighters in the game today are big fellows. There are four of them who stand head and shoulders over any of the few other dusky battlers. There is Jack Johnson, who all must acknowledge is the champion heavyweight of the world; there is Sam Langford, the Boston "Tar Baby," who is some classy chap, and who would like nothing better than a chance to take the championship away from Johnson; there is Joe Jeanette, who classes a notch lower in ability than Johnson and Langford, and there is old Sam McVey, who still is able to hit up a fast clip, and who is pretty evenly matched with Jeanette.

"All of the members of this quartet are heavyweights. Dropping to the middleweight division, we find that there is not a colored fighter capable of coming even close to copping the championship. We have no recognized champion, even of the white race, in this class, but the best of the boys are Jimmy Clabby, Eddie McGoorty, George Chip, Jack Dillon, and Al McCoy. Mike Gibbons, the clever St. Paul battler, who does not hesitate to swap punches with the middleweights, claims that he is a welterweight, and that he can make the weight for that class. Whether he can or not makes little difference, for it can be said for Mike that he is good enough to hold his own with the 'middles.'

No Negro Welters.

"A glance at the welterweights shows that there isn't a negro fighter to be reckoned with, and, as a matter of fact, there are only a couple of white boys who are of any account.

"Dropping another notch to the lightweights, we find this class also bereft of negroes. We find among the white millers a Britisher, Freddie Welsh, the champion, and also a pretty fair lot of contenders, including Willie Ritchie, the ex-champion, Charley White of Chicago, who has been going at high speed of late, and Ad Wolgast, the Michigan 'Bearcat,' who refuses to be considered out of the running, and a few others.

"In the featherweight and bantamweight classes there are no negroes today. In fact, we never even hear of any colored boy who is starting out with any sign of promise, so it would seem that before very long the classy negro boys of the ring will be a thing of the past."

Coulon's Dope Correct.

Coulon certainly has figured the dope out in correct fashion. Where not so many years ago we had some wonderful negro battlers, today we have only a few, and all of those are members of the heavyweight brigade. The one, Jack Johnson, who is champion, probably will be the last to hold the world's honors for many years to come, and those who are wise hold the belief that Johnson is near the end of the championship rope.

Where are the Joe Gans, the Joe Walcotts, the George Dixons, the Steve Crosbys, and a few others who have made history in the ring? Gans, many contend, was the greatest lightweight that ever donned a padded mitt. He had all that any fighter could have, and that included cleverness, ring generalship, and the punch with power behind it to score a knockout with one swing. He was a brilliant, offensive battler, and his defensive ability could not be beaten.

Then there was George Dixon. They called him "Little Chocolate," and he was a wonderfully clever bantamweight and featherweight. He met all the white boys that cared to stack up against him, and acquitted himself more than creditably. He never received a bad beating until Terry McGovern met him and knocked him out in a New York ring. Methods of living not calculated to produce a long life caused the death of Dixon not long after he had entered his thirties, and there never has been a colored fighter of his weight and inches since who could be compared with him.

War Helps Johnson.

The present situation, as far as the negro fighters is concerned, is more than gloomy. Just how long Jack Johnson will be able to hold on to the crown he won by defeating Tommy Burns is a matter of speculation, and a lot depends on conditions. The war in Europe will enable big Jack to hang on to the crown probably as long as the war lasts, for Jack will hardly return to this country and take a chance on being "pinched." When he fights again it probably will be in Europe, or possibly in Australia.

Aside from the war angle, there is another which deeply concerns Jack Johnson. His battle of twenty rounds with Frank Moran in Paris a few months ago showed most plainly that he is not the smart miller who defeated Burns and Jim Flynn and pounded Jim Jeffries into defeat in the latter's "comeback" effort. When a novice like Moran can stay twenty rounds with Johnson, it is evident that the negro has gone back a long way.

Johnson probably is aware that he is nearly through, and naturally will make every effort to keep out of the actual ring contests. He will be aided by the war, and the chances are we may have a negro champion for a year, and perhaps more, but after that the first good white man who comes along will be made a heavy favorite for victory over the black.

Chance for Langford.

There are many who follow closely the doings of the ring who think that Langford is the master of Johnson today. For the last few years the champion has made every effort to avoid having to clash with the "Tar Baby." He has succeeded, and Langford never has had a chance to cop the championship. Langford undoubtedly will last longer than Johnson as a ringster, and it is even possible that Sam may some day win the world's title. But if he does so he will have to do it by fighting a white man who has defeated Jack Johnson.

Johnson had a taste of that wonderful wallop possessed by the "Tar Baby" before he became the title holder. He fought fifteen rounds with Sam at Chelsea, Mass., and his cleverness enabled him to win the decision. Langford didn't like that verdict, and has been trying to reverse it ever since, but Jack always has evaded the issue, and many maintain that in so doing he has shown great wisdom.

Little need be said about Jeanette and McVey. Both may now be considered oldtimers, for they have put in long service in the game, and never have been strong enough to win the title. Their part in the game of pugilism has been that of meal tickets for Johnson and Langford.

HE'S A REAL ESTATER WHEN HE'S NOT FIGHTING.

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

Mike Gibbons, nicknamed the "St. Paul Phantom" because of his extreme cleverness in the ring, is a self-made boxer. He laid the foundation for his later success practically without instruction while a member of the St. Paul Y. M. C. A., where boxing was permitted and encouraged. Of course he polished off his tactics after observing other fighters of reputation, but he made his start toward fame and fortune before he had an opportunity to study masters in the art of self-defense.

Aside from the usual qualities to be found in the successful ringster, two features stand out in Gibbons' sparring. One is the way he shifts his head to avoid a blow. This is one of his best defensive moves, which he picked up early in his career and perfected, he asserts, after watching Abe Attel in action. The other is a sort of right hand feint which is possessed by no other fighter of prominence now before the public. Gibbons himself was not aware of this feint until his attention was called to it by an experienced instructor. This fact simply strengthens the assertion that Mike is a self-made boxer.

The Gibbons of the prize ring and the Gibbons of natty street clothes are two entirely different persons. Stripped for action, Gibbons is a powerful looking young fellow of pugnacious appearance and mien. Outside the ring he might pass for a worker in any genteel profession, providing he kept his left ear away from the interviewer.

That "cauliflower ear" was received in one of Mike's earliest, hardest, and least profitable battles. The aftermath of the bout, as a matter of fact, nearly kept him from a profession which has enabled him to accumulate a fortune of $60,000 when only 26 years old after six years in the professional arena.

Here is Mike's version of the affair:

"I had just won my first professional fight from a boxer named Ray Moore, stopping him in the third round. The fight took place in the woods near White Bear Lake, Minn., and 200 or 300 people went out on the street cars to see it. My end was $40, which looked pretty good to me.

"Full of confidence, I was matched against a fellow named Herbert Catherwood for another bush fight, with a purse of $25 for my end. Catherwood had a pretty good reputation in the northwest, and to my way of thinking he deserved it. Well, sir, the first ten rounds of that fight were awful. He gave me this 'tin ear' and this broken nose, the only two permanent marks I ever got in the ring. He certainly handed me a fine beating for ten rounds, but I came strong at the end and earned a draw.

"I was so marked up that I had to lay off my work in the Great Northern shops for several days and, of course, father knew of it and said that was all with the gloves for me. One night a couple of weeks later I heard some one come to the door and ask, 'Does Mike Gibbons, the boxer, live here?'

"I could hear the old man's answer, 'Now, you git out of here. He's retired.' For father thought the caller was a promoter come to sign me for another fight.

"The funny part of it was he was not a promoter, but a deputy sheriff from Stillwater, who had come to pinch me, for the authorities were trying to stamp out bush fighting. The deputy was a good fellow, so he left without telling the old man about the pinch, but got me later and I had to go to Stillwater, where I was fined $1 and costs, the total amounting to $27.50. So I got a purse of $25, a 'tin ear,' a broken nose, several days off work, and court costs of $27.50 from that one fight. I did quit for a time, but, of course, went back to the game; and I have no reason to regret my connection with pugilism."

Michael Joseph Gibbons was born July 20, 1888, at St. Paul, Minn., where his father was employed as a dyer in the Great Northern shops. He comes of good Irish fighting stock, for both his father and mother were born in County Mayo, emigrating to the United States two years before Mike was born. Gibbons Sr. is nearly 70 years old but hale and hearty.

"I suppose you are good to your folks and support your father in his advanced years?" queried the faithful biographer.

"O, no; I guess he supported me and could do it now if it were necessary," laughed Mike.

Three brothers and three sisters comprise the rest of the family. Jack, one of the older brothers, now employed by the Great Northern railroad, once was amateur catch as catch can wrestling champion of the northwest, but did not amount to much as a professional. He was also a fair boxer, and it was from him Mike received his first pointers. A younger brother, Tom, has a good name among the middleweights and an especially good name with Brother Mike.

Mike attended the Gorman grade school in St. Paul and went to the Mechanic Arts high school for two years at night while under a four year apprenticeship as a sheet metal worker, which paid $1 per day at the start and $2 per day the last year of his four years' apprenticeship, after which Mike earned $3.75 for a nine hour day as a journeyman. Gibbons became an apprentice when 16 years old, and quit his trade in 1911, when his fights became numerous enough to require his entire time.

When Brother Jack was married Mike borrowed his membership card in the St. Paul Y. M. C. A. and tried his hand at wrestling, then drifted into boxing. In 1908 he was appointed boxing instructor at the Y. M. C. A. at a salary of $10 a month for a class once a week. At one time he had thirty-seven pupils, including Brother Tom, who became a proficient boxer after six months' instruction. Mike held this job for two years, meantime continuing at his trade, and was succeeded by Brother Tom.

Gibbons fought his first professional battle, after several appearances at stags, against Ray Moore in 1908, as previously referred to. Then came the Catherwood fight, temporary retirement, and reëntry into the ring. Because boxing was against the law, purses were small, and Mike was well satisfied to battle for $50 and $75 purses.

By the time he was married, in 1909, Mike had saved between $800 and $900 from his ring winnings and earnings as a sheet metal worker. He took a wedding trip to Seattle and spent the balance in furnishing his house, a bit of extravagance he never regretted.

When his reputation grew and purses became larger Mike still had the same love of home, and he now owns a comfortable ten room residence on Como lake, valued at $10,000, where two sons, Robert, 3 years old, and Jack, 2 years old, play on the lake sand.

The balance of Gibbons' $60,000 fortune is invested in real estate and mortgages on St. Paul property. His real estate he improves as fast as he is able with houses and bungalows, which he sells or rents. Because he is a natural mechanic, Mike does considerable work around his buildings himself. Before he retires he will have more houses and bungalows from his earnings, and when his ring days are over he will devote his time to caring for his property interests.

WHITE OFFERED $25,000 FOR MILWAUKEE BOUTS.

Charley White yesterday received an offer of $25,000 for three bouts before the National Sporting club of Milwaukee. Frank Mulkern, matchmaker for the club, came from the Cream city and put the proposition up to Nate Lewis, White's manager. Mulkern demanded that the club be allowed to name White's opponent in each bout, and also to set the dates for the contests. In return he agreed to place the promised guarantee in a Milwaukee bank, making it payable to White in three installments.

Lightweight Champion Freddie Welsh is one of the prospective opponents for White, and for that reason the local battler's manager hesitated over the rather flattering offer. Mulkern refused to say in which of the three contests the champion would be pitted against White. Lewis contends that if his fighter should defeat the titleholder in the first of the three mills his value as an attraction would far exceed the price set by the Wisconsin promoter.

Mulkern then put forth a counter proposition, offering White a guarantee of $10,000 for each bout should he defeat Welsh in the first of the series at his club. Lewis asked time to discuss the matter with White, and Mulkern returned to Milwaukee without clinching matters. He intends to return today and it seems likely that a satisfactory agreement will be reached.

Billy Nolan, former manager of Battling Nelson and Willie Ritchie, dropped into town yesterday in search of a new "meal ticket." Nolan declares he has arranged to take over the management of two leading fighters, but refuses to mention any names.

JAMES B. HAGGIN DIES AT NEWPORT

Known to Turf World as Owner of Salvator and Mighty Hamburg.

WEALTH FROM MINING.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 12.—[Special.]—James B. Haggin of New York, Newport, and Lexington died at his Newport summer home tonight, after an illness of four weeks. Mrs. Haggin was with her husband when he died. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral. Mr. Haggin was nearing his ninety-fourth birthday.

SKETCH OF HAGGIN'S CAREER.

James B. Haggin, born at Harrodsburg, Ky., was known as the greatest owner of thoroughbred race horses in the world. One story of his parentage relates that his father, a native of Kentucky, married a Turkish woman who had embraced the Christian faith and had fled from her native land to escape persecution. Her surname was Ben Ali, and this became incorporated into the name of the son, James Ben Ali Haggin.

Haggin went to California with the gold seekers of 1849, but instead of digging gold he began the practice of law with his brother-in-law, Lloyd Tevis. They purchased a large ranch eight miles from Sacramento.

Made Fortune in Mining.

Haggin then turned to mining. Associated with Marcus Daly and Senator Hearst, a remarkable trio of mining experts none of whom had the benefits of a technical mining education, he rapidly became rich. Their operations extended from Alaska to Chile. Haggin has owned or controlled more than a hundred mines. His interest in the famous Anaconda sold for $9,000,000. Another mine in South America was so rich that he built a railroad eighty miles long at a cost of $2,000,000 to carry its ore to market.

Haggin began as a horse breeder in 1881 on a moderate scale on the California creasing the holdings until 1912, when he Rancho del Paso and the breeding place of the famous race house Salvator. As his California ranch grew, Haggin turned back to his native state, Kentucky, and the blue grass region. Here he bought the "Elmendorf" breeding farm, increasing the holding until 1912, when he held 10,000 acres and was noted as the largest individual land owner in the state. He was said to have owned three times as many thoroughbred race horses as any other man. Three of them, Salvator, Miss Woodford, and Firenzi, earned more than $350,000 in racing prizes.

Bred Famous Racehorses.

Some famous horses have passed through the paddock gates of either the California or Kentucky farms—Tremont, the unbeaten 2 year old; Protector, winner of the Junior champion; Ben Ali, winner of the Kentucky Derby; Nasturtium, which was sold for $50,000; Kinley Mack, Ben Holliday, the long distance champion of his day; Longstreet, conqueror of Salvator, and the mighty Hamburg.

Mr. Haggin's fortune has been variously estimated between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000.

BIG TROUT LOVE A SMALL STREAM Says Neal Brown

ARTICLE VIII.

[Copyright: 1914: By Neal Brown.]

If, happily, you have stocked a stream with trout, that stream will always seem a little different to you from other streams. Originally I stocked Plover River, and year by year have added to its tsore. This makes me feel a proprietary interest in its population—a sense of attachment not evokable by the trout of any other stream. I regard these Plover trout as mine own—a bon droit. Not that I am jealous of the regard borne by others, but no others can make up the sum of my affection. It is paternal and seigniorial.

When I fish for the trout of other streams I feel as though I were accosting gentlemen without an introduction and liable to meet cool aloofness. The Embarrass was always one of these stranger streams; it is a neighboring principality, and I have lately been trying to establish diplomatic relations with it. On one glorious day, although new to its mysteries, I caught a 3½ pound brook trout with a Reuben Wood fly mounted on a No. 10 hook, etc. (Here fill in descriptive details from forms found in any book of angling experiences.)

This monster was resting just above a big rock at the foot of a rapids down which the stream fell into a darksome pool below. He had doubtless refused the advances of many down-stream fishermen who came at him from above with awkward splashings. Educated to meet these frontal attacks, he did not look for danger from below.

I waded up to him from the silent pool and dropped my fly over the rock. I am sure this unlooked-for approach was his undoing, for he struck the fly like a leaping tiger, and roared down upon me with the roaring torrent that split upon the rock.

For the moment it seemed as though he was the hunter and I the hunted, and I could see nothing friendly or complaisant in his broad back.

He was as a giant that had lured me to his lair and would show me no mercy. He invoked the aid of a hundred snags and overhanging boughs and subjected me to hairbreadth escapes that chilled my blood. During this fearful struggle I thought of my own kindly Plover trout, and of how old acquaintance had softened their asperities, and wished that I might have had a longer friendship with this giant, so that he could accord me more courtesy.

Such is the subconscious strangeness of new streams.

This feeling also affects me when I journey across the boundary of my own state into another—say, Illinois. I have a feeling that the inhabitants and local institutions must be a little different from those of my own state. And I cannot be made to feel entirely at home in this new environment, even after I learn that a jury has just freed an admitted homicide, or that the county treasurer has just absconded with the county funds, or that the mayor has been arrested for graft, or that they are about to dedicate a Carnegie library—although events of this kind place a common likeness on all parts of our great country.

But even as one star differeth from another star in glory, so does one stream differ from another in trout. It may be imagination, but the trout in some streams seem to have more fight and ferocity than those in other streams. While there are goodly numbers of large trout in the Evergreen, there are myriads of small ones. The angler who takes pride in numbers can have his fill in this stream.

The Embarrass trout run larger in size than those in the Evergreen, and the same with the Plover trout. In Red River and the Wolf the trout run fairly well in size. Large streams do not always have the largest trout. Big trout seem to love a small stream—perhaps because of the colder water. The food supply of a stream has much to do with the size and number of its trout.

Trout vary in color according to their habitat. In dark waters, or on dark stream beds, the trout are apt to be dark colored, although this does not obtain as to recent arrivals from a lighter colored dwelling place. It is a mistake to suppose that trout favor swift waters, for water may be too swift for them. They don't like to be at constant effort to maintain themselves against a swift, tumultuous current. Even in a rapids the trout will be found lurking in still nooks, behind rocks, or in eddies, and not in the swiftest water. It is hard for big trout to maintain themselves in very swift waters.

Trout do not go into such water in the early spring. They wait until warm weather, and then seek swift water to some extent, because it is aerated better and is more comfortable than the still places.

I think that the trout below a rapids or fall run into the tumbling water now and then just as people on a hot day will hunt for a place where there is a breeze.

These are the habits of the brook trout, but the rainbow trout loves rapid water, and is generally found in such water.

Brook trout are at home in long, sluggish bayous of cold water, or in cold spring ponds. They like muddy beds as well as those that are clean. In fact, stream beds in places are too clean to be attractive to them.

Trout streams have a common likeness, and yet each is different from every other.

Plover River is almost on the divide between the waters that flow into the St. Lawrence and those that reach the tropic Gulf. In places these waters are not over a mile apart.

This stream is one of big springs, some of them an acre or two in extent. These lie near the shore of the river.

Within a distance of three miles north of the east and west road to Birnamwood there are five of these springs. Four of them are in places from six to eight feet in depth. Apparently the trout run in and out of them during the entire year, but do most congregate there in the winter time. In these springs the water seems to come mostly from the bottom in many jets, but usually around the edge of each spring is also a circle of smaller oozing springs that flow into the central basin. The volume of water that proceeds from some of these springs is enough to be navigable for an ordinary skiff.

In ordinary winter weather some of these springs remain open in whole or in part, but a few inches of ice will form in the coldest weather, thawing out quickly from below when the weather moderates.

In the spring at the head of Long Bayou there is always a large school of trout lying on the bottom, the water, clear as crystal, being about seven feet deep. It is not usual to find so many large springs so close together, but there are many notable springs on the trout streams of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Some of these are almost large enough to be called lakes. There are some noted springs on Red River, on the Embarrass, and on Prairie River. Sometimes one of these springs is like a cup or bowl lying in the hills, the head reservoir of a winding stream. Then, again, a spring will be a deep, black gulf in a cedar swamp, overhung with century old trees.

There is a charm and fascination about one of these springs impossible of description or analysis. It has a mysterious and subtle life and vitality—"ageless and immortal."

What causes it, where does it come from where is it born? One longs to be able to trace it to its sources in some far-off surface pond, or lake, or swamp, or under mighty hills, or high elevated plateaus.

In some of these springs you cannot see the place of the incoming waters, but in others you can look down to the bottom and see a hundred fountains pushing up from unknown depths.

Midway between the Eau Claire River and the Plover, on the Birnamwood road, there is a range of high hills. At the foot of these hills, on the western slope, Mow Brook rushes out and flows westward to the Eau Claire, crossing and recrossing the road. Many years ago I stocked it with brook trout, and have never replenished the supply, yet they have multiplied exceedingly in this cold, abundant water, that never changes with any drought.

On the eastern slope of this dividing ridge, and only a mile distant and directly east from the sources of Mow Brook, another stream gushes out of these hills and flows into the Plover close to my shack. Somewhere under these hills is the common ancestry of these two brooks. I only wish that I could have made early intercession and had Mow Brook diverted to the eastern slope so that it could have joined its volume to my own brook. The Eau Claire would not have missed it, and it would have made my brook a little king among brooks.

In all generations springs have been loved of men. The Bible chroniclers often dwell upon them in terms of endearment, and they are worshiped in the desert places of the earth.

A land without springs is lonely indeed. In many sections of Wisconsin there is a dearth of springs, yet here in the north we have a wilderness of them. Our riches in springs becomes a commonplace with us. To appreciate springs one must cross the vast arid plains farther west, where springs are not.

The American pioneer often built his cabin near a spring. Sometimes this was remote from a highway, being abandoned later for a more accessible site. The ruins of these ancient homes still linger around many springs.

FOOTBALL PLAY BEGUN BY PREPS

Englewood Defeats Alumni, 6-1, in First Game of Local Season.

GOOD FORM DISPLAYED.

BY PREP.

With less than four days' practice Englewood High school, aspirant for the Chicago league football title, opened the local gridiron season yesterday with a victory over the alumni, winning, 6 to 0, in spectacular fashion, at Ogden park. The work of the high schoolers was surprisingly polished for such early season form, and their triumph over an aggregation representing several collegiate stars also was commendable.

Only five minutes remained before the final whistle, when Quarter Back Wolfe, intercepting a forward pass, dashed through a broken field, shaking off three tacklers, and placed the ball behind the goal posts after a sixty yard run. Previous to this sensational sprint Englewood had carried the ball down the field twenty yards on short plunges.

Alumni Strong at First.

Honors of the opening period went to the alumni when they marched down the field by a series of short gains, placing the ball on the undergraduates' ten yard line. Here the high schoolers' defense stiffened and the former students were thrown for a loss, with the ball being exchanged on downs.

There was little to choose between the two teams in the second session, but in the third the school team wore down its older opponents and marched steadily and consistently down the field until the fifteen yard line was reached. Here a fumble proved costly.

The excellent condition of Coach Baradell's students was shown in the fact that not once during the game was time taken out because of injury, despite the fact that the scrap was as fiercely played as a league contest.

Heffner a Ground Gainer.

Heffner's line plunging gained many yards for the school squad, while Palmer featured with his off tackle and end runs. Lineup:

FOOTBALL DRILL ON STAGG FIELD STARTS IN WEEK

THIRTY-NINE FOR SQUAD

BY MAROON.

One week from tomorrow thirty-nine of Coach Stagg's gridiron huskies will assemble for their first coaching drill of the year at the Midway. They will be rushed through drill in tackling, kicking, and signal formations with feverish haste, for only eleven days are allowed for practice until the first conference struggle with Indiana at Stagg field on Oct. 3. The period of early coaching is very short.

Conference rules prohibit drill under coaches previous to Sept. 20. As this date falls on Sunday this year, the coaches must put off glancing over their candidates until the following day.

Maroons Fear First Game.

The imminence of the first game is beginning to assume large importance in the eyes o fthe Maroon fans. Certainty of victory is not as decided as formerly, in view of the fact that the Hoosiers will be in charge of a new man in Coach Childs, Jimmy Sheldon's successor. The Chicago rooters point out the fact that a new coach will have new tricks, and will be on his mettle against a championship contender like Chicago.

The lack of regulars in the Maroon line and backfield, and the short space of time allowed for filling the places of such conference stars as Norgren, Pierce, Harris, and Goettler, lost by graduation; Baumbartner, who is playing professional baseball, and Scanlon, who left the university, adds uncertainty to the outcome.

Squad of 39 Candidates.

Coach Stagg yesterday went over the list of athletes who will be aspirants for regular places on the 1914 eleven. He has written to thirty-nine candidates. Six are "C" winners from last year's triumphant machine; four are leftover substitute players who took part in some of the 1913 games, and one is a holdover from the 1912 eleven. Three men from last year's varsity squad will augment the list of candidates.

In addition to the fourteen varsity squad men who will report, Stagg has heard from nineteen of last year's freshmen. Six football probabilities who were not with the squads last year also have been enlisted.

The coach has compiled statistics on the availability of all the football players who have a chance to make the team. In addition to data Des Jardien, Russell, Gray, Shull, Huntingdon, and Sparks, the "C" winners of last year, he has the weight of every possibility for the squad. Whiting, a line man from last year's substitute staff, weighs 178 pounds; Stegeman, an end, weighs 178; Acker, Pierce's understudy at full back, weighs 174 and Boyd, used occasionally at quarter back, is rated at 152 pounds.

Coutchie to Seek Berth.

Coutchie, who won his "C" as half back on the 1912 team, which was runnerup to Wisconsin for the conference title, weighs 160. Coutchie did not play as a regular last year. Fowler McConnell, a lineman on last year's staff, weighs [illegible], and his brother, Robert ("Doc"), an aspirant for quarter, weighs 150. [illegible] Redmon, the giant from Peru, Ind., scales 280. He was a candidate for guard last year.

A list of six half backs from last year's freshman eleven will make competition keen for the position opposite "Dolly" Gray. "Jack" Agar, 156 pounds, and Louis Berger, half back on the championship Wisconsin team of 1912, and a member of the victorious Cardinal basketball five the same year, played in many of the freshman-varsity brushes last year at half for the green team. Berger weighs 158. Other half backs are John Edgeworth, 145 pounds; Parker Kendall, [illegible]; J. E. Lee, 158; and Alfred O'Connor, [illegible]. The vacancy in the full back position will be contested for by two of last year's freshmen, De Witt Dobson, a 152 pound player, and Walter Schafer, a 165 pound hope.

Two Pilots After Job.

Runnersup for the job at quarter will be Harold Gordon, 150 pounds, and [illegible] Knipschild, a 145 pound field general. Four sophomores will be eager to break into the varsity lineup at end. These are A. P. Parker, who weighs [illegible], and three heavier contestants, Willis Gowens, 167; Buell Patterson, [illegible]; and Frank Roddy, 170.

The tackles on the heavy green team last year were John Albert, former Wendell Phillips captain, a 212 pound wrestler and weight thrower, and Philbrick Jackson, formerly of the Evanston academy team. Jackson is a 180 pounder. C. E. Fisher was an additional tackle. Guards on last fall's junior team were Paul Hardinger, 205 pounds, and Eugene [illegible], rated at 165 pounds.

Athletes who will be available for varsity play this year, but who did not play on the elevens last fall also were discussed by Coach Stagg. The possibilities are R. C. White, a 185 pound lineman; James Flood, 182 pounds, who can fill in at tackle or full back; J. Kahn, a [illegible] pound player; James Tharp, 170 pounds, a candidate for end; W. H. Hart, 180, and William Walker, 190 pounds.

Maroon fans will be satisfied with the weight of their team if the men can be whipped into shape in the short practice time of eleven days. The outlook is for a huskier team than the Maroons have sent on the field in years.

New London Eastern Winner.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 12.—The Eastern Baseball association closed its season today with New London an easy winner, having won eighty-one games and lost thirty-five. Waterbury was second with sixty-nine games won and fifty-one lost. Bridgeport, Hartford, Springfield, Pittsfield, New Haven, and New Britain finished in the order named.

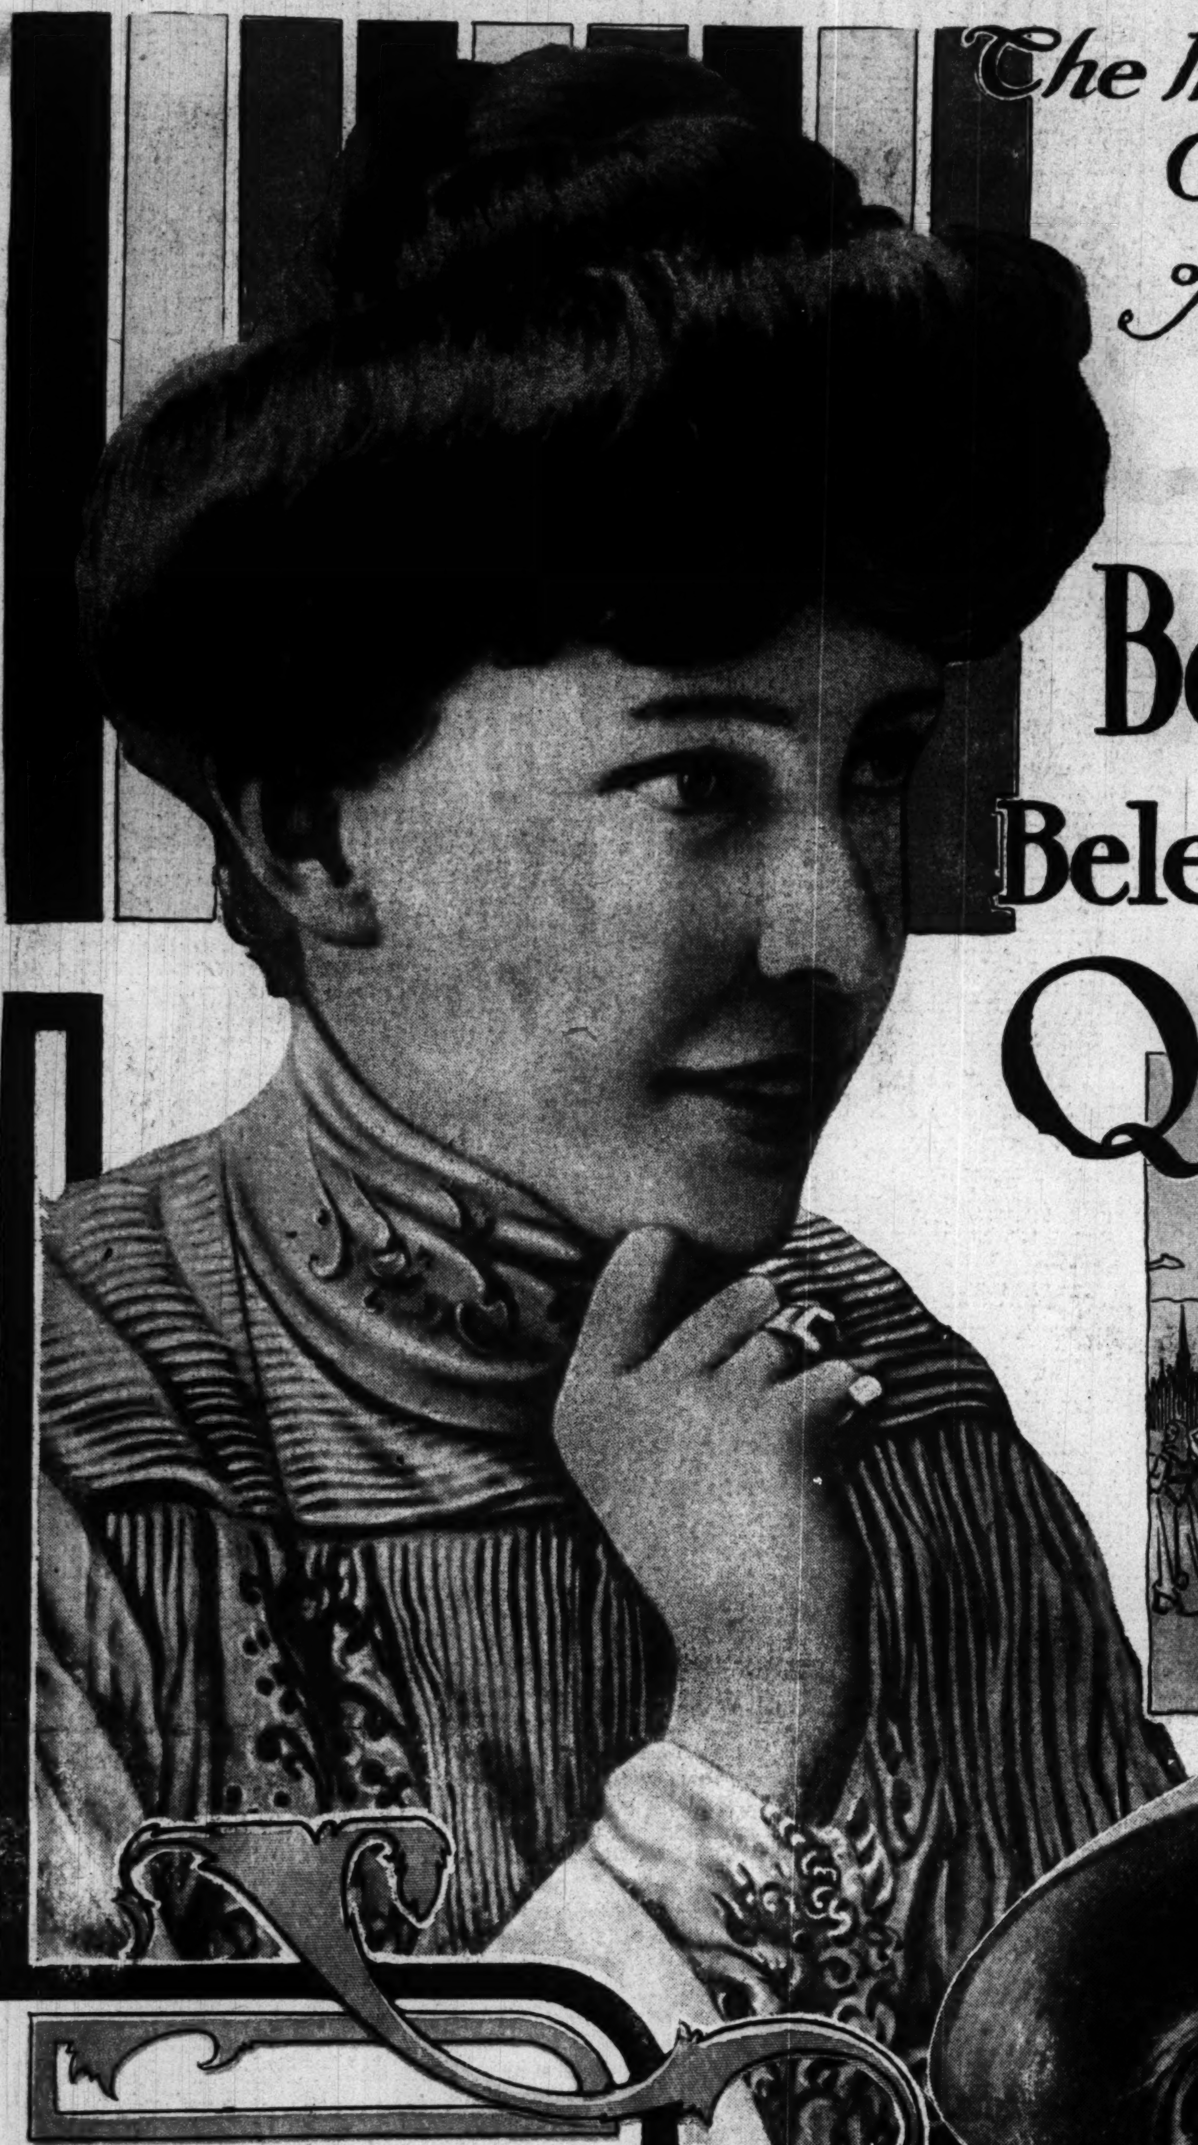
The Inspiration of her Husband, the Idol of her Children, the Angel of her People, Belgium's Beleaguered QUEEN



Queen ELIZABETH

HAVE you ever worked and slaved and sacrificed to build a home and furnish it, and then been forced, suddenly, in the midst of the realization of your highest hopes, to stand by and watch it go up in flames? Have you ever felt the inexpressible sorrow attendant upon a catastrophe that dashed to the ground your castle for the erection of which you had struggled so industriously, that eclipsed your sun of happiness, and engulfed in the shadows your dream which had become reality?

If you have, you can realize to some extent the sorrow that suddenly has descended upon the young and beautiful Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, formerly Princess of Bavaria. After inspiring her devoted husband, Albert I., third king of the Belgians, in his successful fight to live down the reputation of a profligate predecessor on the throne, to reconstruct the finances and commerce of the nation, and to rule happily and peacefully, she has seen her country thrown, unwillingly and almost as an innocent bystander, into a titanic struggle for the military supremacy of Europe. The cataclysm came quickly.

Family Flees from Brussels.

It was night. Queen Elizabeth, one of the most beautiful and acknowledged the most intellectual queen in all Europe, had gathered about her the royal children, Crown Prince Leopold, aged 13; Prince Charles, aged 11, and the little madcap Princess Marie José, aged 11. Their kinsmen, the enemy, were advancing upon the capital city.

The order for the peaceful evacuation of Brussels was given. In a few hours the national offices were transferred to the ancient and heavily fortified town of Antwerp, and the queen and her children fled from their palace in Brussels and took refuge in an unaccustomed home. The young king had assumed command of the army, and the mother and children were left alone.

The tiny kingdom, which has seen only three rulers, and yet has become powerful financially and commercially, is disrupted, its fields laid waste, its men mustered into service in a conflict in which the Belgians have no interest, and its fate as a nation hung in the balance.

The king had shown his deep interest in his people by going to the front to assume command of the army and repel the invaders. The queen, with the heroic self-sacrifice she has always evinced, and which has endeared her to the hearts of her people, left her children in the care of guardians and governesses, and enrolled as a Red Cross nurse.

Bright Hopes Shattered.

This is the sorrow that has suddenly been heaped upon the lovable and lovely queen of Belgium. This is the shattering of her hopes for a peaceful, prosperous, and happy reign, the crumbling of her ideals, the disturbance of her dreams, which, as the guiding genius and inspiration of her ambitious husband, she bade fair to realize in actuality.

Now she can but rely upon the caprices of fate, which may elect that the Belgian kingdom no longer shall exist, the royal rank of its sovereigns be nullified, the king and queen and the heir apparent be thrown into the world as untitled persons who needs must toil for a living.

It is a sudden blasting of hopes which has brought sorrow to the young and affectionate Queen Elizabeth. Since their accession to the throne, upon the death of the profligate King Leopold II., King Albert I. and his wife, who was Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria, daughter of Duke Charles Theodore, have fought great difficulties, met many handicaps, and emerged triumphantly.

First of all, they had to live down the reputation of the licentious Leopold, Albert's uncle. The people no longer respected, they even hated that aged monarch; and there was dissension when Albert ascended the throne, and anarchy was evident everywhere. The aged Leopold, whose only legitimate son was mysteriously killed, prepared a book of advice to the then Crown Prince Albert, only son of Leopold's younger brother, ostensibly for Albert to follow on his succession to the crown.

It was a repulsive book, and parts of it became public through a woman of the demi-monde, often among the guests at the late king's gay parties, who gained knowledge of the book's contents by clever wheedling. It had as a title "How to Become a Successful King, Libertine, and Financier," and it counseled immorality, even licentiousness; cruelty to subjects, enmity toward the other members of the royal family, including wife and children; heartlessness in all things, and advised against the cultivation of literary or artistic friends, or the encouragement of education and art.

Direct Opposite of His Uncle.

That the barbaric precepts were not heeded by the ambitious young king has since been shown by his activities in the encouragement of the commercial, literary, and artistic prestige of his country, the complete democracy of his manner and his dress and living. He is a devoted husband and an affectionate father, averse to pomp and display, affable and free in manner, profoundly interested in social and economic questions, and, as is his wife, an artist of no mean ability.

When the Princess Elizabeth assumed the duties of housewife in the royal palace in Brussels she found it denuded of its statuary, rare paintings, tapestries, bric-à-brac, silver plate, expensive furniture, and ornaments of all kinds. It was like entering a beautiful home from which poverty had taken the furnishings. It was the result of the late King Leopold's determination to circumvent his daughters' ambitions and leave them practically poverty stricken.

What with this disposal of the beautiful furnishings of the royal palace, the consequent scandal brought about through the suit of the daughters to share in the immense fortune of their dead father, the shameful stories circulated by the late king, the Congo exposé, and the demoralized condition of state affairs, the young king and queen entered upon a tremendous task when they assumed the rulership of Belgium and undertook to make their reign happy and successful.

They were successful from the first; their people loved and respected them, and their work has been as conscientiously devoted to the welfare of their subjects as their personal lives have been devoted to the principle of democracy. Yet, in the midst of their triumphs, their work has been halted. Herself a princess of one of the principalities of the German empire, Queen Elizabeth has found herself beset by her kinsmen, her royal palace taken from her, and the land under her husband's rule overrun with blood thirsting armies.

And of little Prince Leopold, heir to the throne; his brother, Prince Charles, and his sister, Princess Marie José, what shall be their fate? The outcome of the conflict which has engaged the powers of Europe shall decide.

PARIS, THE MOST STRONGLY FORTIFIED CITY IN THE WORLD.

THE fortifications guarding Paris may be said to form three circles, though the individual forts are not connected except by temporary works. Speaking generally the closer one gets to the center the more antiquated are the defenses, but many of these have been modernized and probably all of them are supplied with the lat st type of guns.

The smallest circle consists of a solid wall of masonry eighteen feet high and twenty-one miles long. It surrounds the part of the city best known to the American tourist, an area of about thirty square miles.

The second circle is formed by seventeen forts, between which temporary defenses can be thrown up at certain strategic points. They are located at intervals about two miles from the wall and are intended as miniature fortresses. They form a circle thirty-four miles in length. Both the inner wall and these central defenses have undergone the attack of the German invader, but they have been rearmed and remodeled and strengthened with modern ordnance in the intervening years.

The outer line of works is of a more modern type and form an entrenched camp on the heights commanding the valley of the rivers Seine, Marne, and Oise, along which an invading army must march. The forts of the 1874-75 French type are armed with from twenty-four to sixty guns and from 600 to 1,200 men are needed to man them. The redoubts, batteries, and annex batteries for the most part are equipped with six guns and 200 men. An exact description of the location, number, and kind of ordnance used of course is not possible, but it is supposed that rapid fire guns, rifles throwing projectiles of from thirty-nine to eighty-eight pounds, and breech loading rifled mortars using a projectile of from 220 to 470 pounds are included in the armament of these works.

The forts of the outer circle are so located that their long range guns can throw shells into an advancing column from two or more directions. This circle is seventy-five miles long and it is estimated that a besieging force would of necessity have a front of 100 miles in extent.

Nearly $800,000,000 has been spent in the building and remodeling of the forts of the three circles, and military authorities believe that at least 3,000 guns are contained within them.

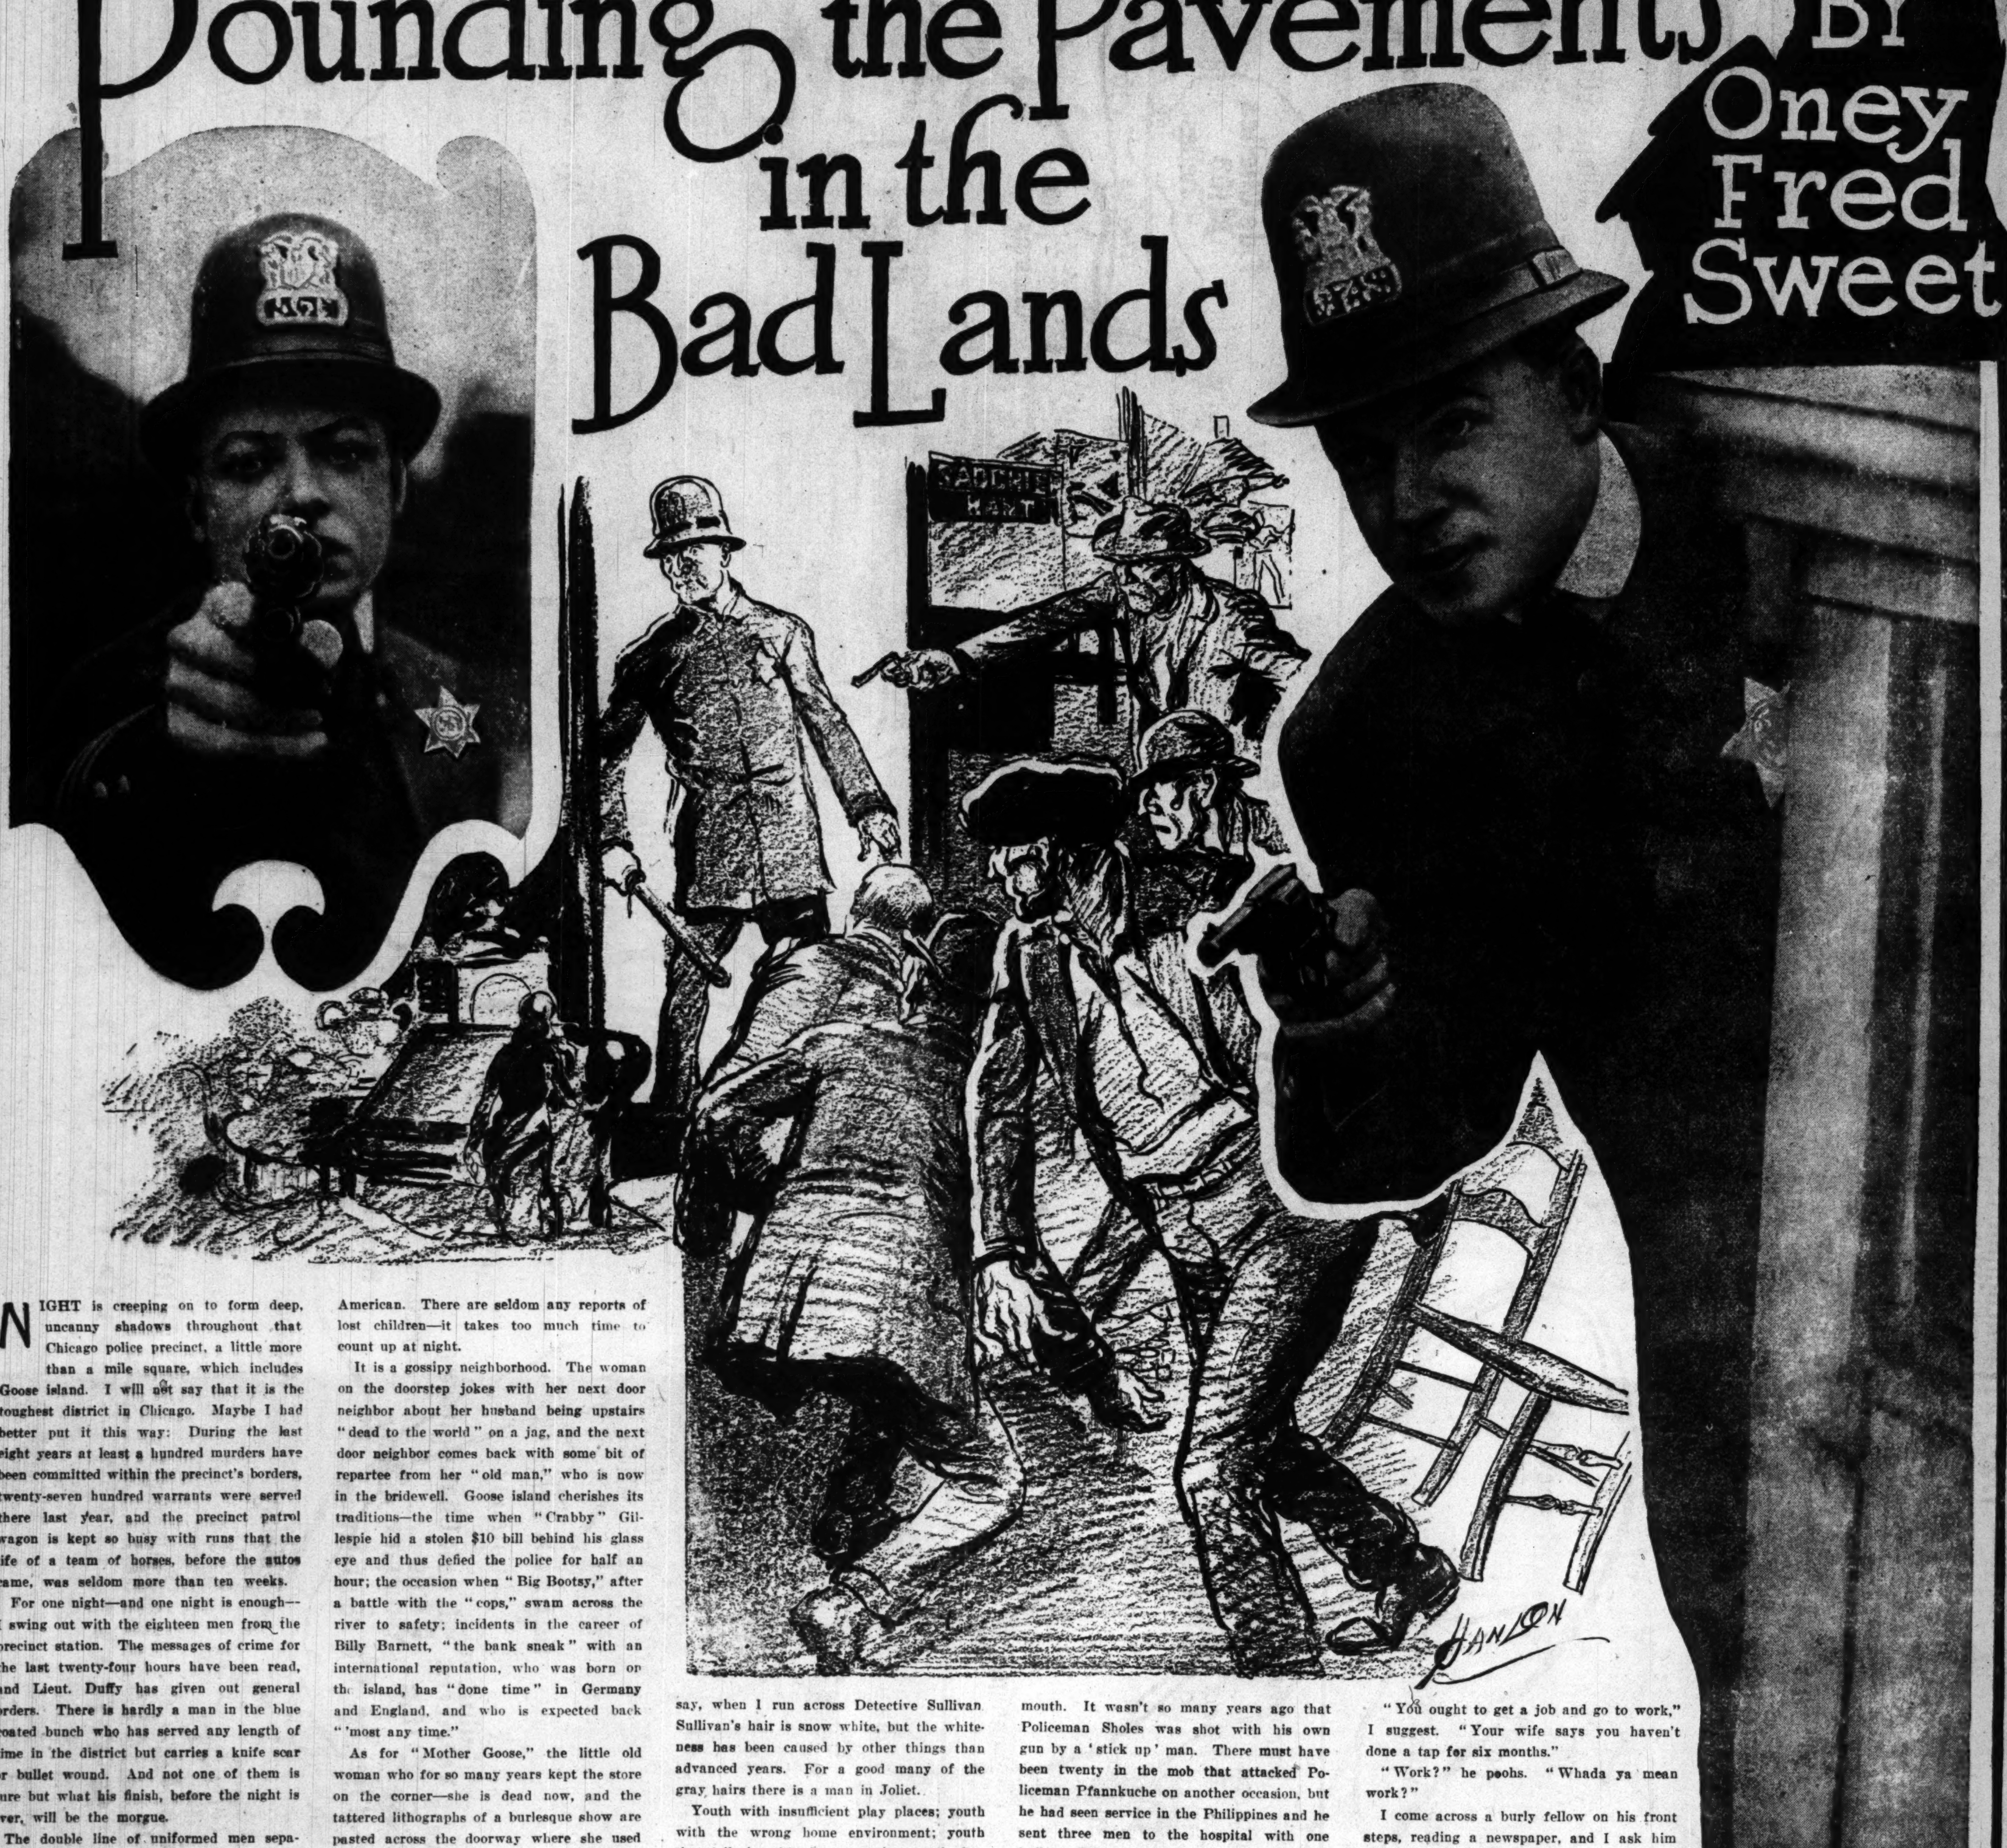
Armored trains can be run along the hundreds of miles of tracks within the circles of these defensive works and these trains can be stopped, the guns aimed and fired, and the train started on its way in less than a minute.

Many of the forts have revolving turrets and steel cupolas much like the forts at Liege, and nothing can be seen of the forts except the muzzles of the guns and the steel domes sheltering them.

At the beginning of the war it was estimated by military men who knew the position and strength of the Paris fortifications that at least 500,000 men would be needed to invest the city, not to speak of the forces necessary to protect the rear and the lines of communication of such besieging army. To man the defenses an army of 170,000 would be required.

Pounding the Pavements in the Bad Lands

BY Oney Fred Sweet



NIGHT is creeping on to form deep, uncanny shadows throughout that Chicago police precinct, a little more than a mile square, which includes Goose island. I will not say that it is the toughest district in Chicago. Maybe I had better put it this way: During the last eight years at least a hundred murders have been committed within the precinct's borders, twenty-seven hundred warrants were served there last year, and the precinct patrol wagon is kept so busy with runs that the life of a team of horses, before the autos came, was seldom more than ten weeks.

For one night—and one night is enough—I swing out with the eighteen men from the precinct station. The messages of crime for the last twenty-four hours have been read, and Lieut. Duffy has given out general orders. There is hardly a man in the blue coated bunch who has served any length of time in the district but carries a knife scar or bullet wound. And not one of them is sure but what his finish, before the night is over, will be the morgue.

The double line of uniformed men separates—each man to patrol his own dark corner. The great darkened factory buildings lend dangerous looking shadows, but there are at least 330 bright lights—the lights from that many saloons. In this tilting frame house close to the street lived "Reddy, the Fox" before death ended his crimes. That dim light in a window farther down the street—the ex-convict loves his old haunts—is from the room of "Milwaukee Avenue Dutch," just released from the Missouri penitentiary. This old shack was the rendezvous of "Dayton Sam's gang," and there is the dark alley where "gun toting" "Red Julia" and "Black Polly" were captured. Here is the corner where the "car barn bandits" plotted in their braggadocio days, before the gallows claimed them. And there is the particular corner that is haunted by the curses and bullet cracks that accompanied at least a dozen murders committed within the last ten years.

Goose Island Is Gossipy.

I swing over toward Goose island myself. Factories and elevators and ice plants are silhouetted against the glare above "the loop," several miles distant. I cross the bridge and come in among the box cars—darker patches scattered here and there about the pitch black railroad yards. It is the very paradise of the "can rushing" gang, but there is no sign of life until I come out by a dark row of frame houses, relieved here and there by the light of a saloon. The children of the neighborhood are out playing on the cinders. They are playing the sort of games that innocent youth plays everywhere, and I hear "one, two, three; I'm coming" in unaccented American. There are seldom any reports of lost children—it takes too much time to count up at night.

It is a gossipy neighborhood. The woman on the doorstep jokes with her next door neighbor about her husband being upstairs "dead to the world" on a jag, and the next door neighbor comes back with some bit of repartee from her "old man," who is now in the bridewell. Goose island cherishes its traditions—the time when "Crabby" Gillespie hid a stolen $10 bill behind his glass eye and thus defied the police for half an hour; the occasion when "Big Bootsy," after a battle with the "cops," swam across the river to safety; incidents in the career of Billy Barnett, "the bank sneak" with an international reputation, who was born on the island, has "done time" in Germany and England, and who is expected back "'most any time."

As for "Mother Goose," the little old woman who for so many years kept the store on the corner—she is dead now, and the tattered lithographs of a burlesque show are pasted across the doorway where she used to sit of an evening and furnish live tips to the police.

Kindling Basket Hides Loot.

A brilliantly lighted Northwestern train rushes above me as I go under the dark viaduct. There are more frame houses, more saloons, more children playing in the streets—Polish, Italian, Slavonian, and Turkish; a couple of girls are laughing and talking with a gang of boys. A little further on a mother of 16 years passes me with a baby on her arms and she droops under the burden. I have reached Cleaver street. Half a block away is where John Rudnick hung out. Rudnick is not there now. He is in Joliet for his fifth trip.

A bystander gives me the story in detail: The epidemic of saloon holdups in the neighborhood—the final bursting into a place and the lining of fifteen customers against the wall at the point of a gun—the taking of the contents of the till, $35—the grapple with the saloon owner and the emptying of a gun into his abdomen—the arrest of Rudnick—the discovery of the house where Rudnick and a friend often visited—the arrest of the father, mother, and two sons—the finding of three revolvers in the bed ticking and the cloth exactly matched the material that had been used in one of the lost masks—the innocent looking basket of kindling in which were hidden guns and loot—the mother in league with her own son as a burglar.

What Became of One Gang.

And as I listen the two story frame house that has known so many dark secrets, with its broken window looking like a game eye, seems to leer.

It is about 10 o'clock at night, I should say, when I run across Detective Sullivan. Sullivan's hair is snow white, but the whiteness has been caused by other things than advanced years. For a good many of the gray hairs there is a man in Joliet.

Youth with insufficient play places; youth with the wrong home environment; youth that falls in with the ex-convict; youth that gets into the saloons—bouyant, misguided youth is the great crime committer in the district, according to Sullivan.

"It's lads from 15 to 21 who give us the trouble," he tells me, "and when they get in gangs there's usually something brewing. Why, we raided a clubroom here once where they were practicing holdups on each other in trying to get the thing down to an exact science. The gang that killed the truck farmer out at Morton Grove a few years ago is a sample. Let's see; there was Summerling—they hung him; Shiblowski—they hung him; Kito—they gave life; Schultz—they hung; and Summers, if I remember right, got life.

"This gang had been holding up truck farmers for a week. One would climb into the back of the wagon and stick a cannon under the nose of the farmer, who was asleep, and another would hold his horses. In this instance one of them got in front of the man with a knife in his hand and told him to get down off the wagon or he would stick him through the heart. After they'd stabbed him they dragged him through the woods. Then they took the team and wagon and unloaded the stuff and tried to sell the team. Well, that gang is where they'll never make any more trouble. They'd been kids who wouldn't go to school."

"One of the best men we ever had," he goes on, "was shot after he had his man over to the box and was about to call up headquarters. The fellow had been caught just as he was running away from holding up a saloon. While the policeman was ringing up and holding the fellow at the same time, the guy got hold of a gun he had up his sleeve and shot the policeman in the mouth. It wasn't so many years ago that Policeman Sholes was shot with his own gun by a 'stick up' man. There must have been twenty in the mob that attacked Policeman Pfannkuche on another occasion, but he had seen service in the Philippines and he sent three men to the hospital with one bullet. Then there was Officer Jones, who went down a basement on Wood street one Sunday afternoon to break up a crap game. He stumbled onto a bunch of stolen property and one of the members of the gang—an ex-convict—riddled him with six bullets. Then there was——"

"That's enough," I interrupt.

The Chief Matter of Interest.

I turn down a dark street, and in front of a deserted shop I come upon two young girl mothers—there are few old maids in the district—who are tending their youngsters. Conversation with them reveals that their brother is "getting along fine 'where he is' and enjoying the same privileges as at the county jail." Later I meet one of the girls' husband on the corner. He is standing in front of a saloon. He needs a shave. A cigaret droops from his lips. He is probably 19 years of age.

"You ought to get a job and go to work," I suggest. "Your wife says you haven't done a tap for six months."

"Work?" he poohs. "Whada ya mean work?"

I come across a burly fellow on his front steps, reading a newspaper, and I ask him if he is interested in the war.

"Naw," he answers; "I only look trew de paper to see if dere's been 'a job' pulled off. I like to see how dey did it. Dat's all I'm interested in."

A youth comes striding out of a saloon, and he is so fresh faced and ambitious looking that I make inquiry about him.

"Say," advises my informant, "that kid's one of the smoothest pickpockets in Chicago. They haven't got anything on him just now, but he's got a record two feet long."

It is nearing 3 o'clock in the morning. As I go back to headquarters, past "The Patch" and "The House of Trouble," the spot where "Blonde Mac's" thieves' den had stood, I recall remarks I have often heard about the "dicks" (plain clothes men) and the "harnessed bulls" (uniformed policemen) having it soft.

Well, I suppose it's all in the way you look at it.

The MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY By HAROLD MAC GRATH

$10,000 for 100 Words.

$10,000 for an idea, which you must tell in 100 words or less.

There will be no second prize.

Only one first prize of $10,000 for the man, woman or child who gives the best idea to finish "The Million Dollar Mystery"!

$10,000 for an idea.

$10,000 for 100 words.

READ THE CONDITIONS.

THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE prints today another installment of "The Million Dollar Mystery," a mystery story for the solution of which a prize of $10,000 will be given by the Thanhouser Film corporation. The story will run twenty-two consecutive weeks in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. As each chapter appears in THE TRIBUNE a two reel film corresponding with it may be seen in the various moving picture theaters. By this arrangement with the Thanhouser Film corporation it will be possible for TRIBUNE readers both to read the story and see the moving picture of it as it progresses from week to week. The first film was released on June 22. Each week another will be released until Monday, Nov. 16. The last chapter of the story will appear in THE TRIBUNE on Sunday, Nov. 22.

CONDITIONS GOVERNING THE CONTEST.

The prize of $10,000 will be won by the man, woman, or child who writes the most acceptable solution of the mystery, from which the last two reels of motion picture drama will be made and the last two chapters of the story written by Harold MacGrath.

Solutions may be sent to the Thanhouser Film corporation, either at Chicago or New York, any time up to midnight, Jan. 14. They must be received not later than that date. This allows eight weeks after the first appearance of the last film releases and seven weeks after the last chapter is published in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE in which to submit solutions. The Chicago address of the Thanhouser company is 166 West Washington street and the New York City address is 71 West Twenty-third street.

A board of three judges will determine which of the many solutions received is the most acceptable.

The judges are to be Harold MacGrath, Lloyd Lonergan, author of the scenario, and Miss Mae Tinee of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The judgment of this board will be absolute and final. Nothing of a literary nature will be considered in the decision nor given any preference in the selection of the winner of the $10,000 prize. The last two reels, which will give the most acceptable solution to the mystery, will be presented in the theaters having this feature as soon as it is possible to produce same. The story corresponding to these motion pictures will appear in this newspaper coincidentally, or as soon after the appearance of the pictures as practicable. With the last two reels will be shown the pictures of the winner, his or her home, and other interesting features.

Solutions to the mystery must not be more than 100 words long. Here are some questions to be kept in mind in connection with the mystery as an aid to a solution:

No. 1—What becomes of the millionaire?
No. 2—What becomes of the $1,000,000?
No. 3—Whom does Florence marry?
No. 4—What becomes of the Russian countess?

Nobody connected either directly or indirectly with "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be considered as a contestant.

STANLEY HARGREAVES

JUST AS BRAINE WAS ABOUT TO USE A MALLET AND CHISEL, THE LIGHT WENT OUT

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Stanley Hargreave, millionaire, having joined what he believed to be a great social movement, finds that in reality he has been trapped by the Black Hundred. After a miraculous escape from the den of the brilliant thieves he lives the life of a recluse for eighteen years. One night, surrendering to a restless spirit of rebellion, Hargreave enters a Broadway restaurant and there comes face to face with the Black Hundred's leader, Braine.

After the meeting, during which neither man openly recognizes the other, Hargreave hurries to his magnificent Riverdale home and lays plans for making his escape from the country. He writes a letter to the girls' school in New Jersey where sixteen years before he had mysteriously left on the doorstep of the institution his tiny baby daughter—named "Florence Gray" by the note attached to the basket—and arranges that she be sent to him at once. He also pays a visit to the hangar of a dare-devil aviator.

Braine and members of his band surround Hargreave's home at night, but as they enter the house the watchers outside see a balloon leave the roof. The safe is found empty—the million which Hargreave was known to have drawn that day gone. Then one of the men outside announced that he had punctured the balloon and sent it to the bottom of the ocean.

The next day Florence arrives from the girls' school and is greeted by the butler, Jones, whom Hargreave has taken into full confidence. She is later visited by Countess Olga, Braine's companion, who claims to be a relative. Two bogus detectives also call, but they find themselves thwarted by Norton, a newspaper man, who happens to be on the scene at the right moment.

Later Florence is lured from home by the band, but succeeds in freeing herself from their clutches. The next day Jones removes a box from its hiding place and, pursued by Braine's men, rushes to the water front. A race in motor boats ensues and Jones drops the box into the sea.

Florence is lured to attend a coaching party and escapes being imprisoned in a country house when Norton comes to her aid. Norton also saves her from members of the Black Hundred, who capture her while she is horseback riding.

Accomplices of Braine succeed in kidnaping Florence while she is shopping and hurry her off to sea. She leaps into the sea and is picked up in a dazed condition by a party of fishermen. The Black Hundred locate her and Braine, disguised as her father, succeeds in taking her back to sea with him. Florence sets fire to the boat and is rescued by a ship on which Norton has been shanghaied.

Norton and Florence, safely ashore, take the train for home. The train is wrecked and waiting members of the Black Hundred carry the injured Florence to a deserted hut. Norton, who tries to rescue her, is tied to the railroad tracks. Florence saves him and finally Jones comes to the rescue of both.

CHAPTER XII.

A DIPSY-CHANTY, if you please; of sailormen in jerseys and tarry caps, of rolling gaits, strong tobacco, and diverse profanity; of cutters, and blunt-nose schooners, and tramps, canvas and steam, some of them honest, some of them shady, and some of them pirates of the first water who did not find it necessary to hoist aloft the skull and bones. The seas are dotted with them. They remind you of the once prosperous merchant, run down at the heel, who slinks along the side streets, ashamed to meet those he knew in the past. You never hear them mentioned in the maritime news, which is the society column of the ships; you know of their existence only by the bleached bones of them, strewn along the coast.

You who crave adventures on high seas, you purchase a ticket, a steamer chair, and a couple of popular novels, go on board to the blare of a very indifferent brass band, and believe you are adventuring, when, as a matter of fact, you are about to spend a dull week or fortnight on a water hotel, where the most exciting thing is the bugle's call to meals or the discovery of a card sharp in the smoking room, take a real ship, go as supercargo, to the South seas; take the side streets of the ocean, and learn what it can do with hurricanes, typhoons, blistering calms, and men's souls. There will be adventure enough then. If you are a weakling, either you are made strong or you die.

An honest ship, but run down at the heel, rode at anchor in the sound, a fourth-rater of the hooker breed; that is, her principal line of business was hauling barges up and down the coast. When she could not pick up enough barges to make it pay, why she'd go galivanting down to Cuba for bales of tobacco or over to the Bermudas for the heaven smelling onion. Today she was an onion ship; which precludes any idea of adventure. She was about 4,000 tons, and her engines were sternward and not amidship. She carried two masts and a half dozen hoist booms, and the only visible sign of anything new on her was her bowsprit. This was new doubtless because she had poked her nose too far into her last slip.

Her crew was orderly and tractable. There were shore drunks, to be sure, because they were sailors; but they were a peaceful lot withal. At this moment they were at work. They moved about briskly, for they were on the point of sailing for the Bahamas—perhaps for more onions. Presently the windlass creaked and shrilled, and the blobby links, much in need of tar paint, red as fish gills, clattered down into the bow. Sometimes they painted the chain as it came over; but paint was costly, and this was done only when the anchor threatened to stay on the bottom.

There was a sailor among this crew, and he went by the name of Steve Blossom; and he was one of his kind. A grimy dime novel protruded rakishly from his hip pocket, and his right cheek was swollen as with the toothache, due, probably, to a generous "chaw" of Seaman's Delight. He was a real tobacco chewer, for he rarely spat. He was as peaceful as a backwater bay in summer; nonargumentative and passive, he stood his watch in fair weather and foul.

No one gave the anchor any more attention after it came to rest. The great city over the way was fairylike in its haziness and transparency. It was the poetry of angles, of shafts and spars of stone; and Steve Blossom, having a moment to himself, leaned against the rail and stared regretfully. He had been generously drunk the night before, and it was a pleasant recollection. Chance led his glance to trail down the cutwater. His neck stretched from his collar like a turtle's from its shell.

"Well, I'll be hornswoggled!" he murmured, shifting his cud from starboard to port.

Caught on the fluke of the anchor was the strangest looking box he had ever laid eyes on. There was leather and steel bands and diamond-shaped ivory and mother of pearl, and it hung jauntily on the point of the rusty fluke. Anybody would be hornswoggled to glimpse such a droll jest of fate. On the fluke of the old mudhook, by a hair, you might say. In all the wild sea yarns he had ever read or heard there was nothing to match this.

Treasure!

And Steve was destined never to be passive again. His first impulse was to call his companions; his second impulse was to say nothing at all, and wait for an opportunity to get the box to his bunk without being detected. Treasure! Diamonds and rubies and pearls and old Spanish gold; all hanging to the fluke of the anchor.

"Hornswoggled!" in a kind of awesome whisper this time. "An' we a-headin' for th' Bahamas!" For under his feet he could hear the rhythm of the engines. "What'll I do? If I leave it, some one else'll see it." He scratched his chin perplexedly; and the cud went back to starboard. "I got it!"

He took off his coat and carefully dropped it down over the mysterious box. It was growing darker and darker all the time, and shortly neither coat nor anchor would be visible without close scrutiny. Treasure: greed, cupidity, crime. Steve saw only the treasure and not its camp followers. What did they call them?—doubloons and pieces-of-eight?

He ate his supper with his messmates, and he ate heartily as usual. It would have taken something more vital than mere treasure to disturb Steve Blossom's appetite. He was one of those enviable individuals whose imagination and gastric juices work at the same time. And while he ate he planned. In the first place, he would buy that home at Bedford; then he would take over the Gilson house and live like a lord. If he wanted a drink all he would have to do would be to turn the spigot or tip a bottle; and, more than that, he'd have a bartender to do it. Onions! He swore he would not have an onion within a mile of the Gilson house. "Onions!" Quite unconsciously he spoke this word aloud.

"Huh? Well, if ye don't like onions, find a hooker that packs violets in her hold," was the cheerful advice of the man at Steve's elbow.

"Who's talkin' t' you?" grunted Steve. "What did I say?"

"Onions, ye lubber! Don't we know whut onions is? Ain't we smelt 'em so long that ye could stick yer nose in th' starboard light an' never smell no kerosene? Onions! Pass th' cawffy."

Steve helped himself first. The man who spoke bunked over him, and they were not on the best of terms. There was no real reason for this frank antagonism; simply, they did not splice any more effectually than cotton rope and hemp splice. Sailors are moody and superstitious; at least they generally are on hookers of the "Captain Manners" breed. Steve was superstitious and Jim Dunkers was moody and had no thumb on his left hand. Steve hated the sight of that red nubbin. He was quite certain that it had been a whole thumb once, on the way to gouge out somebody's eye, and had inadvertently connected with somebody's teeth.

"YOU LEMME BY!" BREATHED STEVE

Spanish doubloons and pearls and diamonds and rubies! It was mighty hard not to say these words out loud, too; blare them into the sullen faces grouped about the table. He was off watch till midnight; and he was wondering if he could get the box without attracting the attention of the lookout, who had a devilish keen eye for everything that stirred on deck or on water. Well, he would have to risk it; but he would wait till full darkness had fallen over the sea and the lookout would be compelled to keep his eyes off the deck. The boys wanted him to play cards.

"Not for me. Busted. How long d' y' think $40 'll last in New York, anyhow?" And he stalked out of the forecastle and went down into the waist to enjoy his evening pipe, all the while keeping a weather eye forward, at the ratty old pilot house.

It was 10 o'clock, land time, when he rammed his cutty into a pocket and resolutely walked forward. If any one watched him they would think he was only looking down the cutwater. The thought of money and the pleasures it will buy makes cunning the stupidest of dolts; and Steve was ordinarily a dolt. But tonight his brain was keen enough for all purposes. It was a hazardous job to get the box off the fluke without letting it slip back into the sea. Steve, however, accomplished the feat, climbed back on the rail and sat down, waiting. A quarter of an hour passed. No one had seen him. With his coat securely wrapped about his precious find he made for the forecastle. His mates, save those who were doing their watch, were all in their bunks. An oil lamp dimly illuminated the forward partition. Steve's bunk was almost in darkness. Very deftly he rolled back the bedding and secreted the box under his pillows, and then stretched himself out with the pretense of snoozing till the bell called him to duty.

He was rich; and the moment a man has money he has troubles: there is always some one who wants to take it away from him. His bunk was on the port side, and there was plenty of hiding space between the iron plates and the wooden partition. He intended to loosen three or four planks, and then, when the time came, slip the box behind them. Some time during the morning the forecastle would be empty, and then would be his time.

But he suffered the agonies of damnation during his four hours' watch. Supposing some fool should go rummaging about his bunk and discover the box? Suppose . . . But he dared not suppose. There was nothing to do but wait. If he created any curiosity on the part of his mates he was lost. He would have to divide with them all, from the captain down to the cook's boy. It was a heartrending thought. From being the most open and frank man aboard, he became the most cunning. From being a man without enemies, he saw an enemy even in his shadow.

At 4 o'clock he turned in and slept like a log.

In the morning he found his opportunity. For half an hour the forecastle was empty of all save himself. Feverishly he pried back the boards, found the brace beam, and gently laid the box there. It was a mighty curious looking box. Once he had stoked up the Chinese coast from the Philippines, and he judged it to be Chinese in origin. He tried to pry open the cover and feast his eyes upon the treasure; but under the leather and ivory and mother of pearl was impervious steel. It would take an ax or a crowbar to stir that lid. He sighed. He replaced the boards, and became to all appearances his stolid self again.

But all the way down to the Bahamas he was moody, and when he answered any question it was with words spoken testily and jerkily.

"I know whut's th' matter," said Dunkers. "He's in love."

"Shut your mouth!"

"Didn't I tell yuh?" laughed the tantalizer, dancing toward the companionway. "Steve's in love, 'r he didn't git drunk enough on shore t' satisfy his whale's belly!"

A boot thudded spitefully against the door jamb.

"You fellahs let me alone, 'r I'll bash in a couple o' heads!"

"O, yuh will, will yuh?" cried Dunkers from the deck. "If yuh want a little exercise, yuh can begin on me, yuh moonsick swab! Whut's th' matter with yuh, anyhow? Where'd yuh git this grouch? Whut've we done t' yuh? Huh?"

"You keep out o' my way, that's all. I'm mindin' my watches, an' don't ask no odds of you duffers. What if I have a grouch? Is it any o' your blame business? All right. When we step ashore at th' Bahamas, Mister Jim Dunkers, I'll tear the ropes out o' your pulley blocks. But till we git there, you t' th' upper bunk an' me t' mine."

"Leave th' ol' grouch alone, Jim. Th' mate won't stand for no scrappin' aboard. We'll have th' thing done right in th' custom sheds. We'll have a finish fight, Queensberry rules, an' may th' best man win."

"I'm willin'," said Jim.

"So'm I," agreed Steve. But his intentions were not honorable. He proposed to desert before any fight took place. Not that he was physically afraid; no; he wanted to dig his hands deep into those doubloons and pieces-of-eight.

So the four days down passed otherwise uneventfully, amid paint pots and iron rust and three meals a day of pork, onion soup, potatoes, and strong, bitter coffee. The winds became light and balmy and the sea blue and gentle. The men went about in their undershirts and dungarees, bare footed. Of course the coming fight was the main topic of conversation. It promised to be a rattling good scrap, for both men were evenly matched, and both had a "kick" in either hand. Even the captain took a mild interest in the affair. He was an old sailor. He knew that there was no such word as arbitration in a sailor's vocabulary; his disputes could be settled only in one manner, by his calloused fists.

When the old mudhook (and some day Steve was going to buy it and hang it over the entrance of the Gilson house) slithered down into the smiling waters of the bay, Steve concluded that discretion was the better part of valor. He would steal ashore on the quarantine tug which lay alongside. He was willing to fight under ordinary circumstances, but he must get his treasure in safety first. They could call him a welcher if they wanted to; devil a bit did he care. So he pried back the boards of his bunk wall, took out the box, eyed it fondly, and noted for the first time the lettering on it:

STANLEY HARGREAVE.

He wrinkled his brow in the effort to recall a pirate by this name, but was unsuccessful. No matter. He hugged the box under his coat and made for the gangway, and inadvertently ran into his enemy.

"What 'a' yuh got there?" he demanded truculently.

"None o' your damn business! You lemme by; hear me?"

"Ain't none o' my business, huh? Where'd yuh git a box like that? Steal it? By cripes, I'm goin' t' have a look at that box, my hearty. It don't smell like honest onions."

"You lemme by!" breathed Steve, with murder in his heart.

Suddenly the two men closed, surged back and forth, one determined to take and the other to hold this mysterious box. Dunkers struggled to uphold his word: not that he really wanted the box but to prove that he was strong enough to take it if he wanted to. The name on the box flashed and disappeared. It was a kind of shock to him. He and Blossom went battering against the rail. Dunkers' grip slipped and so did Blossom's. The result was that the box was catapulted into the sea. With an agonizing cry Blossom leaned far over. He saw the box oscillate for a moment, then sink gracefully in a zigzag course, down through the blue waters. Fainter and fainter it grew, and at last vanished.

"I'm sorry, Steve; but yuh wouldn't let me look at it," said Dunkers contritely.

"Damn you; I'm goin' t' kill y' for that!"

It became a real fight this time, fist and foot, tooth and nail; one mad with the lust to kill and the other desperately intent on living. It was one of those contests in which honor and fair play have no part. But for the timely arrival of the captain and some of the crew Dunkers would have been badly injured, perhaps fatally. They hauled back Blossom, roaring out his oaths at the top of his lungs. It took half an hour's arguing to calm him down. Then the captain demanded to know what it was all about. And, blubbering, Steve told him.

"Six hundred feet of water, if I've got my reckoning right. The anchor lies in sixty feet, but the starboard side drops sheer six hundred. You swab! Why didn't you bring the box to me? A man has a right to what he finds. I'd have taken care of it for you till we got back to port. I know; you were greedy; you thought I might want to stick my fist into your treasure. And you'll never find it in 600 feet of water and tangled, porous coral. That's what you get for being a blamed hog. As for you," and the captain turned to Dunkers, "get your dunnage and your pay and hunt for another boat back. I won't have no murder on board 'Captain Manners.' And the sooner you go, the better."

"I'll go, sir," said Dunkers, readily enough. Had the misfortune happened to him and had Blossom been the aggressor, he would want his life. He understood. Like the valet in "Olivette," it was the time for disappearing.

"An' keep out o' my way. I'll git y' yet," growled Blossom.

"Keep your mouth shut," said the mate, "or I'll have you put in irons, you pig!"

"All right, sir. I've said all I'm goin' t' say t'day," and Blossom strode off.

"What was the box like?" asked the captain of Dunkers.

"Chinese contraption, sir; leastwise it looked that way to me. Didn't look as if it'd been in th' water long, sir. Somethin' lost overboard by some private yacht, t' my thinkin'. I'll keep out o' Steve's way. I'll lay low on shore, sir."

And, though Steve made a perfect range of the spot, he never came back to find the mysterious box, never saw the Gilson house back home, nor did he ever see Dunkers again. On the voyage home he brooded continually, and was frequently found blubbering; and one night he skipped his watch and went to Davy Jones' locker.

Dunkers had not told about the name he had seen on the box; and Blossom had not thought to. The name Hargreave had instantly brought back to Dunkers' mind the newspaper stories he had recently read. There was no doubt in the world that this box belonged to the missing millionaire, who had drawn a million from his banks and vanished; and, moreover, there was no doubt in Dunkers' mind that his million lay in the Bahaman waters. It had been drawn up from the bottom of the sound, under the path of the balloon. He proceeded, then, to take a most minute range. It would require money and partners; but half a loaf would be far better than no loaf at all; and he was determined to return to New York to find backing. Finding is keeping, on land or sea.

Now it happened that his favorite grog shop was a cheap saloon across the way from the headquarters of The Black Hundred; and Vroon occasionally dropped in, for he often picked up a valuable bit of maritime news. Dunkers was an old friend of the barkeeper, and he proceeded to pour and guzzle down his throat a very poor substitute for whisky. He became communicative. He bragged. He knew where there was a million, and all he needed was a first class diving bell. A year from now he would not be drinking cheap whisky; he'd be steering a course up and down Broadway and buying wine when he was thirsty. He was no miser. But he had to have a diving bell; and where the blue devil could he get one with $12 and an Ingersoll watch in his pocket?

From his table Vroon made a sign which the bartender understood. Then he rose and approached Dunkers.

"I own a pretty good diving apparatus," he said. "If you've got the goods, I'll take a chance on a fifty-fifty basis." Vroon did not believe there was anything back of this talk; but it always paid to dig deep enough to find out. "Have a drink; and, Bill, give us a real whisky and none of your soap-lye. Now, let's hear your yarn."

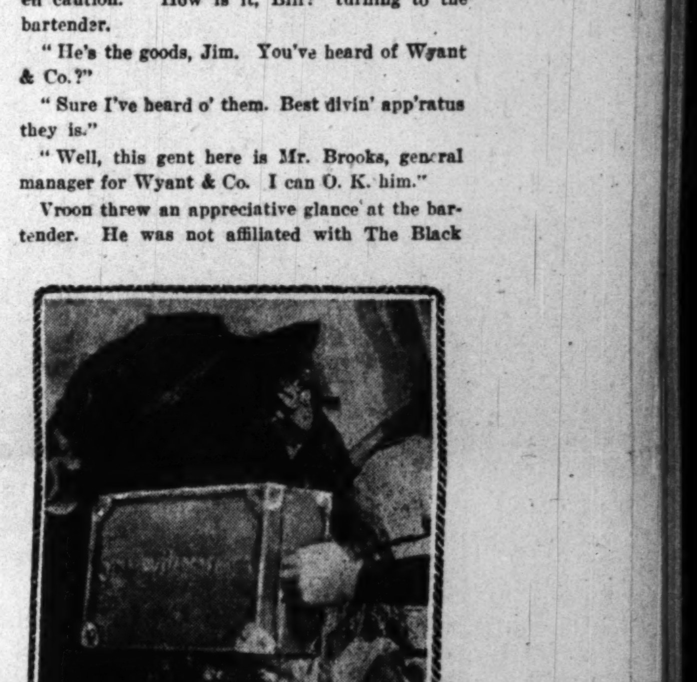
"I don't know yuh," said Dunkers, with drunken caution. "How is it, Bill?" turning to the bartender.

"He's the goods, Jim. You've heard of Wyant & Co.?"

"Sure I've heard o' them. Best divin' app'ratus they is."

"Well, this gent here is Mr. Brooks, general manager for Wyant & Co. I can O. K. him."

Vroon threw an appreciative glance at the bartender. He was not affiliated with The Black Hundred, but he had often aided Vroon in minor affairs.



AND THAT IS WHY JONES WAS ABLE, SOME WEEKS LATER, TO HIDE ONCE MORE THE ORIGINAL BOX

"All right, if yuh say so, Bill. Well, here's th' yarn."

And when he had done, Vroon smoked quietly without speaking.

"Don't yuh believe it?" demanded Dunkers truculently.

"But 600 feet of water, in a coral bottom, and no way of telling just where it fell overboard. That's a tough proposition."

"O, it is, is it? I'm a sailor. I can lay my hand right over th' spot. Do yuh think I'd be fool enough t' hunt for it without a perfect range?" Dunkers tapped his coat pocket suggestively.

And Vroon knew that the one thing he wanted was there, a plan or a drawing of the range. So there was another man shanghaied that night, and his destination was Cape Town, twenty-two days' voyage by the calendar.

Vroon carried his information to the organization that same night. They would start the expedition at once, and till this was accomplished Hargreave's daughter was to be immune from attacks. Besides, it would give Hargreave (wherever he was) and the others the idea that The Black Hundred had concluded to give up the chase.

Above, with his ear to a small hole, skillfully bored through the ceiling without permitting the plaster to fall, knelt a man with a bandaged arm. He could never see any faces; no one ever took off a mask in this sinister chamber. But there were voices, and he was never going to forget some of them. After the meeting came to an end, he waited an hour after, and then stole down into the street by the aid of the fire escape. Later he entered a telephone booth and called up Jones.

Then, one leathern and steel box, dotted with bits of ivory and mother-of-pearl, became two; and the second one was soaked in mud and salt water for two weeks till you could not have told it from the original. And that is why Jones was able, some weeks later, to hide once more the original box. As for the substitute, just as Braine was about to use a mallet and chisel upon it, the lights went out. There was a wild scramble, a chair or two was overturned.

"The door, the door!" shouted Braine, furious.

It slammed the moment the words left his lips. And as suddenly as they had gone out the lights sprang up. The box was gone. There were evidently traitors among The Black Hundred.

THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER

BY FRANCIS SCOTT KEY

TOLD BY GEORGENE FAULKNER
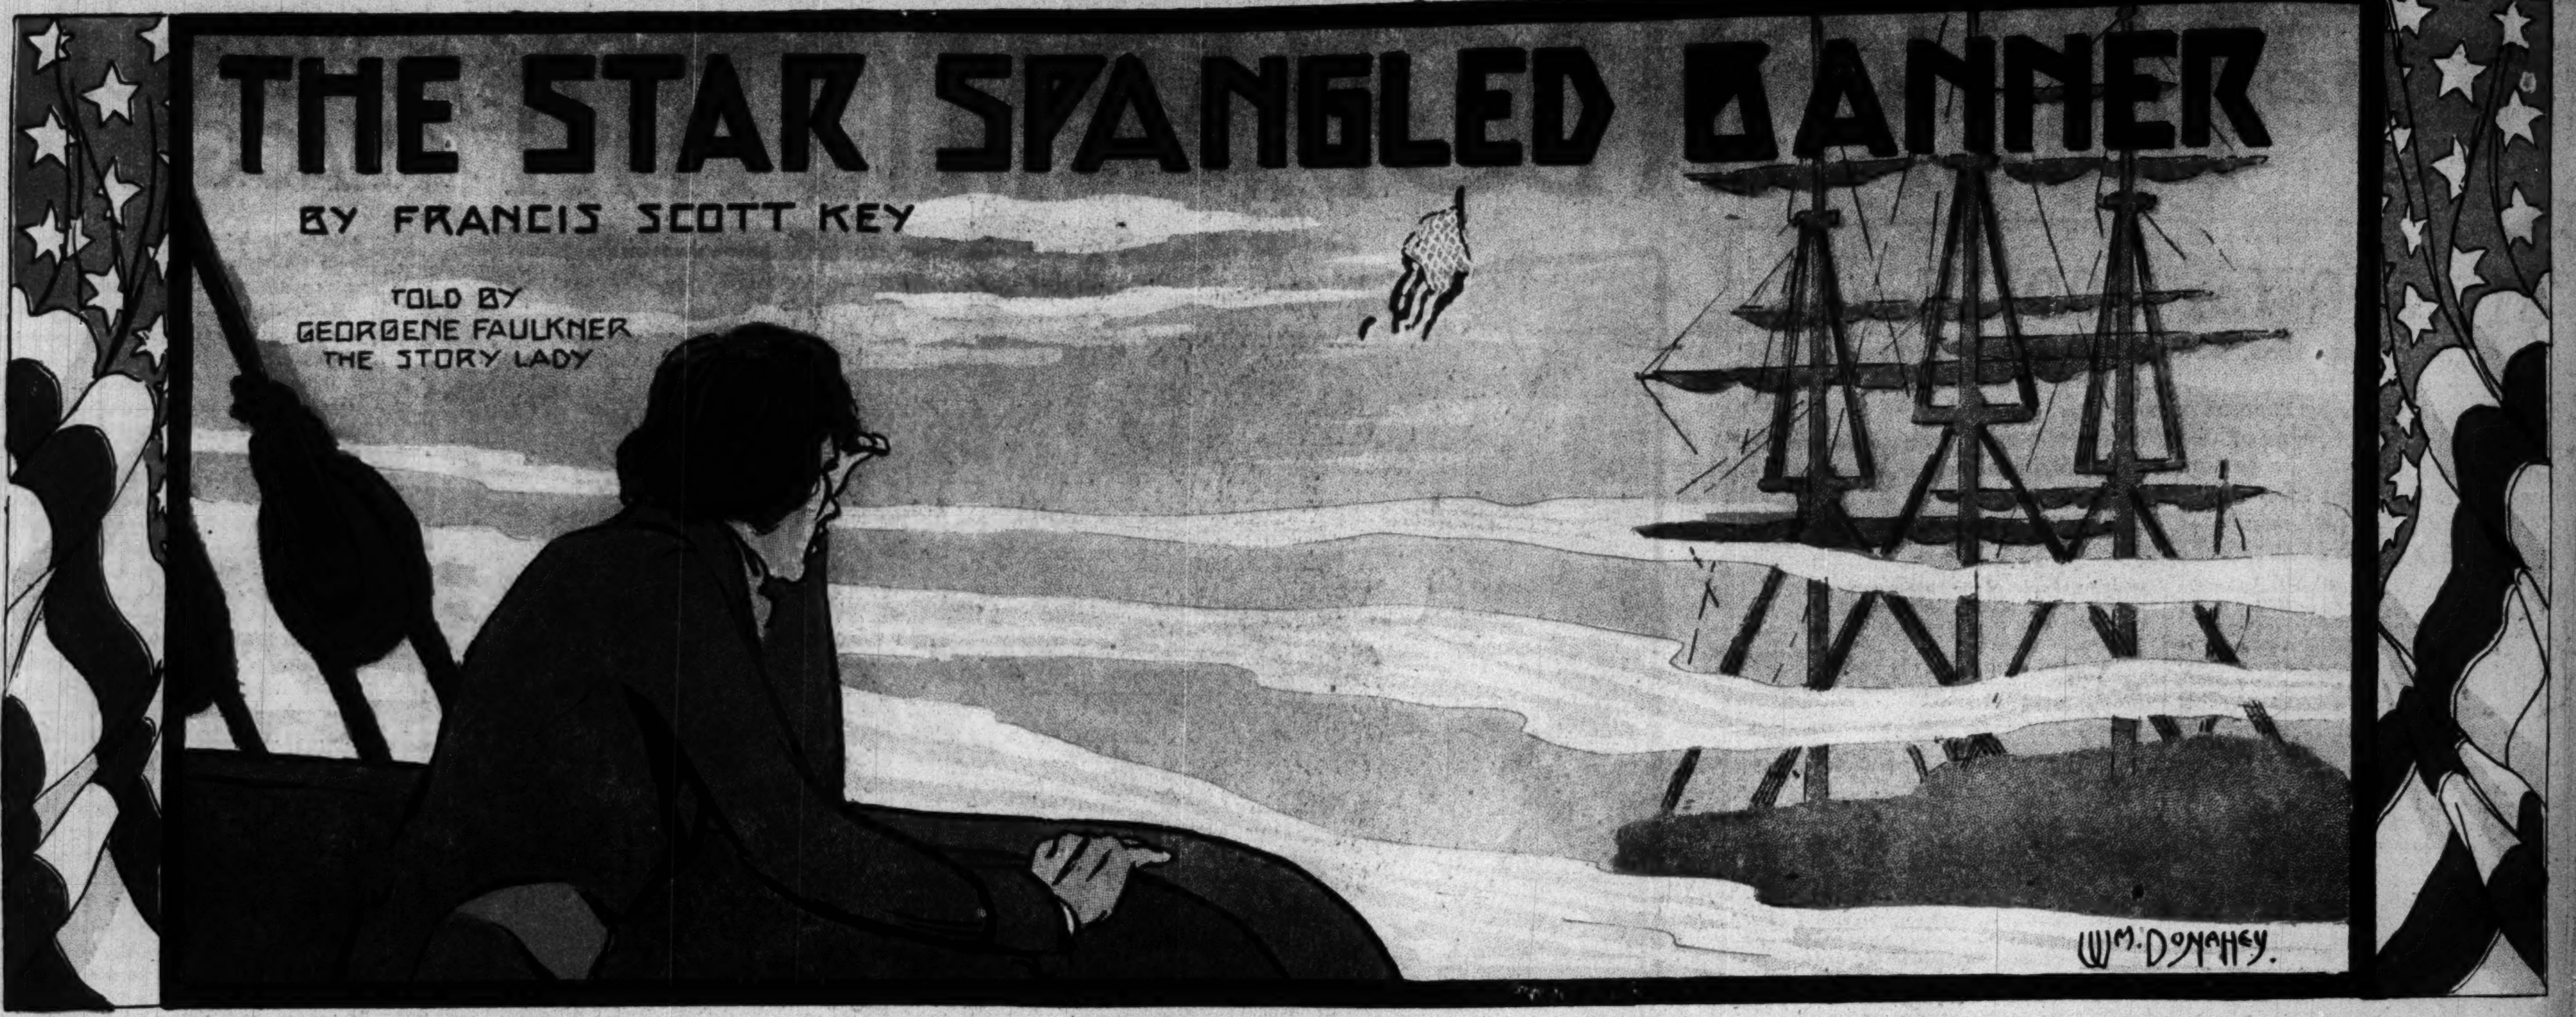
THE STORY LADY



O, SAY, can you see by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming!
And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there:
O, say, does that star spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On the shore, dimly seen through the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected, now shines on the stream:
'Tis the star spangled banner! O, long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion
A home and a country should leave us no more?
Their blood has washed out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight, or the gloom of the grave:
And the star spangled banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

O! thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!
Blest with vict'ry and peace may the heaven rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto: "In God is our trust."
And the star spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

THE "Star Spangled Banner" will be 100 years old tomorrow, Sept. 14. This song was written by the young poet and lawyer, Francis Scott Key, just 100 years ago at the battle of Baltimore. It was during the war of 1812, when our country was fighting England, that the British soldiers won a victory over the Americans at Bladensburg and then marched upon the city of Washington, where they burned the capitol, the president's residence, and many government offices and took many Americans as prisoners.

Dr. Beanes, a well known physician of Marlboro, was among the prisoners, so under a white flag of truce the young lawyer, Francis Key of Georgetown, was sent with another friend to Admiral Cochrane of the British navy to obtain the release of Dr. Beanes. The admiral agreed to let him go, but refused to allow him or his friends to return then, for the English were sailing to Baltimore and did not wish the American troops to know that they were planning this attack, for he was afraid these men would tell of his plans, so temporarily they were held as prisoners of war on the English ship.

When the British arrived near the city they tried to take it by firing from the water. All night long Sept. 13 they poured shot and shell upon Fort McHenry and the plucky Americans at the little fort sent back an answering volley.

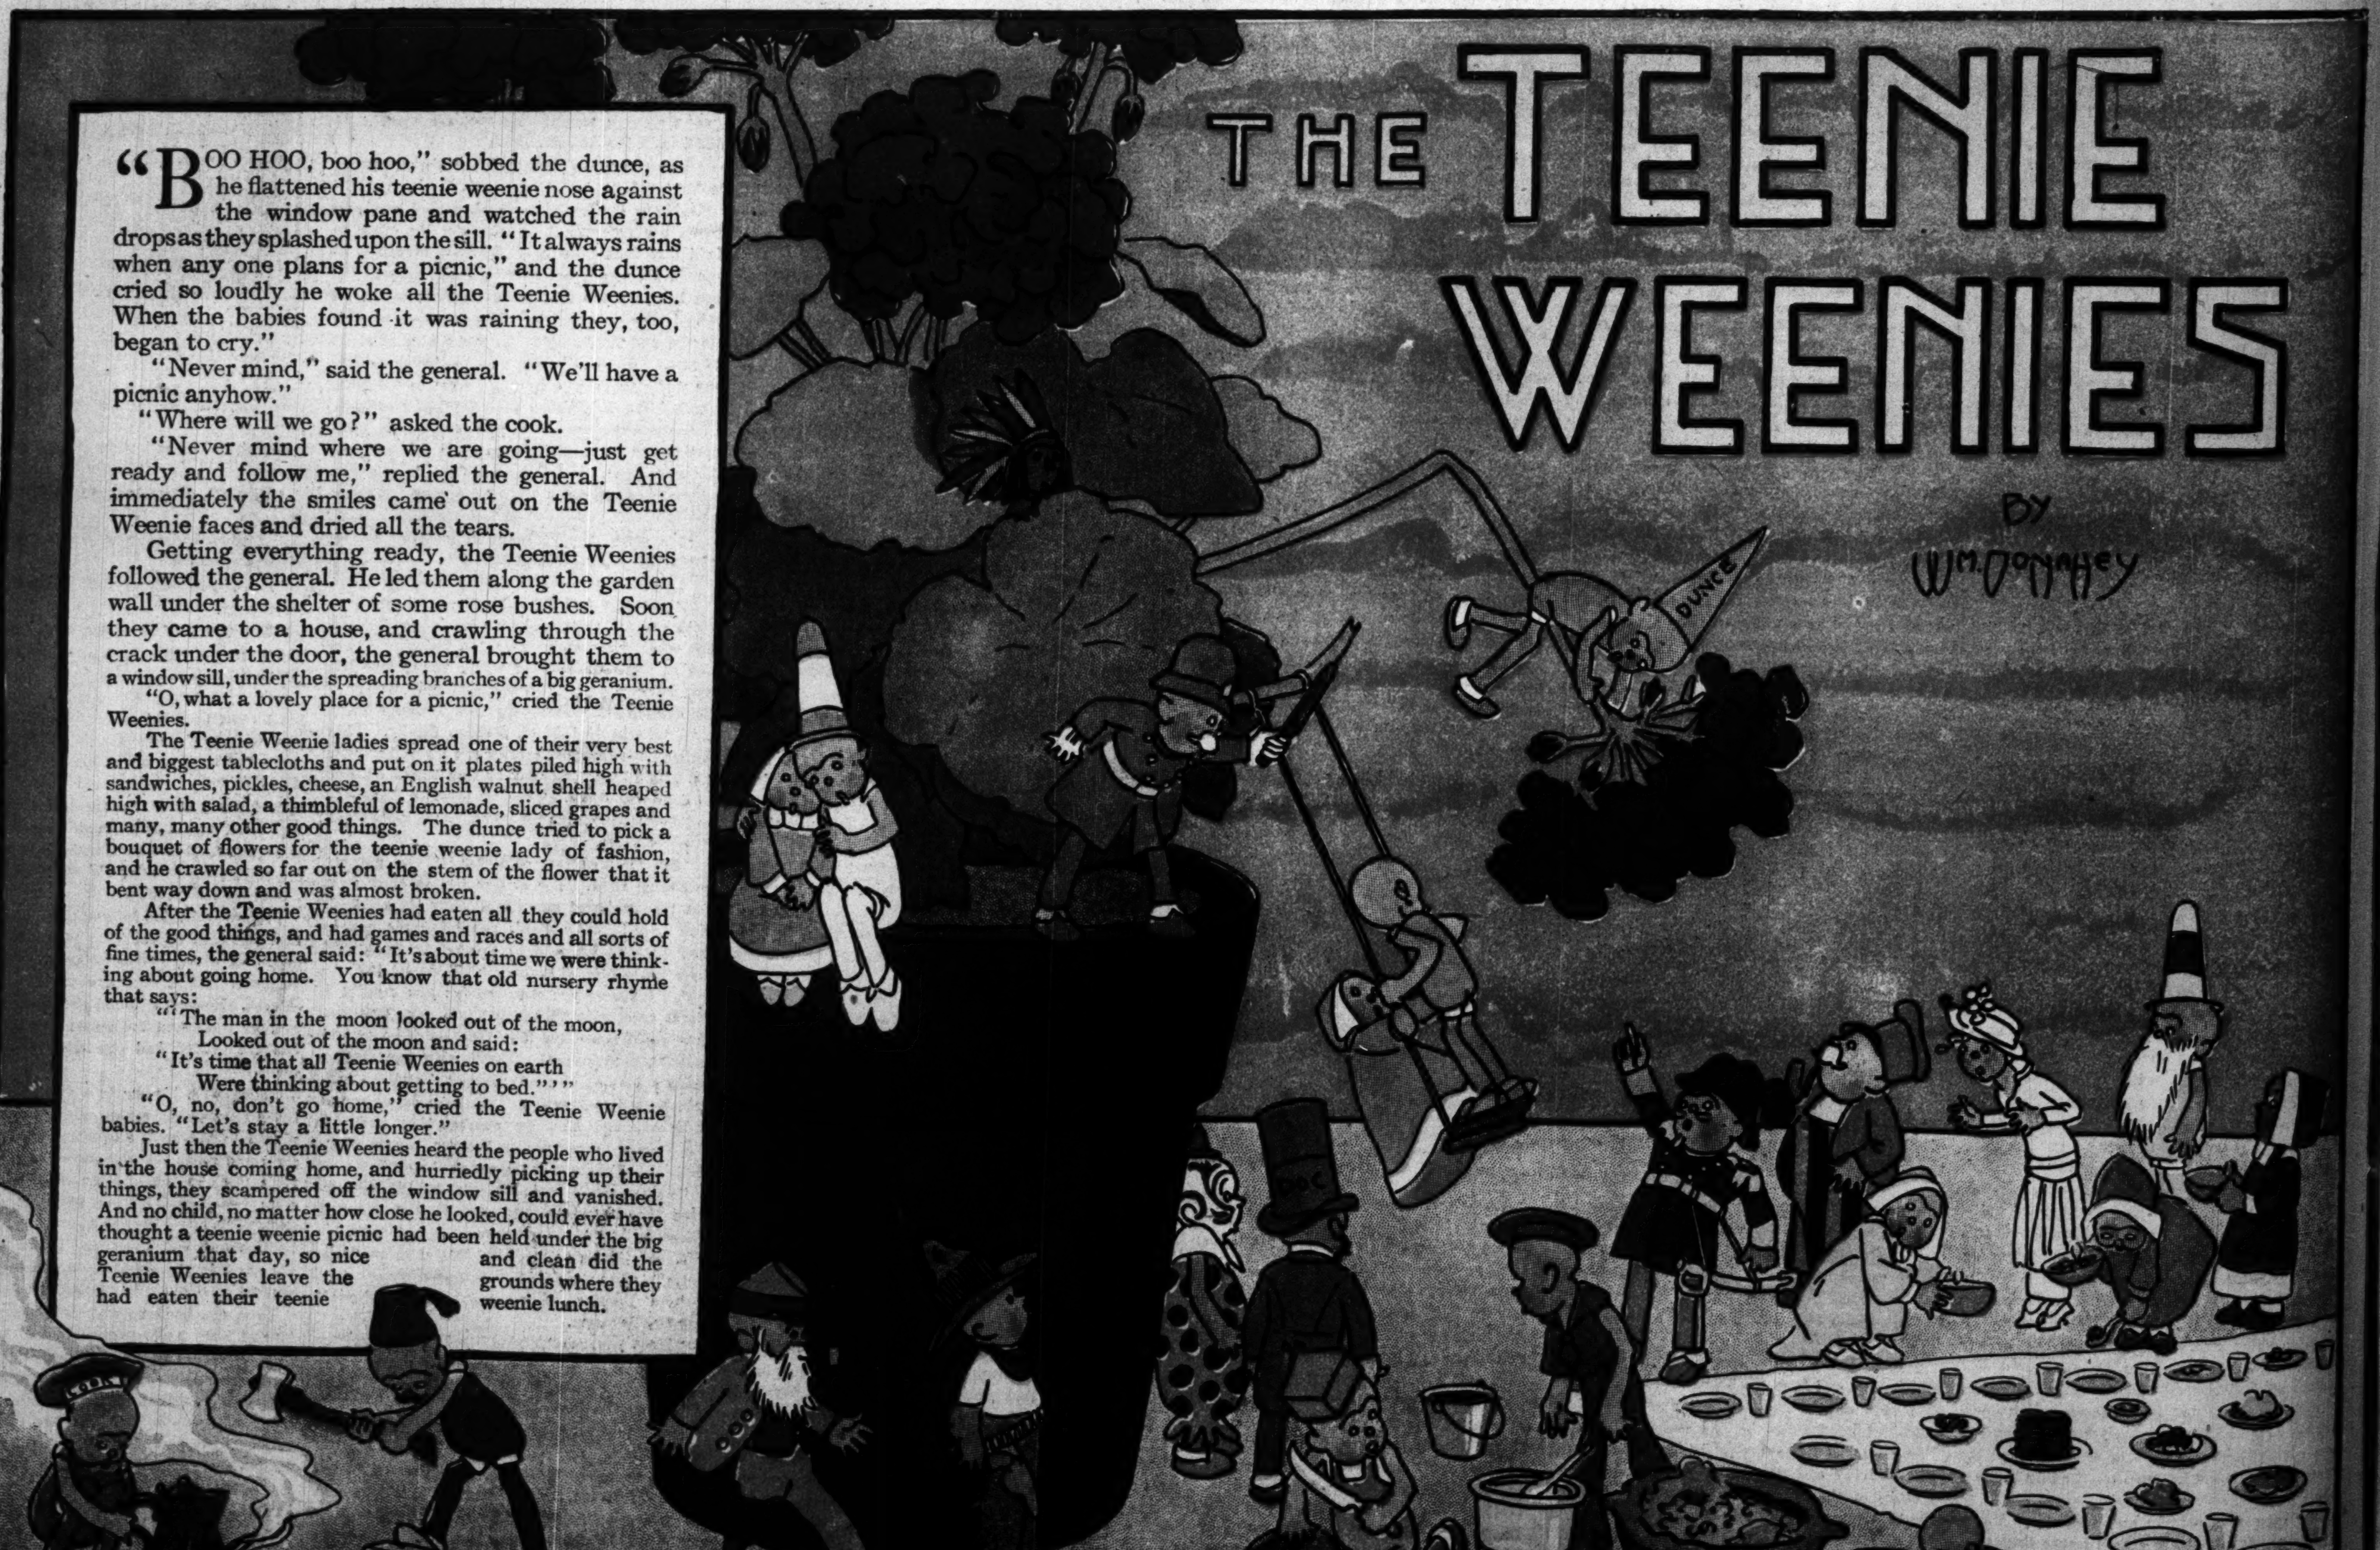
The three friends paced the deck of the ship anxiously watching and fearful lest the Americans be obliged to surrender. Sometimes the bombs bursting in the air made such a vivid glare that the men could get a glimpse of the flag floating over the fort. Then all would be in darkness and just the roar of the bombardment seemed to sweep about them.

In the early dawn Sept. 14, 1814, the Americans looked toward the fort and were rejoiced to see that the flag was still flying and that the English had given up the attack upon the city. Key was so happy that, seizing an old letter, he scribbled on the back of it a poem which expressed the feeling he had as he watched the flag through the long, perilous night.

When the British commander let Key and his friends go back to Baltimore he wrote out this song and gave it to a friend. The friend felt at once that it was so good that it must be given to the world and so it was printed and sung everywhere—in the streets, in the theater, and at last all over the country. It has now became a national song and whenever or wherever we hear it we should stand at once and show our love and loyalty to our flag and to our country.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

BY WM. DONAHEY



"BOO HOO, boo hoo," sobbed the dunce, as he flattened his teenie weenie nose against the window pane and watched the rain drops as they splashed upon the sill. "It always rains when any one plans for a picnic," and the dunce cried so loudly he woke all the Teenie Weenies. When the babies found it was raining they, too, began to cry."

"Never mind," said the general. "We'll have a picnic anyhow."

"Where will we go?" asked the cook.

"Never mind where we are going—just get ready and follow me," replied the general. And immediately the smiles came out on the Teenie Weenie faces and dried all the tears.

Getting everything ready, the Teenie Weenies followed the general. He led them along the garden wall under the shelter of some rose bushes. Soon they came to a house, and crawling through the crack under the door, the general brought them to a window sill, under the spreading branches of a big geranium.

"O, what a lovely place for a picnic," cried the Teenie Weenies.

The Teenie Weenie ladies spread one of their very best and biggest tablecloths and put on it plates piled high with sandwiches, pickles, cheese, an English walnut shell heaped high with salad, a thimbleful of lemonade, sliced grapes and many, many other good things. The dunce tried to pick a bouquet of flowers for the teenie weenie lady of fashion, and he crawled so far out on the stem of the flower that it bent way down and was almost broken.

After the Teenie Weenies had eaten all they could hold of the good things, and had games and races and all sorts of fine times, the general said: "It's about time we were thinking about going home. You know that old nursery rhyme that says:

"'The man in the moon looked out of the moon,
Looked out of the moon and said:
"It's time that all Teenie Weenies on earth
Were thinking about getting to bed."'"

"O, no, don't go home," cried the Teenie Weenie babies. "Let's stay a little longer."

Just then the Teenie Weenies heard the people who lived in the house coming home, and hurriedly picking up their things, they scampered off the window sill and vanished. And no child, no matter how close he looked, could ever have thought a teenie weenie picnic had been held under the big geranium that day, so nice and clean did the Teenie Weenies leave the grounds where they had eaten their teenie weenie lunch.

Iris, daughter of Thauma and Electra, was goddess of the rainbow. She traveled with the speed of the wind, charging the clouds with waters from the lakes that they might fall in fertilizing showers upon the earth. Her presence was recognized in the rainbow with its gorgeous colors. She was represented with wings of varied hues and in robes of brightest colors.

BONES NO LONGER BEAUTIFUL!

says LILLIAN RUSSELL

Bones are no longer beautiful!

The new mode of dressing is designed for figures—not for "laths"!

What is the ideal figure!

Well—ideals of feminine form are almost as varied as ideals of feminine beauty!

But an angular form is not ideal!

Neither is a voluptuous figure!

Neither is a "masculine" figure!

Neither is an unevenly developed figure!

An ideal figure must have sufficient quantity of fat to give a pleasing rotoundity of figure.

With a height of 5 feet 5 inches the weight should be 138 pounds. The woman should, with arms extended, measure from tip to tip of the middle finger 5 feet 5 inches (that is, exactly her own height). The length of the hand should be one-tenth, the foot one-seventh, and the diameter of the chest one-fifth that of the height. The distance from the perineum to ground should measure the same as from the perineum to the top of the head. The knee should be exactly midway between the perineum and the heel. The distance from the elbow to the little finger should be the same as the distance from the elbow to the middle of the chest. The measurement from the top of the head to the chin should be the same as the length of the foot, and there should be the same distance between the chin and the armpits. A woman of this height should measure 29 inches round the waist, 34 inches round the bust, if taken under the arms, and 43 inches if measured over them. The upper arm should measure 13 inches and the wrist 6 inches. The calf of the leg should measure 14½ inches, the thigh 25 inches, and the ankle 8 inches.

Your weight should range from 1 8-10 to 2 2-3 pounds to each inch in height.

Divide your weight in pounds by your height in inches.

Any weight above 2½ pounds to the inch in stature may be considered as excessive.

In women the tendency is for fat to accumulate—especially after 40—about the waist, abdomen, and upper part of thighs. Wearing corsets and consequent lack of use of these muscles is the reason for this fatty degeneration.

Exercise, therefore, is the remedy for figure unsightliness.

The exercises given below, if practiced diligently, will be much more than a "first aid to good form in figure," whether your trouble is angularity or obesity or non-symmetry.

EXERCISE 1.

This exercise is to break up the angles in the figure made by the corset, to beautify the waist and hip lines, and at the same time to extend the depth of the chest. Stand with the left hand on the left hip and with the right arm by the right side. Straighten out the right arm and extend it perpendicularly up at the side of the head and at the same time raise the left leg outward away from the right leg. Then lower the leg and arm, returning to the original position. Repeat this movement from ten to twenty times. Then change to the other side. These movements develop the legs, also.

EXERCISE 2.

Take hold of the back of a chair. Rise on your toes from 25 to 100 times. This exercise strengthens weak ankles, develops the calves of the legs, and relieves a tendency to flat foot.

EXERCISE 3.

EXERCISE 4.

Stand with the feet about 18 inches apart with your hands clasped above the head. Now swing your hands down between the feet and legs as if you were chopping wood. Then bring them up over the head again and repeat the movement from twenty to fifty times. When going down bend your back as much as possible. When coming up straighten your back as much as possible. This exercise strengthens the muscles of the back, trunk, buttocks, and thighs and keeps the spine erect and straight.

EXERCISE 5.

Swimming is one of the best all-round developing exercise I know of. You meet resistance at every movement in swimming and bring into action most of the muscles of the trunk and limbs. It is good for broadening and developing the chest, and swimming strengthens the arms, shoulders, and legs. For reducing the exercise of swimming cannot be over-estimated. If it isn't convenient for you to swim in water practice the swimming strokes on dry land.

BY CAROLYN WILSON.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—In spite of war, in spite of empty streets and sorrowing hearts, in spite of wounded pouring into the city, the fashion experts go on setting the styles, the fashion houses parade their mannequins to a sadly depleated clientele.

For the most part the only people interested in the fall styles, which the houses have just finished, are the Americans, and few of them are purchasing for their own use, but are buyers for the big stores. I went to four of the big houses last week with a buyer for a New York firm who, in spite of the baggage regulations which said that no one should leave with anything but hand baggage, was purchasing models of evening gowns at 3,000 and 4,000 francs, and tailored costumes at a thousand apiece. Since then that strict rule about baggage has gone out of effect, so New York will actually have the only models of these styles from Callot and Worth and Paquin.

In each establishment there was perhaps one man—usually too old for the war—two or three hostesses, and a dozen mannequins, who never smiled and whose whole attitude expressed dejection. I felt abashed and ashamed to be doing such a trivial thing as looking at clothes when the brothers and sweethearts of these girls were dying not a hundred miles from here.

There isn't so much that is absolutely new this season—just some indications which will probably be seized by America, who, at last, has a chance to make fashions for itself.

The tailored suit, for example, will have the long coat that was fashionable several years ago. Forzane, the bewitching popular Forzane, who has been the first with every style for the last couple of years, is also responsible for this new style. Max Mayer, the comparatively new tailor on the Champs Elysées, is making all Mlle. Forzane's winter tailored costumes, and they certanly are ravishing.

One severely plain three piece costume is of fig-green chiffon broadcloth, the skirt circular like those we used to wear ten years ago, and joining the chiffon and gold blouse at a low waist line. The coat is long, almost to the ground, with tight long sleeves set in narrow shoulders, and a godet tunic flaring below the seamed hip line. The bottom of the coat and a standing collar are of gray fox.

There is a distinct silhouette which starts with the smallest possible hat and finishes with a circular flaring skirt. The hair is dressed close and high. The hat is so tiny that it resembles a jockey's cap, and it sits way down over the forehead. The shoulders are narrow and define the natural figure closely, and the sleeves are extremely tight right to the knuckles. Often, to get this effect, the sleeve buttons straight to the shoulder. The waist almost reverts to the old wasp waist, and then the fullness begins, either with plaits or with the newer circular skirt.

It seemed to me as I went from one place to another that there was no one distinct style for the winter. Callot made everything narrow. Paquin introduced the fullness. The Callot evening dress was so straight lined and simple that it suggested old prints out of the days of chivalry. And Premet's evening gowns were light and full and airy.

The mandate has gone forth that nothing shall be worn under the bodice of these gowns in the way of lingerie, since any lace or ribbons will break the line of the drapery. Now, since the other side from the drapery of the material of the gown is filled in with sheerest chiffon or tulle, you may perfectly understand why the mannequin, hardened as she is, blushed when she came before me, saying apologetically, "It is the way to wear it; but I myself, you understand, would wear a lacy something beneath it."

I am wondering how America will take again to the circular skirt after these last years of straight narrow lines, little material and weight about the hips, and constrained walking. Will the young girls who have swathed themselves in thirty inch skirts be able to take good healthy strides again when they walk the city pavements, or will habit have become so strong that they will patter along? Perhaps the walk of all womankind has been materially altered by fashion.

Some of these circular skirts even revert so far to the past that they have circular ruffles laid around the hem or a foot above the ground. One evening dress I saw of pale green crêpe meteor with the dull finish used for the right side has two ruffles like this, each bound with a strip of the meteor with the glossy finish.

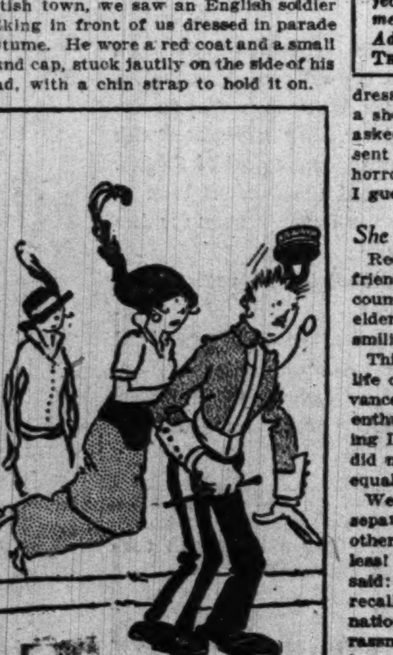
The colors here for the winter are not many and not florid. That may be due to the general depressing atmosphere, but greens, dull olive, fig, oriental, the ever fashionable navy, and a revival of the olive drab and natural brown covert cloth are practically all the colors which have appeared so far.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

THE TRIBUNE will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject:—"The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life Was When ——." Address Contest Editor, SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Astonished Tommy Atkins.

My cousin and I used to amuse each other by giving "dares." One day, in a British town, we saw an English soldier walking in front of us dressed in parade costume. He wore a red coat and a small round cap, stuck jautily on the side of his head, with a chin strap to hold it on.



My cousin said, "I dare you to knock that soldier's little cap off."

I answered, "Very well," without the least intention of doing such a foolish and rude thing, but, stepping from the sidewalk to the crossing, I tripped.

My two hands flew up to protect myself and landed violently in the middle of the soldier's back. The shock knocked his little cap from his head and sent it flying across the street.

Never was there such an astonished soldier! Never such an embarrassed girl!

The Wrong Answer.

The most embarrassing moment of my life was recently when our Sunday school teachers called and brought some new dresses to my 6 year old daughter. After a short prayer they turned to Josie and asked her if she knew why her mamma sent her to Sunday school. Imagine my horror when she smiled and said, "Well, I guess it's to get clothes."

She Didn't Know Him.

Recently I entered a store with some friends, going out at once to the bargain counter. Upon glancing up I noticed an elderly gentleman approaching hurriedly, smiling, and extending his hand.

Thinking it some one I knew (but for the life of me could not recall), I eagerly advanced and grasped his hand with the enthusiasm of an old friend. He, supposing I was some one whom he knew, but did not recognize, gripped my hand with equal enthusiasm.

We stood there shaking hands like long separated friends, gazing into each others questioning eyes, utterly speechless! Presently the gentleman timidly said: "Beg pardon, but I am unable to recall your name." This led to an explanation, when to my complete embarrassment I found that his advance had been made to meet a friend just behind me who graciously stood waiting until I should release his friend.

She Finally Refembered.

On Children's day my little girl was to speak a piece at the church. She was afraid she would forget it, but I told her to think of something else, and as she knew it perfectly, I was quite sure she would do all right.

When the child got upon the stage she forgot herself, and you can imagine my embarrassment when she repeated a little piece she often said at home. It was: "Mother, may I go out to swim? Yes, my dearest daughter; but hang your clothes on a hickory limb, but don't go near the water."

Then she started in on her other piece, but it was quite the most embarrassing moment in my life.

Did You Ever Play a Practical Joke?

Perhaps you know a number of funny or queer practical jokes or ones that resulted in important events. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on the subject of practical jokes. Address Practical Joke Editor, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

A Gay Lothario.

My husband loves to joke, and he played one on me that I will never forget. One day we were going downtown and got onto a street car. The cars were old fashioned and had long seats the length of the car, facing each other. As the car was crowded my husband had to sit on one side and I on the other, facing him. We are elderly people, and gray haired.

When the conductor came for the fares my husband said, in a voice audible all over the car, "That's a nice looking old lady over there. I believe I'll pay her fare."

Every one in the car looked at him and then at my burning face. A perfect yell of laughter went up, and I got off the car.

He Married Sary Jane.

There's a town in Illinois as flat as a pancake. When the train comes in you can spot every stranger—likewise every native if you live near enough.

We were six girls having a party. When the train pulled in I noticed a book agent, and I made my plans. About 4 our bell rang. "Yes, I'm the lady of the house," I said. "My five daughters are school teachers. They'll be interested in your 'Handbook of the United States.'"

I meanwhile proceeded to introduce the young student to Araminty Belle, Susan, Maria, Sary Jane Isabella, Iris Irene, and Dorothy Mandy.

The young man was game through the ordeal and listened to my history and merits of each daughter. Then he politely bowed himself out with this remark:

"Mrs. Youngmother, what you need is not the 'Handbook of the United States,' but a bottle of soothing sirup."

One year later that man married Sary Jane Isabella.

Saved the Children.

Our class was held on the third floor of an old wooden school building. One afternoon another boy and myself scattered some snuff in the air before the afternoon session began. When the professor began talking to his assistant they were seized with a fit of sneezing, bobbing their heads toward each other in a most ludicrous fashion. The students howled with laughter when they were not sneezing.

Finally the professor managed to get his breath long enough to question the class and all but we two guilty boys were dismissed.

He took us to his office and while we were there—about twenty minutes later—fire was discovered in the building. We got out with difficulty and the school was burned to the ground.

From an angry man the professor became deeply thankful and he has since maintained that we boys were the instruments of fate, for the building burned so rapidly that there would have been great danger if all of the children had been in class when the fire started.

New in the Realm of Fashion.

Some of the new suits have coats with high necks.

Fashionable trains are mere scarf ends that look precisely like scarfs when thrown over the arm for dancing.

Fancy filet meshes are the most fashionable veilings.

Plaited dresses are among the best for young girls.

Black lace over white is smart, even for young girls.

Many of the new waists are made to wear over the skirts.

Plaid silk is made up with plain satin for the new waists.

The brilliant shades are not in good taste for fall.

Any amount of velvet will be used the coming winter.

The fashions for 1914 strongly emphasize military lines.

Zibeline is being used for winter coats.

Full circular skirts are hinted at.

The majority of sleeves are long.

A few of the tailored costumes are fashioned of rather large checked black and white materials.

There is a growing tendency for metal laces.

Besides marabou and ostrich trimmings, white peacock is being used for hat trimmings.

There are beautiful scarfs in silk or wool that offer most pleasing substitutes for fur neckpieces.

There is a great diversity in the sizes of hats. They are worn from the smallest to the largest.

Broadcloth and velvet will be combined and trimmed with bands of fur of the short haired variety.

Two faced capes of black and white satin, which may be worn either side out, are shown for evening wear.

New bandeaus have hairpin attachments. They are of shell set with rhinestones, solid and openwork designs.

The latest hats have transparent brims of wide lace and tulle wired into shape and transparent crowns.

The broad girdle of black satin embroidered with gold is a pleasing addition to afternoon and evening dresses.

The new skirts are full from waist line to ankle, and they have little underskirts which are much tighter.

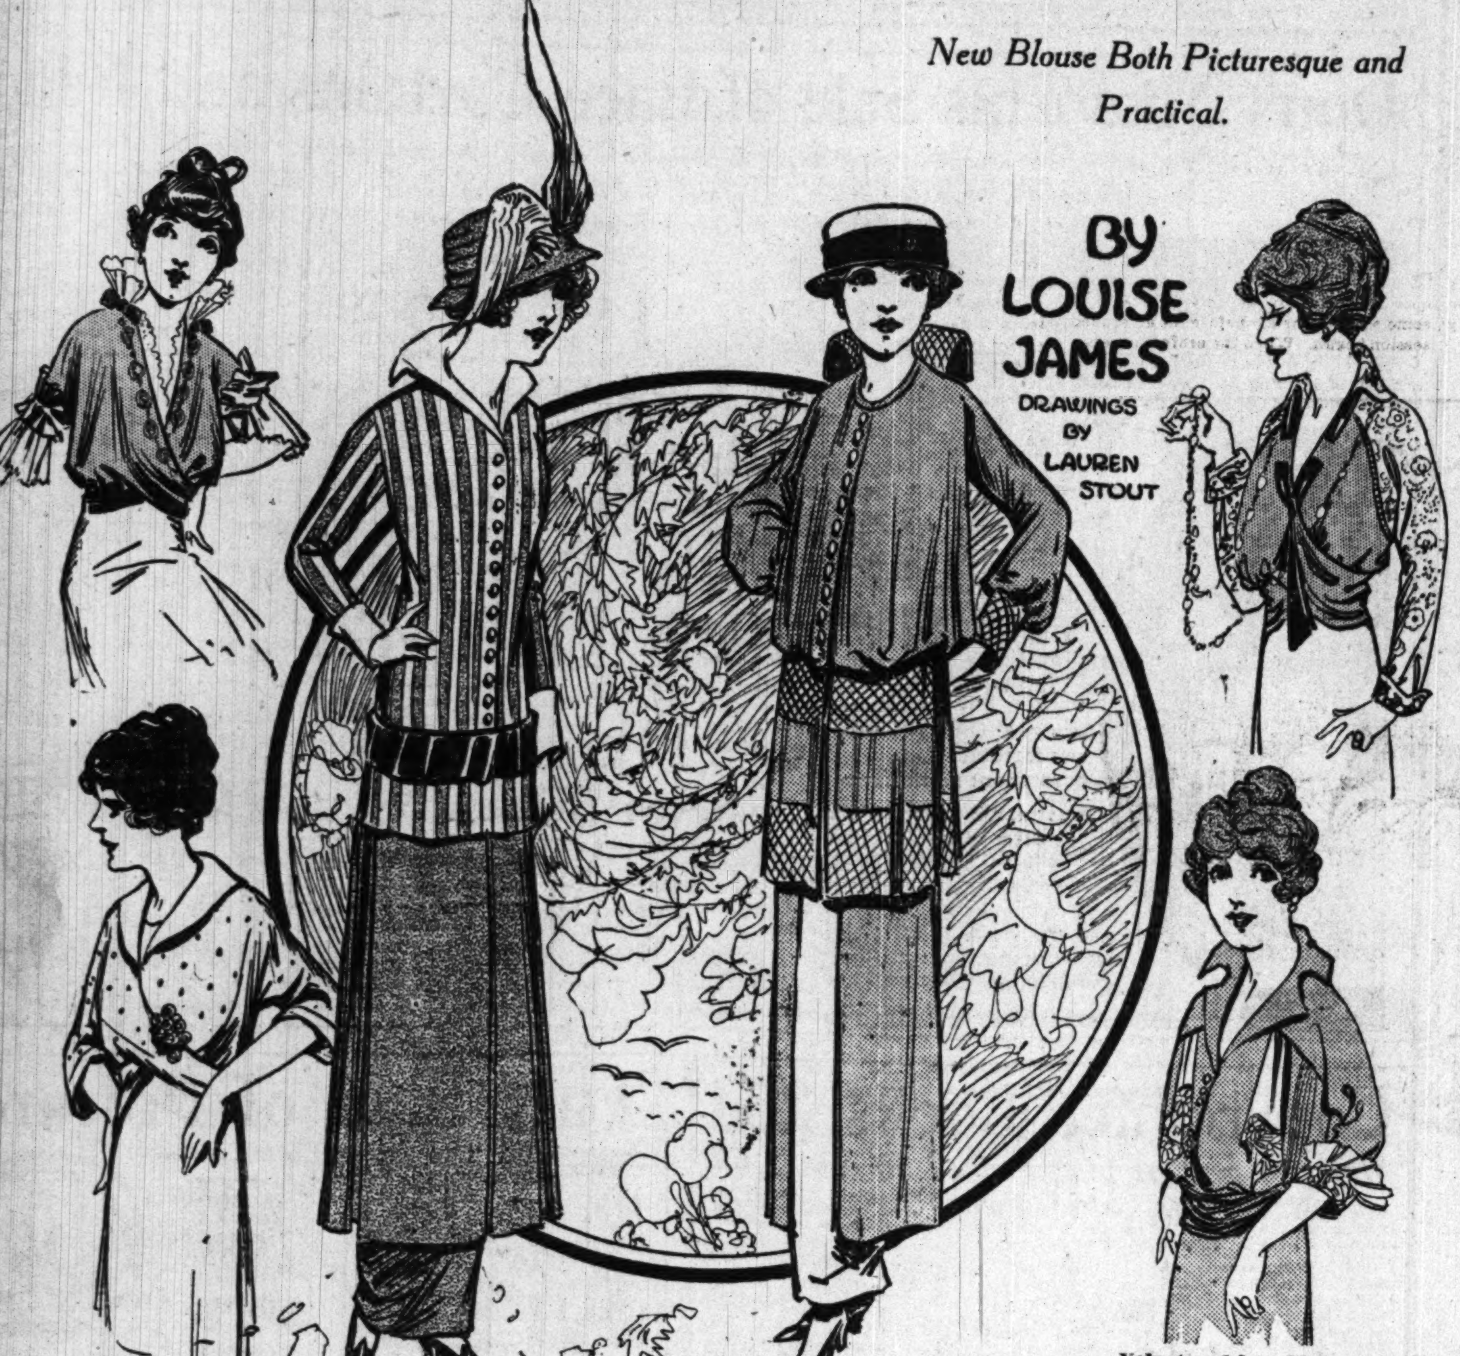
New Blouse Both Picturesque and Practical.



"Salamander" blouse of crepe de chine.

Velvet and lace blouse for afternoon wear.

Ecru lace trimmed pongee blouse.

Tulle frills adorn this blouse.

Waist with shawl ends forming belt.

Moyen age waist with low belt.

SELDON before in sartorial history has the much beloved feminine blouse taken on such divers and various forms. This season it has apparently decided to see just how many shapes it can assume and still remain in popular favor. And the queer part of it all is that every shape is a becoming one—the basque excepted. And incidentally the chances of the basque—by this I mean the basque in its extremest form—staying in favor for any length of time are slim.

The basque is not a becoming fashion to the average woman. If the figure is just about perfect, then there is a certain unique and rather unusual effectiveness in the close fitting lines. But since too few figures are perfect these days, and since women have long since passed the point where they will blindly follow the dictàtes of a few fashion arbiters, there is really no serious likelihood that the much disliked basque is going to remain in the limelight of favor.

As for the sashes, from the vogue they have enjoyed the last year one might reasonably expect that one could be writing now of their pst and counting them in with the flowers of the spring and the summer that now are no more; but such is not the case. Sashes continue to figure on almost every conceivable garment, lingeries not even excepted. The other day I saw a silk combination affair to be worn under a diaphanous frock, and about the waist line was coiled a most alluring wreath of tiny rosebuds. Probably all flower sashes will have made their appearance before the winter season is well under way.

The material of the blouse may be of almost every conceivable kind, from the sheerest chiffon or silk to the heaviest plush and velvet. There is a strong movement towards the dark, rich, harmonious shades—at least there was until a few weeks ago. Now, with the war and all the charges brought about by the upheaval, there is no telling whether or not fashions will not be seriously interfered with and influenced to a great extent, and that the rather somber coloring which was predicted will be shifted to the vivid hues again. Such, indeed, have been the rumors. Time only will verify or dismiss them.

The attractive blouse in the upper right hand corner of the page was designed for informal afternoon wear with the tailored suit. The tailored suit has become almost a uniform for American women. It is almost always seen on afternoon shopping tours and at the matinée. It is even worn to receptions with a handsome blouse of this type. The body of this waist is fashioned of velvet in a shade which duplicates the color of the skirt. The raglan sleeves and the collar are made of a heavy lace dyed to match the velvet. A tie of heavy black satin is cleverly drawn through long slashed eyelets embroidered in the velvet. The belt is formed by pieces from the front somewhat after the shawl end idea.

Below it is a waist appropriate for less formal afternoon wear. It is made of a new heavy pongee silk in natural color. The upstanding collar and the cleverly cut piece which hangs from the yoke in plaits are novel features. The blouse gives the effect of a bolero without really being one. A handsome lace in ecru trims the large flaring box plait and forms the cuff, which is further ornamented with a frill of net.

The central figure on the right displays one of the new long waisted blouses which are blouse and tunic combined. They are sometimes called "salamander" blouses, and they button either all the way down the front or down the back. The one illustrated is best developed in crêpe de chine with trimmings of plaid.

The waist on the left is one of the new moyen age designs. It hangs in a straight line from the shoulder, and the belt is placed low on the hips so that the line need not be broken. A dark silk with a blue and green stripe may be used for this waist, to be worn with a dark blue serge skirt. The belt of heavy black satin is finished with flat tailored bows and a buckle.

The upper left hand blouse is fashioned of soft silk crêpe and is frilly enough to satisfy the most feminine of maidens. A tulle ruff at the back of the neck, deep tulle frills at the sleeves, a ruching of satin a shade or two darker than the waist, and tiny satin bows—what more could any one ask in the way of adornment?

The lower drawing illustrates the plain blouse which is a necessary part of every woman's wardrobe. It is made in a plain kimono sleeve style with shawl ends which cross in the front and are tied in a bow in the back. Soft silk in a flowered pattern would be suitable for this waist, with collars and cuffs in plain silk.

The cape with sleeves is among the new garments. Such capes are very much rippled and made of rich materials.

Printed satins for linings show a riot of color and patterns that are beyond the wildest dreams of the futurist.

A decided ripple is noticed in many of the new hip length coats. Usually they are worn with flaring skirts.

Flounced skirts have their flounces rounded or pointed and bound with silk or braid.

Varied Activities of Women.

One for the Colonel.

Col. Roosevelt was once on a visit to Virginia and noticed an elderly woman trying to board a train. With his usual courtesy he rushed forward to assist her. That done, he grasped her hand and gave it an "executive shake." This was going too far, and the woman, snatching her hand away and eying him wrathfully, exclaimed, "Young man, I don't know who you are or where you come from, and I don't care a cent, but I must say you are the freshest upstart I ever seed 'round these parts." The colonel was amused if not complimented. C. E. M.

Handsome as a Gargoyle.

I was once told that I was as handsome as a gargoyle, and I was so puffed up over what I thought to be a "classy" compliment that I spent my whole week's allowance in entertaining the girl who paid the compliment, and didn't see the point until I got home and looked in the dictionary to find out just how handsome a gargoyle could be. Matched Her Face.

One day I was standing with a group of the girls of my office, discussing the one feature of our face which we thought was the worst. I said that I had decided if it wasn't for my nose I would be happy. The girl in the circle who was my chum replied, "O, I don't think so. It goes all right with the rest of your face." R. S.

Like a Press Agent.

Years ago this compliment was paid to a soubrette star of fame, whose name I cannot recall. She was the possessor of a sweet voice and remarkably beautiful arms, and one of the critics said of her: "She has a voice of vocal velvet and the lost arms of the Venus of Milo." P. P.

Misjudged Her Age.

I am 39 years of age and considered rather a well preserved woman. At a recent gathering during the lull in the conversation one old lady of 60 or 65 turned to me and said in a loud voice: "You evidently remember the enthusiasm at the return of the troops at the close of the civil war."

All turned toward me. It was an embarrassing moment to me, also a tragic one, for I fear each woman in that gathering will think of me as an admirer of the returning troops forty-nine years ago. E. D.

Wheat from Only Three States Makes the Flour You Want

There are only a few States in America that grow the best flour-making wheat. In North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota, the soil and the climate are such that Nature can do her best work—can produce the hardest and richest Spring Wheat.

The wheat grown in many other States is lacking in gluten and strength. It has too much starch. It makes bread, but not bread that satisfies you. It makes bread that is lacking in flavor and lacking in power to make muscle and brains.

But even the wheat grown in the Dakotas and Minnesota is not all good enough for making PILLSBURY'S BEST. There are millions of bushels that are almost good enough, but they are rejected. Only wheat is accepted which reaches the Pillsbury standard—a standard as rigid and true as the standard for making gold dollars in the United States mint. Don't use flour that is in the slightest inferior. Don't use flour that varies. Don't use flour that reflects on your skill.

The Home Dressmaker

Making the Summer Hat Do Through the Fall.

NOTHING is quite so shabby as a hat that has seen its best days, and of all hats the summer one most quickly gets shabby. With the approach of fall many women are facing the problem of tiding over their headgear until the winter hats are definitely fixed in fashion, so today we may find interesting a little talk on the between season hat.

Naturally the average woman does not wish to spend much money on this headgear, so her first step is to go over her belongings and see what may be turned to account. And just here let me say that much is of use that is discarded by the unknowing.

Take, for instance, the white or light colored straw hat that looks unseemly with the first cool days. As in all probability it will be out of style next year, do not hoard it, especially if the shape is becoming. Rip the trimming, brush with a stiff brush, sponge with alcohol, then color black with shoe polish or any of the coloring mixtures that may be bought at the druggist's. It will be necessary to give two or even three coats for a white hat. The coloring comes in both shiny and dull black, besides many good dark shades, and usually costs about 25 cents a bottle, which is enough for one hat.

Where you have already a black hat of which you are tired, it is easily changed by new trimming. To freshen the frame only a good dusting and alcohol sponging may be needed, but if sunburned use the polish or coloring.

The trimming problem is a bit more difficult, as there must be no suspicion of shabbiness or the use of leftovers. Fortunately simplicity of line and trimming is still smart and a hat may be remodeled with a bow, a quill, or a "fancy," any one of which can be made at home from odds and ends of material.

Suppose your hat is one of the narrow brimmed, round crowned white sailors, so popular this last summer. It may be made into a stylish between season hat by coloring and trimming with a band and bow of taffeta in self tones.

Thus a dark green hat to wear with the one piece taffeta frock that is comfortable until late October without a jacket may be trimmed with the remnant of silk left from the frock. Cut into a strip seven and a half or eight inches wide, preferably bias, and long enough to encircle the crown of your hat, and make a two looped bow with two projecting ends at the left side of the hat. Each loop should be four inches long, three inches beyond the knot, which is two inches wide. The front end, which is cut in diagonal, extends about an inch and a half in front of the front loop; the other end, squared, is two inches beyond the back loop. The entire bow is crushed in by the folded knot, to be just the height of the hat crown.

As a finish for this taffeta strip baste or chalk a line nearly an inch from each side as a guide and have the strip hemstitched by machine on both sides and in a bias line on one end and squared across the other. Cut in the middle of this stitching and you will have the effect of a picot edged ribbon. If you like a touch of color on a black hat this hemstitching may be done in a deep rose, green, tango yellow, or any desired shade.

A charming little hat may be made from one of the small bowl shaped affairs of the summer. This may be freshened and colored as described, or, if the edges are "bitten" they must be concealed by a binding or facing of silk or velvet. Almost every one has odd pieces of velvet that can be utilized. You may use a bias strip if the difference of circumference of the crown and rim edge is not too great, otherwise it will pucker though carefully stretched on the under side.

An easier way to cover a brim for the outside is to lay the piece of material on top of the brim and cut careful slashes close to the line where crown and brim join. This will make a close, neater fit. Now pin to the edge so an inch extends beyond the hat. Turn this edge over on the under side and sew with neat stitches which must not come through the material on the outside.

An easier way, I think, than sewing on this facing is to use what is known by milliners as "rubber cement," a sort of colorless glue which is stainless. The slashed edges at the crown will be covered by the trimming. If you prefer to cover the entire hat with velvet it will last all winter and is really wiser since velvet hats have been worn since August. The crown may be loose—that is, gathered on the edge and drawn into place over the brim covering.

To get a well fitting loose crown cut out a pattern in cheap muslin. From the square of muslin held loosely over the crown and held in at the joining of the rim by a cord it is easy to cut a rough pattern. Do not attempt for this hat anything full like a Tam O'Shanter. The crown is merely eased on. Use a heavy thread or buttonhole silk for your gathering and take stitches an eighth of an inch long. Adjust to your crown by pins, draw up the gathering thread, and fasten tight. Turn in the raw edge and paste or sew in blind stitches through the crown, or if sure of your fit the raw edge can be turned in and the gathering done through it.

Where the covering is to be smooth, stretch across a piece of velvet, pinning well. Stretch down over the sides, slash the bottom slightly, turn in the edges, and paste or sew to the hat. A little practice will make it as easy to cover a hat as for a professional, especially as any discrepancies at the line of jointure can be covered by trimming.

The little bowl shaped hat, whether entirely covered or with a straw crown, may be made into a dressy bit of headgear by encircling with a wreath of roses or hydrangeas of equal size. Place close together to almost conceal the crown and just extend slightly over the velvet brim. Use no foliage or merely a few leaves between every two flowers.

The half worn flowers from one summer hat may be used on this renovated one. If the color has faded brighten it with water color paint or dry rouge. The rouge is more easily handled by the novice. Rub down the edges with a piece of cotton for shading. Foliage can be freshened by carefully sponging with a piece of soft silk dipped in gasoline.

If you have a knack at flower making you may have a handsome garland made from a remnant of satin left from an evening gown or even from an old sash. Cut the petals as one would for paper roses. Use oil paints on the inside of the petals for the shading. These roses are costly to buy, but stylish. On a brown velvet or silk hat a wreath of yellow roses shading into deeper orange and browns would be a charming matinée hat.

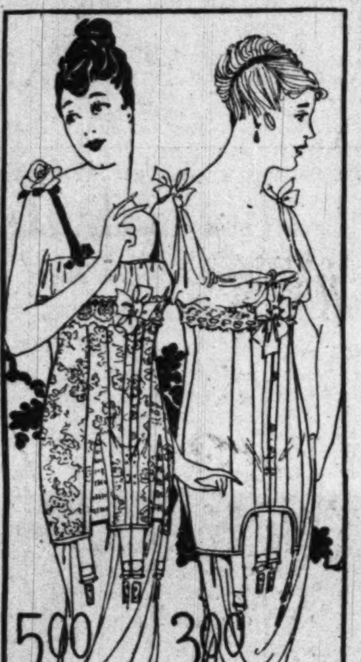
New Fall Models of C. B. Corsets



SOME say a woman is as old as she feels. A woman really is as old as her figure. The first sign of departing youth is the departure of the youthful figure. A good corset, properly selected and then properly fitted, will give you the youthful figure that you have had or that you should have. If you were ever troubled in finding just the corset to suit you, then come here and consult our C. B. expert, who will tell you what corset to wear and how to wear it. Third Floor.

The new fall 1914 corsets are departing from those freaky topless models. These new ones extend from 3 to 4 inches above the waist line. We are showing a complete line of the celebrated C. B. corsets, and with the assistance of the expert corset fitter you will have little trouble in being corset satisfied at The Fair.

the Crowds to Our 4th Floor Tomorrow

ature that should prove of vital y you to anticipate your vari- orth your while to buy pictures for are big! The savings are wonderful.

OUR departments devoted to floor coverings—to rugs, to carpets, and to linoleums—will be represented with one of the most important features of these great sale events on our 4th floor tomorrow. For several months we have prepared for this sale. We know that it will be a sensational money-saving event.

e Most Important Wilton Rug Sale of the Year

ONDAY we will place on sale the entire stock of worsted Wilton rugs from the John & James Dobson carpet and rug mills, Philadelphia's largest and oldest manufacturers. We secured this "plum" by taking the entire production in every size that this enormous mill makes, from small door mat size 18x36 inches to the largest room sizes, 11.3x15 feet. This line of rugs is not the y lot of drop patterns, discontinued for newer styles; but these are the entire new fall lines of 1914 patterns, p for the most exclusive trade. Most of the patterns are the neat small all-over Persian effects. Don't fail nd this sale, for, without a doubt, this will be one of the greatest Wilton rug sales that have ever been held icago. Prices in many cases are actually less than manufacturer's cost.

Buy Holeproof Hosiery

DON'T darn your stockings any more—put your darning basket away in the closet—you won't need it for 6 months when you buy a first box of Holeproof hosiery. Darning is now almost a thing of the past, for with every box of Holeproof we give a written guarantee to replace any pair that needs darning in six months. Instead of taking out your darning basket, you merely take out a coupon, and get a new pair of hose free—isn't that simple?

The makers pay an average of 70c a pound for finest Egyptian and Sea Island cotton yarn; common hose are often made from cotton at 12c per pound, yet the common hose sell for the same price as Holeproof. Holeproof uses three ply in body and six ply in the heels and toes. Ordinary hose are made from two ply yarn throughout. You pay no more for Holeproof but it wears much longer. Come in and see this hosiery. Note the style and comfort—see how light and soft it is. Buy one box and try it. Note how it hugs the ankle. Complete assortment of sizes and colors, guaranteed six months, six pairs, $1.50; six pairs $2; and six pairs at $3

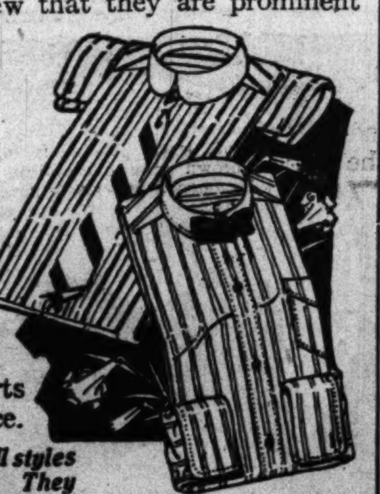
E. & W. Shirts for Men

WHENEVER we sell an E. & W. shirt, we feel that we are giving the man who buys it just as good a shirt as he can find anywhere at the price. We have been handling E. & W. shirts for years and the complaints are so few that they are prominent through their absence. Whenever a man buys an E. & W. shirt we feel confident that he will return again for another E. & W. shirt. They are made of the materials that give satisfaction—they are made in styles that men like—they are made in a way to give wear. E. & W. are shirts for style, comfort, service.



First Floor.

Come and see the new fall styles of the E. & W. shirts. They are worth a careful inspection.

The new styles of E. & W. are better than ever before. The manufacturers have been fortunate in their choice of patterns, bringing forth a collection of the newest things of the shirt world.

Women Who Advertise

whether to sell apartment houses, or to obtain work, whether to employ a maid, or to sell an automobile, find in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE more than a mere sheet of paper to print their words.

In addition to the purchase of advertising space, women advertisers in THE TRIBUNE have the service of a department devoted exclusively to their interests.

The Woman's Advertising Department of THE TRIBUNE is a section of the Want Ad Office on the main floor of The Tribune building, and is devoted exclusively to the service of women.

There are comfortable seats in which one may rest and discuss the problem to be solved. There are desks at which the ad may be written—not the usual counters against the wall.

And there are young women in charge who are trained in advertising, know how best to advertise any given proposition, and are glad to consult with visitors, assist them in writing ads, and inform them as to the exact cost of insertions. No charge is made for this advisory service.

The steady growth of patronage of this department indicates that the women of Chicago appreciate it.

You will like it, too. Try it and see.

Lillian Russell's Beauty Secrets.

C. B. S.: There is not enough lanolin in the cream to amount to anything, and if you use the astringent lotion after using the skin food you will find that the cream will not produce a growth of hair. To destroy superfluous hair apply a bit of peroxide and ammonia, using one-third ammonia and two-thirds peroxide of hydrogen. The ammonia will gradually kill the roots and the peroxide will bleach the hair. Too much fat meat is not good for the complexion, but there is no need of going without it altogether. One should drink plenty of water during the day. Do you think of the disagreeable things of the day after you have retired? When going to bed let your mind rest, but don't think of a single worrying matter. Practice deep breathing the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night. This will help you a great deal. Blackheads are usually caused from indigestion, anemia, and sometimes are due merely to neglect to wash the face properly. I shall send you my treatment for blackheads if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope, also the instructions for deep breathing.

MARGARET: The green soap used for the shampoo is not green but yellow in color. It comes in a small jar in a paste-like form and can be bought at any drug store. I cannot give you the name of it through my columns. The soap you mention may be all right for shampooing the hair, but I prefer a shampoo made from green soap. This is excellent for cleansing the scalp and freeing it from dandruff. I am sorry, but I cannot give you the name of the article you mention. I do not remember having heard of such an article. I would not advise you to try olive oil on your hair. It is effective, but makes the hair disagreeable and oily. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall send you a formula for hair tonic which is excellent for dandruff and a formula for chapped hands.

KITTY: In the case of a double chin and flabby neck prevention is easier than to cure. Tight collars always make ugly rolls of fat under the chin, and the habit of holding the chin down and in is fatal. A good exercise for preventing a double chin is to raise your head and blow at a bit of imaginary thistledown, keeping the chin in the air for about five minutes, supposing the thistledown to be first on one side of you and then on the other. Try this before your glass and see how it rounds out your neck and tightens the muscles. Another good exercise is to throw the head back with force, putting all the muscles on the stretch, then turn the head from side to side. Massage the neck with a rotary motion each night when retiring. I shall be glad to send you the formula for skin food for eradicating wrinkles from the face if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

GERTRUDE: Dimples are pretty when one is young. There is no possible way of making dimples deeper. They are really a defective muscle.

SATIN, EYELET, AND OUTLINE STITCHES

So many continued requests for new and varied designs in embroidery alphabets have come in that the accompanying illustration is given. The flower design is simple and is to be much used this fall.

There are two ways to apply the design to the material upon which it is to be worked. If your material is sheer, such as lawn, batiste, and the like, the simplest method is to lay the material over the design and with a sharply pointed pencil draw over each line. If your material is heavy secure a piece of transfer or impression paper. Lay it face down upon this, then draw over each line of the paper design with a hard pencil or the point of a steel knitting needle. Upon lifting the pattern and transfer paper you will find a neat and accurate outline of the design upon your material.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

Jane Eddington's articles are printed every day in "The Daily Tribune."

ONCE upon a time, in many countries, alcoholic drinks of some kind were used as foods and this is still true in some parts of the world, but we have come to recognize that these are in no sense foods and are injurious. All vinegar is made by an alcoholic process, and it is not only not a food but it lessens to some extent the food value of everything with which it is used, although all these things are stimulating and some have their excuse for being.

There are a considerable number of popular food combinations which gratify the palate, but are just as hard on the system as alcohol, and it is rather interesting that there are a good many recipes still used by people who do not use alcoholic drinks, although the dishes so represented were invented for the purpose of stimulating thirst.

The editor of this department is conscientiously trying to exclude from it all recipes which are not dietetically good. The effects of eating the wrong sorts of things are sometimes not evident for years, because the human system is a great fighter and is constantly working to get the better of all the disadvantages to which it is subject. But the harder it has to struggle the sooner it gets worn out and it is not necessary to make it work so hard.

The exception to such a rule of exclusion will be those recipes printed by request. Those who make requests without inclosing stamped and addressed envelopes should have them in the office by Monday if the recipes are to appear the following Sunday, or earlier yet is better, for plans made and work done cannot always be set aside.

From Fort Stanton, N. M., comes a request for the following: Sauerbraten or German pot roast, pickled boiled eggs German style, horseradish sauce, mustard sauce, raisin sauce. Since this list may be of general interest the following are given.

The German sour meats, the eggs, and fish are not necessarily bad, from a dietetic point of view, but sour lentils, sour beans, potato salad, red grits, and all the combinations of flour or a cereal or anything containing much starch like peas, beans, lentils, and potatoes, with something acid, are bad and a certain sort of body stoutness attributed to beer drinking is as much due to them as anything else in all probability.

German Sauerbraten.

The following recipe is one that has been used in a family in the city of Dortmund, North Germany, these many years. Take a large piece of nice beef without any bone, preferably five or six pounds. Make pickle enough to cover it by boiling together two-thirds vinegar and one-third water with bay leaf, cloves, a few peppercorns, and two pieces of lump sugar (large or small to taste). While this is boiling hot drop the meat into it and let it remain for four or five days, turning once. Take the meat out of the vinegar the night before it is to be used and thoroughly drain. Put some butter in a pot with one whole onion, add the beef with salt and pepper and a cup of liquid (some people use a little of the pickle diluted, others use meat stock and others water, while those who are expert cooks add nothing but the butter since none of the juice which cooks out of the meat is lost by too much fire). Cover the pot closely and cook for two hours and a half over a low fire. Take up the meat, thicken the liquid for a gravy, adding a little sugar. Serve with boiled potatoes. This is good cold as well as hot and is used for sandwiches in Dortmund.

Pot Roast Cut.

For any pot roast the chuck is in general considered the best cut, but a domestic science expert some years back showed by experiment that, as far as economy was concerned, the advantage was in favor of the rib roast if the difference between the two was 2 cents a pound. The loss in cooking in the case of the chuck roast was one pound and two ounces and only ten ounces in case of the rib roast. The refuse or unedible portion of the chuck was one pound and five ounces, of the rib eleven ounces.

Another piece that is recommended for the pot roast and for boiling is the sirloin butt, which is just below the sirloin steak part. Some butchers will give a piece off the round when asked for a pot roast, but this is really too dry for the purpose. The "heel" of the round, which is generally made into Hamburg steak, is often boiled and may even be used for a pot roast if cooked expertly.

Pickled Eggs.

Take eight hard boiled eggs and, having shelled them, stick four cloves in each. Heat one quart of vinegar (it may need to be diluted if strong) to boiling and add a teaspoon each of salt, pepper, and mustard or scant these somewhat. Put the eggs into a glass fruit jar, pour the boiling vinegar over them, and let them stand two weeks or use sooner if to taste. Serve sliced with broiled beefsteak or mutton or as you will.

Horseradish Sauce.

The Germans have numerous ways of making horseradish sauce which is a great favorite with them. For one thing they freeze it with whipped cream for one of the daintiest accompaniments possible for boiled fish. They make a sauce with pure cream with a little vinegar and about half as much grated horseradish as hot cream, or they add it to cold whipped cream. They make it with a white sauce, to which this editor, once a friend, is now a persistent foe. And here is one of the recipes from one of the most authoritative of the great German books on cookery: Two tablespoons of grated horseradish, about half a cup of beef stock, an ounce of butter, about the same quantity of onion, two tablespoons of flour, and then another cup of beef stock with salt to taste. Peel and grate the horseradish quickly and let it draw in the half cup of stock in an earthenware dish. Make a sauce of the butter, flour, and cup of stock, seasoning to taste, and then add the horseradish and half cup of stock to this. If the horseradish taste is then very sharp add two tablespoons of milk or cream.

Mustard Sauce.

Mustard sauce, especially when made with either white or butter sauce, is not a thing to recommend for the digestion. Another way to make it is to mix a tablespoon of French mustard with three or four tablespoons of good meat gravy, or better, a greatly reduced and highly seasoned meat stock, one in which many vegetables have been used to flavor. In that German-American publication called "The Settlement" cook book there is the folloswing recipe: "One cup white sauce, one tablespoon vinegar, one tablespoon mustard, one-half teaspoon sugar, one teaspoon cold water. Mix the mustard with the water and stir into the white sauce two minutes before serving. Season to taste. More or less mustard may be added as desired. Serve hot with meat or fish."

For fish a butter sauce with one tablespoon of mustard to a pint is best. A butter sauce is made just like a white sauce, except boiling water instead of boiling milk is thickened with flour and butter. There are a great many other ways of making mustard sauces, some of which contain ten or a dozen ingredients.

Raisin Sauces.

Recipes for raisin sauces, under that name, are rare, but there are chutney sauces which contain raisins, and raisins are used in New Zealand curries with lemon instead of sour apple or tamarind. In the book of "101 Sauces" there is the following chutney sauce: "Remove the seeds from one-half cup of raisins and one green pepper; add three green tomatoes, two small onions, and chop all fine. Put one pint of vinegar with one cup of brown sugar and one tablespoon of mustard seed on to boil; add the chopped mixture and one teaspoon of salt and simmer one hour. Then add six green sour apples, pared, cored, and cut small. Cook slowly until soft and keep in a well corked bottle. Used with boiled meats or stews."

Have You Ever Seen a Burglar?

You probably have had a thrilling or a humorous encounter with a real or imagined burglar. Probably you can remember that time when you awoke to feel the "cold steel of the revolver" pressing against your neck or the time you almost ended the career of Sister Susan, the somnambulist, by a blow of an Indian club which luckily hit the chandelier instead. For every letter either exciting or funny that is published "The Tribune" will pay $1. Address Editor of the Burglar Contest, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

He Found the Dough.

One night when I was alone in the house I heard a sort of crash in the kitchen, and donning my kimona, went down boldly, being naturally courageous. In the evening I had set a batch of bread and had left the huge pan of dough by the stove. As I peeped cautiously through the crack in the kitchen door I saw, to my horror, a burglar covered with dough. He had fallen into the bread. He was so busy removing the mess from his clothes that he did not hear me, and I slipped away to phone the police. By the time they came, however, he was gone. Next day, needless to say, we did not have fresh bread.

Saved Her Diamond.

A robber entered our home the other morning and tried to tear my diamond from my finger. A flash of light awakened me and I screamed. He immediately told me not to scream.

He and I both grabbed for my throat at the same time—I to protect myself. He instead pushed his hand into my mouth and tore my lips in doing so. I screamed at every breath, "I will scream." He held my arm so tightly that it was badly bruised.

I leaped out of bed. He knocked me against the dressing table. I made a dive for the electric button to turn on the light, but it failed.

The click scared the robber away. I followed him to the front door and watched him scale the twelve foot wall to the pavement below.

In a few minutes the officers arrived. I saved my diamond and I feel that I would have died had I lost it, as it was a gift from my fiancé, who had recently died.

Neighbor Was the Thief.

We keep our meat, flour, and tinned goods in a brick building near the kitchen door. One night my husband was late coming home. About midnight I was awakened by stealthy steps on the back walk.

I slipped through a side door and around to the storehouse. The door was open and I could see a man putting a ham in a bag. When he turned his back to the door and with a flashlight looked for another ham I closed the door quietly and locked the padlock (that should have been locked earlier).

When my husband came home a half hour later he discovered the burglar to be a not distant neighbor. So with the gift of a ham and some good advice he turned him loose.

Marion Harland's Helping Hand

By Marion Harland

Marion Harland's Helping Hand Corner appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"SOME months ago I saw in the paper a request for the poem entitled, 'The Silkworm's Mill.' It was an old paper and I have not been able to follow the Corner regularly enough to know if the poem was ever found by Mrs. A. M., who asked for it. In case she did not secure it, I am happy to tell her that she will find it in a Sunday school book entitled 'The Prize,' published by the American Sunday School union of Philadelphia in the year 1847. In this publication the author's name is not given. I send a copy of the poem entire, on the chance of its being sought either by Mrs. A. M. or some other reader.

"M. E. C."

I do not know if Mrs. A. M. found the verses or not, but I will hold the copy you kindly send so that if she sees your letter and wishes the poem she may send a stamp to me for it. Thank you for the trouble you have taken to copy the lines and to forward them to me. Such friendly offices are supplied through the Corner so frequently that sometimes I fear we get almost too much into the habit of taking them as a matter of course.

Brought Her Much Good.

"I received a lovely hand sewing machine from a Cornerite, and although I wrote at once and thanked her for it, I now thank you for your kindness, and I hope that some day when I get well I can help, too. Another woman wrote and said she would send my girls some dresses, as she had no machine to send me, and I wrote to her, too, and said I would be glad to have them. The Corner has brought me so much good.

"Mrs. F. J. C."

It is always gratifying to print such acknowledgements as these and show our readers the generosity with which appeals for help are met. I always try to believe that such appeals are not made until the writer has exhausted every other resource, and I deny emphatically the accusation that those who could help themselves often turn to the Corner for help. It is in nearly every case a last resort, and it warms my heart to observe the readiness on the part of those who are able to give to answer to the cry of the needy.

Box Uncalled For.

"I sent a box of silk pieces to Mrs. Maud F. and have received word from the postmaster that they have not been called for and that there is no one of that name there.

M. C. B."

The address and name of Mrs. Maud F. were sent to you as they were given to us. I print your letter here in the hope that this may meet her eyes and that she may send us more explicit information of how she is to be found.

* *

Would Donate an Ear Trumpet.

"I recently saw in the Corner an appeal for an ear trumpet. I have one that was my mother's which I will gladly pass on to some one who needs it.

"Mrs. M. L. B."

Ear trumpets are always in demand, and I will be happy to give the address of Mrs. M. L. B. to applicants. The sad part of such an offer is that only one person can get the benefit of it.

Blind and Deaf.

"In our village there is a blind man trying to earn a living by making and selling baskets, but he could do much better if he had an ear trumpet. He is so hard of hearing that it is hard for people to make him understand what they say to him.

Mrs. H. R."

Either deafness or blindness is hard enough to bear; when both come to the same sufferer they must awaken our deepest sympathies, especially when the victim pluckily tries to take care of himself. I hope the ear trumpet may soon be supplied, and I will give the address to which it must go.

Gum on the Carpet.

"Please tell me what I am to do to get chewing gum off my carpet. The carpet is green and I am afraid of spoiling the color. The ants are attacking us and I would like to know how to get them out of the house. I am more than grateful for this information.

Reader."

For the chewing gum I would advise the use of either alcohol or gasoline. Scrape off the gum, then scour the place with alcohol or gasoline. Should you employ the latter, be sure that there is no light or fire in the rooms. I cannot insure success in your efforts, but this is the best I can recommend. Do any of our readers know any better remedy? If the ants come into the house from the outside paint the sills of the doors and windows with kerosene. It is said that this will stop their progress. Repeat the process a number of times. When the ants are already in the house put a mixture of borax and red pepper into the corners of the shelves and in the cracks and crevices where the pests gather. You cannot banish them by one application, but keep it up and it will in time drive them away.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. She will answer letters, either through this department or by personal reply. No want will be too small—no difficulty too great for her to consider. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

The Time Killer.

THERE is a type of business girl who is extremely unpopular with her associates and employer. She is the time killer—the girl whose sole aim seems to be to draw a salary at the end of each week for doing as little work as she can possibly do.

I have heard of a girl who spends as much time in the woman's restroom of the building in which she works as she does in the office. She rearranges her hair at least twice a day and cold creams and powders her face many times. Occasionally she volunteers to fix the hair of other girls whose coiffures she thinks she can improve upon.

There is a comfortable couch in the restroom for girls who are ill, and Miss Time Killer finds it convenient to take a nap on it every once in a while. The fact that she may be keeping the couch from some girl who is really ill does not seem to bother her in the least.

SPENT A GREAT DEAL of TIME in CALLING UP FRIENDS

Her employer does not miss her when she is away from the office. He is in a private office and takes it for granted that she is doing her work. No matter how the other people in the office may feel about her shirking her work, they will not complain about her to the manager and she knows it.

The other girls in the office often are obliged to stay beyond their regular working hours because she did not do her share of the work in the daytime, but if she realizes this it does not seem to bother her.

In an insurance office where a number of girls are employed the manager was obliged to instruct the cashier to dock the girls who stayed home, no matter what the reason might be, because nearly every day some one of the girls was absent. It happened sometimes that there were as many as three girls away from the office on the same day.

This man was naturally generous and fairminded and he disliked having to make such a ruling, but he felt that it was the only way to correct the abuse. He suspected that the girls were not always ill when they stayed at home, and he was sure of it after he installed the docking system. The working out of this system proved that he was right.

The girls who seemed to be chronic invalids, judging from the number of times they were obliged to remain away from the office because of illness, rarely missed a day, and when they did their excuse was certain to be a good one.

In some offices it has been found necessary to forbid the employés to use the telephone for personal calls. The fact that one or two employés not only used the telephone to make and break engagements, but spent a great deal of time calling up their friends to chat with them, in most cases, is responsible for this ruling.

The candy fiend who spends most of her lunch money for sweets, is an annoying person to have in an office. I have known girls who bought candy every day. If by chance they didn't get it at noon time they would slip out later in the day for some or would send the office boy out to get it for them.

The girl who is constantly eating during working hours is often laughed at by the men and the more sensible girls in the office as being babyish and self-indulgent, and, incidentally, she runs a chance of ruining her digestion.

Not only is the time killer wasting time that her employer pays her to give to his work, but she is being most unfair to the girls who work with her.

The conscientious business girls, who are in the majority, of course are often denied privileges they would otherwise enjoy if it were not for the thoughtlessness and carelessness of a few.

It seems rather hard that a girl who never shirks her work or wastes any of her employer's time should be obliged to lose a day's pay when she stayed at home because she is too ill to go to work. To some girls the loss of even a small part of their salary means a great deal.

Although the privilege of using the telephone for personal calls is often abused there are times when a girl finds it necessary to use the telephone for a personal matter and dreads to ask her employer for permission to do so, fearing that he will refuse because the other people in the office might want him to break the rule for them.

Besides being a source of annoyance to her employers and associates in business, the girl who fritters away time that does not belong to her certainly stands no chance of winning promotion in her work, and she is running every risk of depriving herself of a position. Even the most lenient of employers could not tolerate for any length of time a worker whom he recognized as an habitual shirker.

"The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For."

Many business girls have had queer employers at some time or other during their business careers and some of these men have the most unexpected eccentricities. Those of us who have been in business life for many years probably know a number of such queer characters. "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on the subject of "The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For." Address letters to Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

One of the "Penny Wise."

My first position after leaving business college was in a country bank, whose president, Mr. E., was so stingy with office supplies that he really hindered his employés. He bought in large quantities and consequently at a low figure, but every time he saw us sharpen a new pencil he would say, "You haven't used that other one, have you?"

He always had letters written single space to save paper and would cut backs from used envelopes to use for scratch paper and could not see that time spent in such small economies was worth more than the penny saved.

On one occasion he lost quite a sum of money in a deal because he did not want to pay for a telegram when a letter could be sent for 2 cents, but the letter was delayed and the deal lost.

On the other hand, he was liberal with his family, subscribed generously to charity and public benefits, allowed us full pay for vacations and overtime, and I don't think he ever realized how peculiar he was in the office. L. R.

Poetry as a Side Line.

I took a position as bookkeeper with a man who owned a large stationery store. He was about 50 years of age, with a shining bald head and a straggly white beard. He always attended to the dressing of the show windows himself and regularly every morning made some alteration in the display. Before doing this, however, he would stand before the mirror at least ten minutes brushing and combing his whiskers, then from a shelf would come an old silk hat, which he would dust very carefully before setting it upon his shining pate. Having accomplished all this to his satisfaction he would enter the window and potter around for about an hour. Passersby, unable to conceal their amusement, were treated to a fierce glare from beneath his bushy eyebrows. The hat usually remained with him for the rest of the day, only being dislodged when raised for an instant to some lady customer.

Above the store was a workroom, where he manufactured valentines and other paper novelties. Another of his fads was composing verses for these. He did not seem to be really gifted as a poet, some of his rhymes being absurd; in fact, almost childish; also he became inspired at most inconvenient times. His wife confided to me one day in tones of deepest disgust that he had left his bed at midnight the night before, and with the light full on and glaring in her eyes, proceeded to scribble until morning and completely destroyed her rest. L. E. D.

Working in Sports.

The queerest man I ever worked for was an old man who had made a fortune in the real estate business. Although past 70 years, he believed no man but himself capable of taking charge of his big force of workers and every deal, no matter how few dollars were involved, had to pass through his own hands. As he spent eight months of the year in a summer home 300 miles from his office, this made matters bad enough.

His queerest habit of all was to refuse to allow me to even open his mail sometimes for three, four, or even nine days at a time, and therefore keep me from any work then suddenly get a fever to work at any hour of the night. Often I have sat down to a 2 o'clock in the morning breakfast which he had roused all the servants to cook and then been compelled to work with him for eighteen and twenty hours at a stretch, in the meantime never leaving his study for more than five minutes and eating only tray lunches.

Sometimes he insisted on my working in this way for ten days at a time, when I would get only nine hours sleep for that entire period. My one consolation at such times lay in the sure knowledge of the long and complete rest to follow.

His times of complete laziness and of overwork averaged for one year to exactly seven hours of work a day, as I found out by keeping record, had he divided them as ordinary mortals do, but he always paid liberally for overtime and never deducted the days when there was no work done. H. F.

Love Letters

$20 for Two Love Letters.

"The Tribune" will pay $10 for the best love letter written by a man to a woman and another $10 for the best love letter written by a woman to a man. No letter copied from a book or magazine will be considered. You may submit as many letters as you like. They may be either real or imaginary. Letters will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

She Kept the Secret.

The following letter is a copy of a letter found in the trunk of an "old maid," who, when a young woman, came to live in the little country town my mother lived in. The letter was found after her death. She told that her mother was dead and her father and brother were killed in the war, and that her sister had died and left a little baby, which she was going to take care of. She was a very sad, old-young looking woman and seemed to worship the little boy baby. She rented a little store and went into the millinery business, and as years went by and she didn't marry, the people dubbed her the "old maid." The little boy died of diphtheria at the age of 15. She died five years later. No one knew much of her business and very little of her previous history.

MRS. O. E. W., Box 137, Corliss, Wis.

"Gettysburg, Aug. —, 1863.

"My Darling Little Girl: I received your dear letter and am in one way happy and in another very unhappy at the news it contained.

"Oh! little girl, I did so great a wrong to you when I coaxed you to marry me secretly. I am so far from you and I was so careless in not seeing to it that you received a wedding certificate. You see, sweetheart, the old minister is dead now and it may be as he was sick at the time that he failed to record the marriage. See what you can do about it, and if you cannot get the proper proof show them my letter, and if the folks do not help you, then may God help you.

"Oh! if only this war would cease and I could be with my little girl. I am so heartsick with longing for you. I had you such a little time. I will be so glad when the war is over and I can have you for all time. I am thinking of you all the time and those big blue eyes, looking so loving all the time, are always before me.

"We have been having some very hard times and are tired out. All I can think of tonight is your trouble. Be brave, darling, and I think God will arrange a way so things will come all right. Take very good care of my own little girl. I must lie down now for a couple of hours' rest. We meet the enemy tomorrow and expect a big victory. I hope to be with you in my dreams at any rate, Love, and then much love from your

"ROBERT."

"After the battle.—P. S.—Darling: All hope is gone. I am lying here and the nurse tells me the doctor says there is no hope for me. I was shot and am penning a few last words. Do not grieve too much, darling. It will be very bad for you. I wanted to be with you so badly, and now I can't even see you at the last. Now I know how other boys have really suffered out on these battlefields. I will try and say, 'Thy will be done,' but it is so hard. Remember that I loved you and would have given my whole life to make you happy. I pray God to help you and to forgive me my sin toward you, but oh! I loved you so. I didn't stop to think when I persuaded you to marry me secretly. I am getting weak and they tell me I must stop. Oh! darling, and I am never to see my baby! Good-by. It is getting dark."

From His Happy Sweetheart.

This letter a girl wrote to her fiancé two weeks before they were married. The girl worked in a candy store. The letter was sent by Miss Dora Hannah, 2451 Michigan avenue:

"Dear Bill: Although we are to be married in a short time, I feel as if I never had a real talk with you, for when I am with you I am so happy that I just can't talk. So I must put it on paper and send it to you.

"First, let me tell you that I love you with all my soul. I love you because you are a real man, because you are clean in mind, clean in body, and you don't know how proud I feel when I take your big honest hands and look in your kind, laughing eyes. O, I am so happy; and dear, you must never again say that we are so poor. Why, we are rich. We have love and, best of all, our health to work, and I would not give you up for the richest man in the world if I had to work the rest of my life.

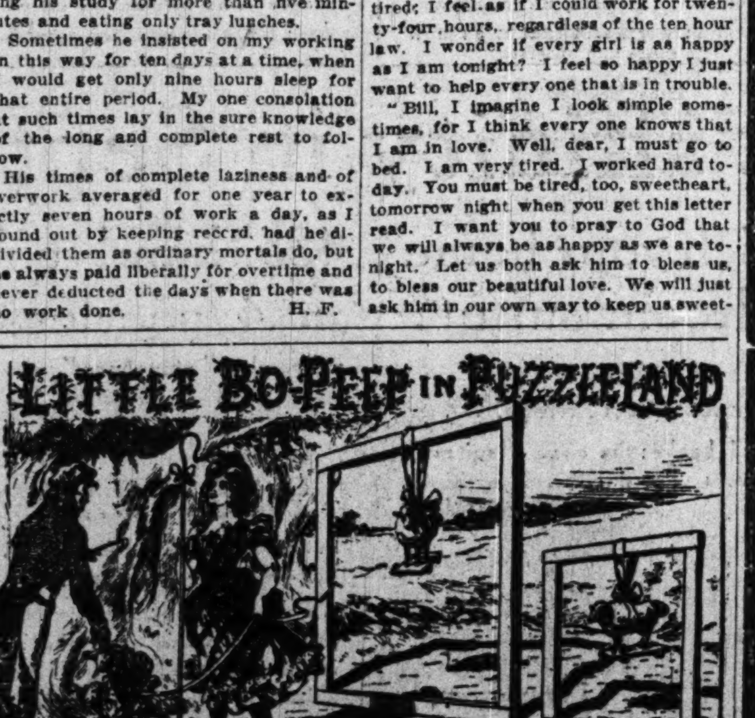
"I love you, for you are kind and gentle, because you have respect for all women, and, dear, I want you to be always kind and gentle to me. I think I could live on one meal a day if you are kind to me. Don't ever snap at me, please, like I see so many married folks do. I think husband and wife should respect each other.

"As for me, I will live for you. I will try to make a good wife to you, and our little flat—how I have planned to fit its four rooms! Clean and light, with my fancy work all over it, you coming home from work, and our little supper; and when we can aford it we will go to a nickel show. Sweetheart, I am going to work until the very last day; I am not tired; I feel as if I could work for twenty-four hours, regardless of the ten hour law. I wonder if every girl is as happy as I am tonight? I feel so happy I just want to help every one that is in trouble.

"Bill, I imagine I look simple sometimes, for I think every one knows that I am in love. Well, dear, I must go to bed. I am very tired. I worked hard today. You must be tired, too, sweetheart, tomorrow night when you get this letter read. I want you to pray to God that we will always be as happy as we are tonight. Let us both ask him to bless us, to bless our beautiful love. We will just ask him in our own way to keep us sweethearts. Won't it be nice to grow old together and love each other as we do now?

"I will say good-night, sweetheart. With love and kisses to the best and grandest man in all the world from the happiest girl in the U. S. A.

"P. S.—I wish I was a scholar and could tell you in great big words how much I love you. HELEN."



Once upon a time when Little Bo-Peep was tending her flocks upon the hills of Puzzleland, one of her many admirers presented her with three little miniature lambs whose fleece was bright like gold. Then the admirer, who was somewhat of an amateur carpenter, fashioned two separate folds out of eight bars, as shown in the picture. You will observe that four of the bars are twice the length of the others. That gave the pretty shepherdess an idea for a puzzle, for she quickly said to the young man: "All of my beaus are clever men and naturally apt at solving puzzles, so I want you to prove your qualification by taking those same eight bars (strips of paper—four twice the length of the other four—may be used to illustrate the puzzle) and without breaking the pieces arrange them so as to form three square folds of the same size." Can you help out the puzzled admirer?

If you can't figure this out the answer will be found on page 8.

Doris Blake Says

"In Times of War Woman's Lot Is Harder Than Man's."

Articles by Doris Blake and her replies to letters appear every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IT doesn't require imagination to realize what suffering this appalling war has wreaked upon womankind. Our husbands, sons, and sweethearts here at home go about their business in the usual way and come home at eve to rest. But think what heartache and misery would be ours if suddenly the war breath entered our homes and claimed our strong and able—those nearest and dearest. Picture the dread for their safety that would haunt us for days and for weeks and for months perhaps. And the horror of a tag instead of the return of the beloved one.

Over there in that war land there is hardly a home that is not tense with excitement, anxiety, and grief. Every woman's heart, whether beating under satin or gingham, has its own particular ache crying out for appease.

The lot of the rich woman who gives up her only son, the pride of an ancient family, is no harder than that of the poor, struggling soul who shuts the cottage door upon "her own man" and turns desolate to hug her baby and cry over it. And the blasted hopes of the sweetheart add heavily to the burden war inflicts upon woman.

Woman's lot in war times is harder than the man's and calls for finer qualities of mind and heart than those which are necessary to the full equipment of the fighter. While he wrestles with the enemy amid all the fierce clamor and horror of the actual field of battle, flashing his soul out to the accompaniment of booming cannon and clattering bayonets, she goes silent along the common ways of life, held fast in the grip of fear and only thankful that there are things which must needs be done to keep the little mouths fed and the home from going to wreck and ruin while the men are away.

Work is woman's only comfort and salvation in times of war. It is the great anesthetic. The planning of ways and means to provide food for little mouths that want feeding continuously, the mending up of little garments that were to have been renewed the very week the war cloud burst, and the anxious readjustment of small sums of money to increased prices of the bare necessities of life may help to quiet the pain. But to the woman who is left behind the burden of war is terrible. For to a tremendous number of them, alas, the joy of victory will only bring despair.

The deep rooted sympathy we extend to our suffering sisters seems a hopelessly inadequate thing to offer in their affliction.

Introducing Man and Woman.

"Dear Miss Blake: To settle an opinion as to the right way of introducing two people, would it be correct to say "Mr. Smith, meet Miss Jones," or should the woman be mentioned first? M. B."

The woman should be mentioned first. The proper form for the introduction is, "Miss Jones, may I present Mr. Smith," or, in the shorter form, "Miss Jones, Mr. Smith."

She's Never Met Them.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am an interested daily reader of your splendid advise to those perplexed. I also come to you for advice. I am 19 years of age and am a stenographer and bookkeeper. My position makes it necessary for me to pass through a building every morning, noon, and night. There are many boys, all about my age, employed here. Is it proper for me, or do I do wrong, in talking to these boys? I have never had an introduction to any of them, but seeing them so often I have become acquainted. If my action has not been proper I will cease it immediately. WONDERING."

As long as you have been talking to the boys it will be unnecessary to stop talking. Do not pick up acquaintances of this sort in the future, however.

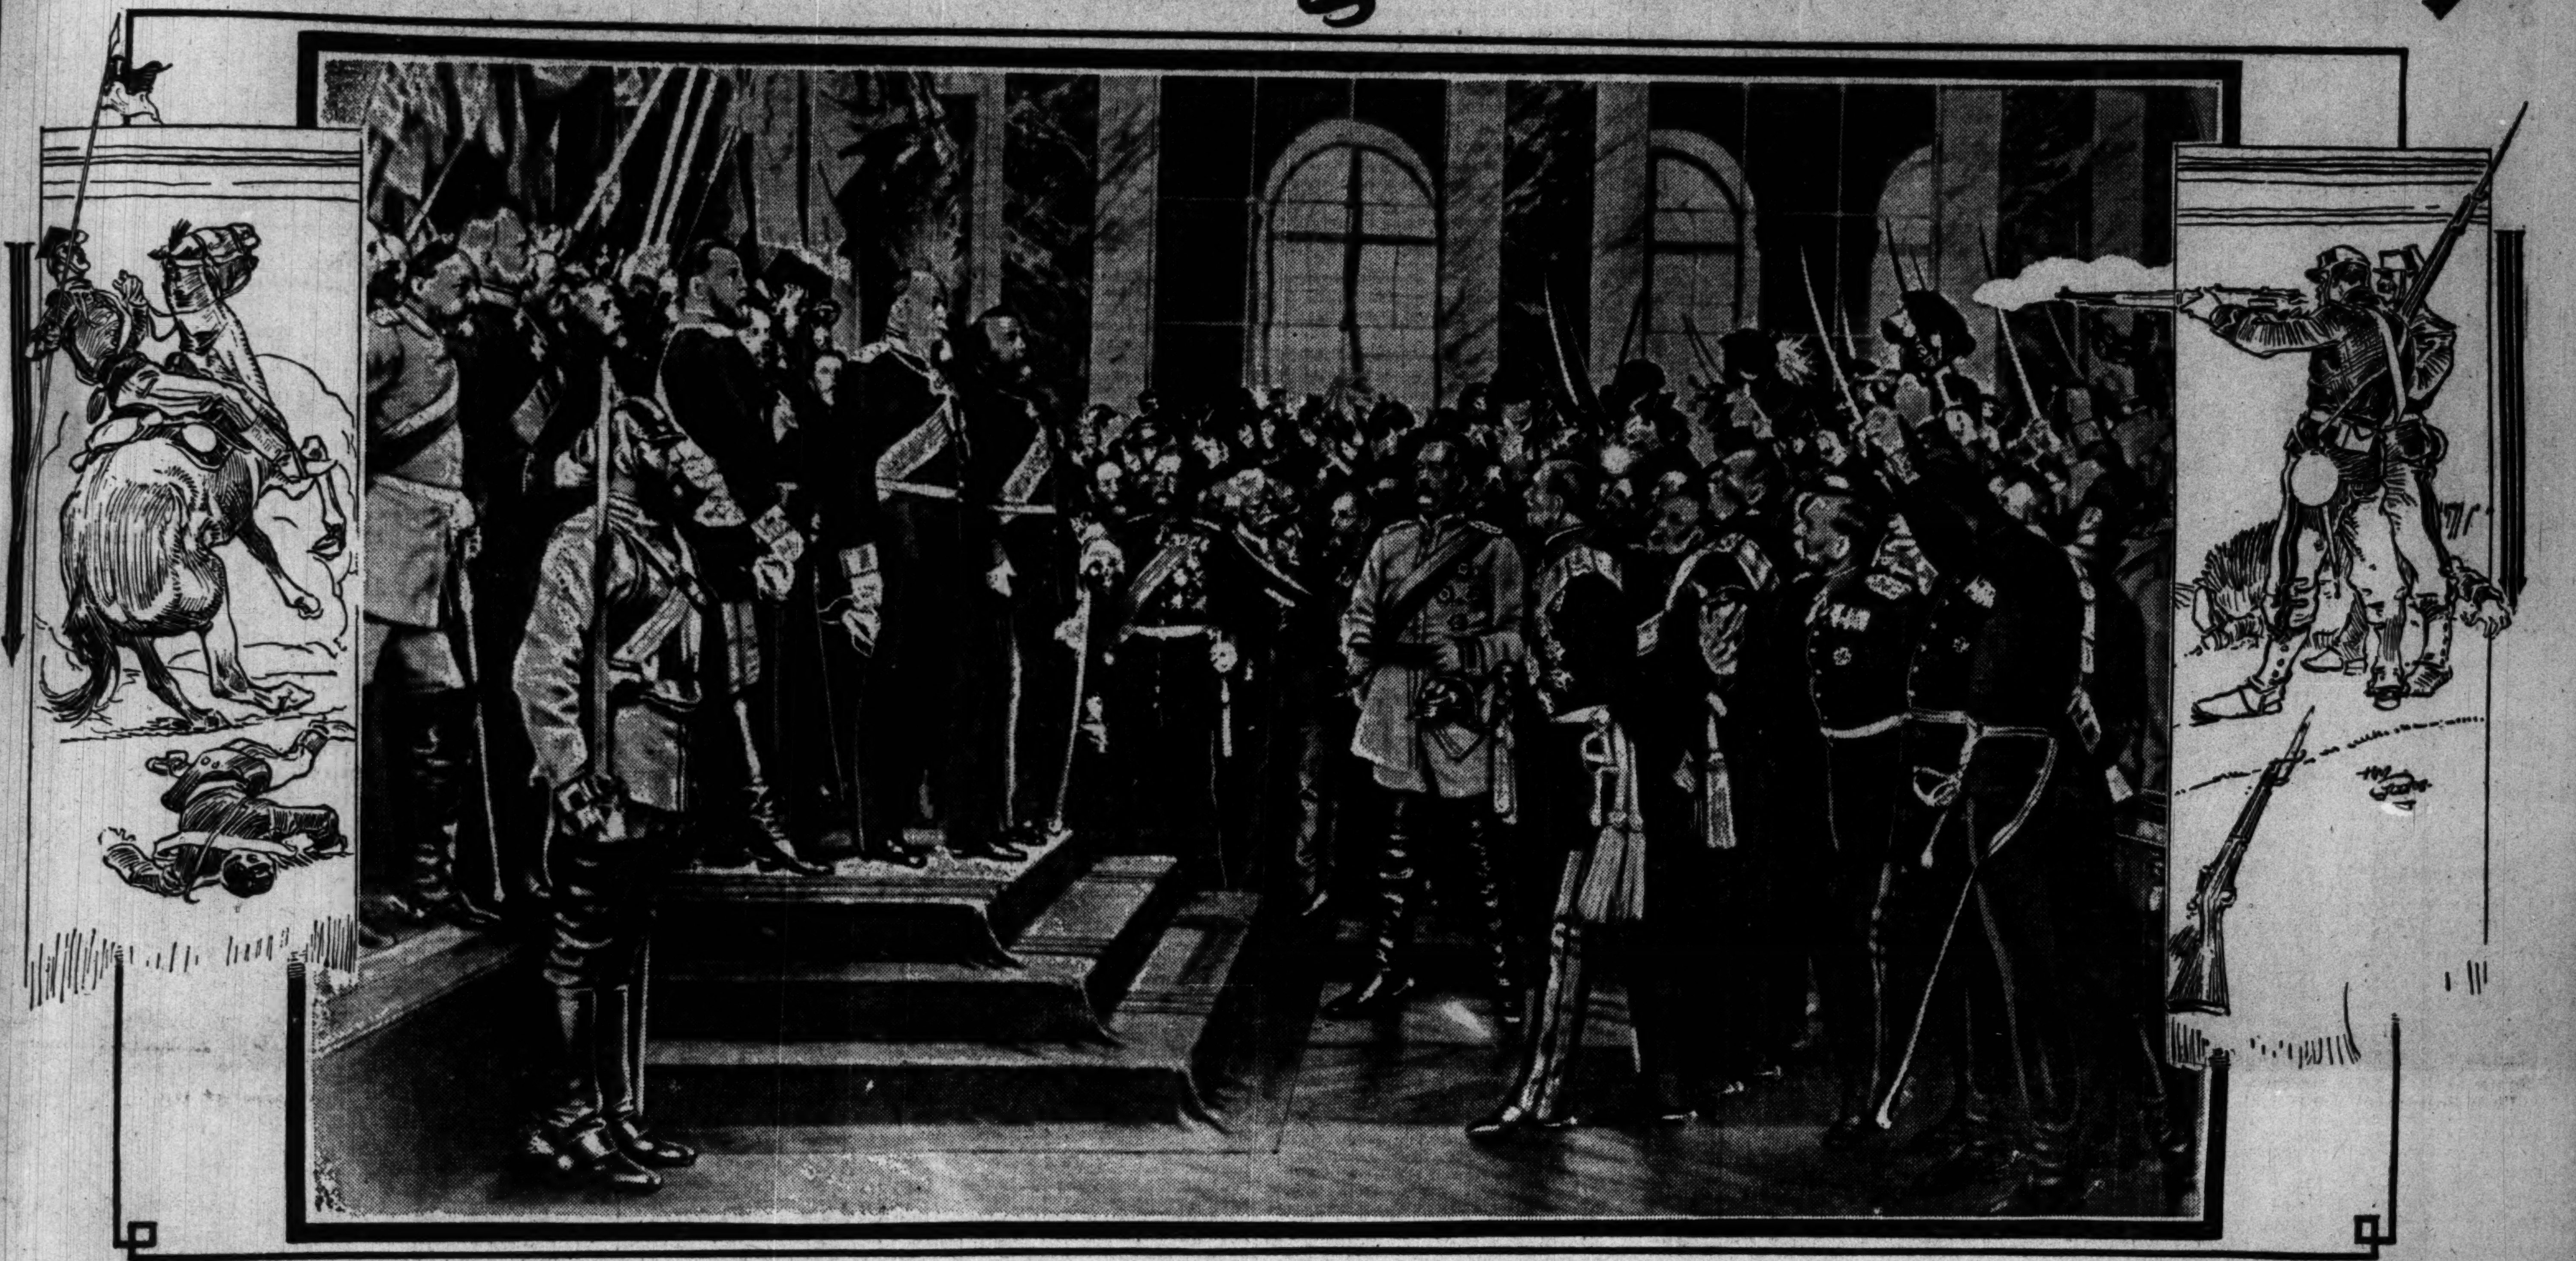
The Tribune's History of Modern Europe



King William of Prussia Proclaimed Emperor of Germany at Versailles, 1871.

(From a painting by A. Von Werner.)

CHAPTER IV.
BISMARCK.

By HERBERT CAXTON.

[Copyright: 1914: By Herbert Caxton.]

FREDERICK WILLIAM of Prussia, having become incapacitated by mental disease, was succeeded first as regent and in 1861 as king by his brother William, who took the title William I. The late king had been looked upon as a dreamer. He was certainly not the monarch to rule Prussia in the years which were to come. The new king was of different stuff. Bred in the army, he was the beau ideal of the soldier. It was in military terms that he thought, and he had almost as clear a vision of his nation's future as Bismarck himself.

He was cognizant of Prussia's position in European affairs. He knew her relations with France, with the South German states, with Austria and Denmark. He knew, too, the temper of his people, and he had a full realization that the time would come when a united Germany must not only fight for its own preservation, but must strike its enemies and strike them hard. If Prussia was not to remain an isolated, second rate nation it must gather around it all the Germanic states it could. To do this, war with Austria was not only possible, it was imperative. And the aggressive attitude of France must be quelled. This meant not intimidation, but war. The Rhine was a German river. It must not wash the shores of France. The German nation had for years had this as a shibboleth.

It has already been told how Prussian autocracy had for the time succumbed to the revolutionary movement in 1848. This was its fate also in most of the German states. Then the Frankfort diet was revived, and the attempt was made to furnish a constitution.

Like the French, as described in the chapter on the revolution, the Germans were so unused to parliaments that they lost themselves in the intricacies of legislative procedure. No two seemed to think in the same terms and the confusion was hopeless. All the petty jealousy of states arose to trouble the diet, and opinions were as thick as blackbirds, but a common basis of agreement did not appear. By agreement an Austrian archduke was appointed imperial vicar, with power to select his own ministers.

Strife Over Constitution.

But when it came to formulating basic laws the Republicans and Constitutionalists fell out. Then, too, the Danish question arose. Denmark claimed as part of its realm the duchy of Schleswig and a portion of Holstein. The latter was a member of the German confederation. The German party in those duchies had risen against the Danes in 1848, but had been defeated. Later the Prussians drove the victors out of Schleswig, but this and the Danish blockade of Prussian ports on the Baltic caused bad feeling on both sides.

Meanwhile the question of the constitution had not been settled, and seemed as far off as ever. The revolutionary party was still insistent; the aristocrats of Prussia and elsewhere were more alarmed than ever, and the king, on whom a demand had been made to recognize the Austrian revolutionists, instead called out the troops in Berlin. Later quiet was restored, and the diet agreed upon certain basic laws. It was also decided that Austria should be excluded. This meant the domination of Prussia, and the title emperor was offered to Frederick William. He refused it, not wishing to accept a crown from the mob, and a strife over the constitution began among the states. In several there were uprisings which the Prussian soldiers sought to quell. At last it was accepted by Saxony and Hanover. It curbed democracy and extended the ruler's powers.

After a parliament had met and accepted the constitution, Saxony, Hanover, Bavaria, and Württemberg withdrew and asked Austria to reconsider a revival of the confederation. This, in fact, was done. There was then grave trouble in Hesse-Cassel, and soon after the Danish war recommenced. This matter was compromised in a few months, however. The breaking out of the Crimean war divided the Germans, those in the south siding with Austria, while Prussia showed clearly the Russian influence.

Now it was that the old king was obliged to step aside, and William of Prussia took his place. Here is where this chapter properly begins.

Work Ahead for Soldier King.

In the new monarch there was nothing of the dreamy character of his brother. He had early adopted strong views on absolutism, and he abhorred republican principles. His experiences in the revolution had confirmed these views, and he had been greatly displeased at the time by the king's compromise and surrender to the mob and to Austria.

Led by Bismarck, he for policy's sake modified his views on the subject of constitution considerably, fearing to endanger the cause of Germanic union, which had by this time been somewhat strengthened. His new ministry was nominally "moderate liberal."

There was work ahead for the soldier king, the work which is done with swords and rifles, and he could not afford to let anything divide his people at this time. He and Bismarck saw clearly that trouble was coming both with Denmark and Austria. It was on Bismarck's advice that the Prussian army concentrated on the Rhine in 1859, and because of that fact Napoleon III. suddenly saw so bright and dangerous a light that his aid of Cavour and Charles Albert stopped short, the result being a peace with Austria in which the Italians were not even consulted. Not only had Austria by that war been beaten and despoiled of a part of her Italian possessions, but Germany's other rival, France, was made to obey a significant warning. Austria was not deceived by the Prussian mobilization. It was not for her aid so much as for Prussia's glory.

One of the first tasks King William assumed on taking office was a reorganization of the army. If Prussia was to advance it must be by force of arms. The system was antiquated and only put about 40,000 new men into military training. The king revised the system so that this was increased to 60,000. But parliament voted down his bill, and this deadlock continued for several years.

It is said the king prepared to abdicate. Just then he called Bismarck to his ministry. Heretofore the latter was, although a member of parliament, only an unofficial adviser of the king. Immediately army prospects brightened. The chamber of deputies still voted down the bill, but as the upper house voted for it the king therefore assumed that it had passed and proceeded to levy the necessary tax and reorganize the army.

The first use to which the army was put was the settlement of the Schleswig-Holstein controversy with Denmark. A constitution had been adopted by Denmark which took in Schleswig. Austria was then persuaded by Prussia to insist on the agreement made in 1852, by which the duchy was to remain independent, although the Danish sovereign was Duke of Schleswig.

Quarrel Easily Started.

An ultimatum was presented to Denmark demanding a withdrawal from Schleswig within forty-eight hours. The demand was refused, and in 1864 war was declared. It did not take the two allies long to defeat the Danes, and the latter renounced claim to the two duchies. Bismarck opposed letting them come in as a new German state, and it was finally decided to let Austria manage Holstein, while Prussia did the same for Schleswig. He did not intend, however, that this should long continue. His object was to pick a quarrel with Austria, defeat her, and then annex both duchies to Prussia.

Slipping over to Biarritz, he had a talk with Napoleon III., by which he assured himself that the latter would not aid Austria if she were attacked by Prussia. To make the thing complete, he also entered into an agreement with Italy that she would declare war on Austria providing Austria first opened hostilities. As her reward she was to get Venetia back. Italy, of course, was quite willing to agree to this.

The quarrel was easily started. Complaints were sent to Vienna concerning Austrian management of Holstein. Austria curtly told Prussia to mind its own business. That was exactly the reply Bismarck wanted. His king was not keen for the war, but Bismarck had little trouble assuring the monarch that it was not only going to add to Prussia's territory, but to her fame. He threw a sop to the liberals to gain their support by introducing into the diet a plan to re-form the confederation. This contained a clause granting universal suffrage in the election of members of a chamber to represent the people.

When the diet took up the Austrian question of Holstein, Prussia told it that any state which voted for Austria must prepare to fight Prussia. When the diet replied that it was illegal, Prussia left the confederation and declared war. Bavaria, Hanover, Württemberg, Saxony, and five smaller states sided with Austria.

Then came the test of King William's military policy. It stood it successfully. Beginning June 16, the Prussians defeated Hanover by the 27th, and by July 1 Bohemia was invaded, according to the plan of Von Moltke. Two days later Sadowa was fought. The struggle lasted nearly all day and might have gone against the Prussians had not the crown prince arrived with reinforcements. Fifty thousand fell that day, the Austrians losing four times as many as the Prussians did.

The Italians fared badly, being defeated on land and at sea.

Austria had to give Venetia to Italy, but the South German states were left to choose under which flag they were to remain. Prussia annexed Hanover, Hesse-Cassel, Nassau, Schleswig, Holstein, and the city of Frankfort, thus increasing her territory about 25 per cent.

This was all Bismarck's doing. His genius had thought it all out in advance and it had come about exactly according to his plan. Bismarck's diplomacy and Von Moltke's army had made Prussia one of the great powers and were to make her still greater.

The next thing done was to provide a constitution for the North German confederation. It was placed before an assembly elected under the new suffrage law and adopted in 1867. King William was president and for its parliament it had two chambers, the council and the reichstag. The members of the latter were elected for three years. The council consisted of delegates sent by the rulers of the states. This parliament wisely set to work to enact laws which would bring prosperity to the confederation, and to remove many of the handicaps imposed by the old absolutism.

Napoleon's Popularity Wanes.

Included in the period just described must be mentioned certain matters which were going on in France. That empire had bitterly resented its sovereign's part in the Italian war. In other ways also his popularity had begun to wane. In order to distract popular attention he resorted to intervention in Mexico and the setting up of the ill fated empire there. This came about by the repudiation of interest on debts due to France, England, and Spain. All three made a warlike demonstration there, but the latter two drew out when they divined France's real intention.

Napoleon sent a large force to Mexico and established Archduke Maximilian of Austria as emperor. The project ended disastrously. The French army was defeated and was withdrawn, leaving Maximilian to his fate. The cost to France in lives and money was heavy, and Napoleon's fame was lower than ever in Paris. The opposition grew bold. Speeches, which a few years before would not have been tolerated by the government, were delivered against the emperor and loudly cheered. Nevertheless in a popular vote of confidence the emperor was successful.

In Spain the revolutionary spirit broke forth in 1868 and Queen Isabella was driven from the throne. Bismarck tried to induce Leopold of Hohenzollern to accept the place, it having been offered to him by the Spanish provisional government. Bismarck was particularly anxious that Leopold ascend the throne because he knew it would anger Napoleon and the French government. The prince reluctantly accepted and warlike utterances were made in the French chamber.

The French ambassador to Berlin was sent to visit King William at Ems to ask that Leopold withdraw, and on July 12, 1870, the withdrawal was announced, but not by King William. Not satisfied with this the Paris government insisted on an assurance that Prussia would not again put forward a candidate. This King William could not but refuse to give. The king wired Bismarck the details of the interview. Whereupon the latter "edited" the dispatch, much as Metternich might have done. His tampering with the message made the interview appear to have passed in a hot interchange of demands and refusals. He then gave out the faked dispatch and in a few hours Paris was clamoring for war.

In vain did the moderates in the chamber demand copies of the ambassador's dispatch. The ministry had made up its mind for war and the excited populace backed it up. Preparations began immediately. The city appeared jubilant at the prospect. Napoleon, it is said, was not so confident, but his minister of war assured him that the army was ready to the last button on the soldiers' coats. Results proved that this was all that was ready.

Paris resounded with cries of "On to Berlin!" Maps of Germany from the Rhine to the capital were everywhere scanned. There were plenty of them, but it afterwards proved that there was a scarcity of maps of France from Paris to the Rhine. Every one in Paris was confident of a quick and easy victory. But the provinces, the real stay of the nation, did not share this confidence, as events showed.

German Efficiency Amazes World.

Many Frenchmen fondly believed that they would have as allies the South German states, which were not in the confederation and which had all along been jealous of Prussia's growing power. But any one who had hoped for aid from that quarter was doomed to bitter disappointment. It is true Bavaria and some others hung back for a time, but by the day when war was formally declared and the French army moved toward the beloved Rhine, the old feeling of a unified Germany took firm hold in every German state and a solid front was presented to the common enemy's advance.

And now was presented again the working out of the Prussian king's military organization brought to a still greater efficiency by the genius of Von Moltke. It was said that this strange man had figured the campaign out in advance and that when he was informed of the declaration of war, he being absent at the time, wired that plans would be found in a certain pigeonhole of his desk. This, however, is not a true tale, and he said in his memoirs written after the war that such a plan would be fruitless owing to unforeseen obstacles.

The German army was mobilized and on the border in a miraculously short time. The world was amazed at the rapidity displayed. England declared its neutrality, and Russia, Prussia's friend, then threatend Austria with invasion if that country offered France aid.

Meanwhile in Paris even the emperor became aware that no nation so unprepared as his could ever hope to win against one already mobilized and on the frontier. There was not an arm of the French service fit for war at that time. Arms, ammunition, clothing, food, transportation, horses, medicine, all were inadequate or lacking. The ministry had grossly deceived the emperor and involved the nation in a struggle the end of which easily could be foreseen.

Alsace and Lorraine were invaded by the Germans, who defeated MacMahon Aug. 6 at Wörth and sent his army in flight toward Paris. After one or two small reverses at the beginning of the war the success of the Germans was almost continuous. While MacMahon was retreating, another French army was beaten and pushed toward Metz, which was strongly fortified and under command of Bazaine. Metz was cut off and besieged. MacMahon was ordered back to relieve Bazaine, but he was met at Sedan Sept. 2, and after a heavy battle was compelled to surrender. With him was the emperor. Nearly half the French army was killed.

The Siege of Paris.

When Paris learned the stunning news the empire was at an end. A republic was declared and preparations made to defend the city. The French spirit now was aroused, and in spite of the humiliation of successive defeats in the past two months it continued with a much smaller force to resist the German advance on Paris. The capital was invested by the German army Sept. 19, and until the last of January the garrison made a heroic defense.

The seat of government had been transferred to Tours and Bordeaux, and the depleted nation raised armies in the provinces and continued resistance to the invaders. After holding out to the end of October, Metz surrendered, and by this and the fall of Strassburg almost 200,000 Frenchmen became prisoners of war. These events sealed the fate of the capital, and it settled down to resist so long as its supplies lasted. At the point of starvation it gave up Jan. 28. Peace was concluded at Versailles, and the vanquished nation promised to pay Germany $1,000,000,000 in three years, support the German army until it was withdrawn, and give up Alsace and a part of Lorraine.

Another humiliation imposed by Bismarck upon the beaten country was his choice of Versailles as the place at which to seal German unity. The South German states were taken into the confederation and the German empire was established with William I. as emperor. This took place Jan. 18, 1871.

But France's troubles were not over. If she had passed through Gethsemane, Golgotha yet awaited her. The assembly under the proclaimed republic was controlled by monarchists. There were pretenders to the throne, and the populace feared that they were to have another bitter dose of Bourbonism. The paralysis of trade, the starvation of the populace, and the proposed removal of the government to Versailles led to the organization of the Commune, the product of combined sentiment among the Republicans and Socialists, largely in the ascendant politically. With them was the national guard.

MISS DAPHNE EDWARDS
• Photo © by [illegible] •

Last September Mr. and Mrs. Sherman T. Edwards of 1 Elizabeth court, Oak Park, announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Daphne Edwards, to Frank Alsip Bell, son of James W. Bell of Minneapolis. With the announcement came the departure of Miss Edwards for Berlin, where she had planned a year of study in music. The news of the betrothal was of much interest in the western suburb, where Miss Edwards already had taken her place among the belles because of her charm and beauty. Now comes the announcement of the choice of the wedding day, which is to be Saturday, Oct. 3, with an evening service at the First Presbyterian church, where many of the important wedding ceremonies for Oak Park have taken place in recent years. Miss Florence Butler, another popular Oak Park young woman, is to be the maid of honor and Miss Katherine Beltz of Minneapolis, Miss Rosina Brown, Miss Frances Copeland, Miss Harriet Parsons, and Miss Dorothy Webb of Oak Park are to be the bridemaids. Alan C. Bell of Lake Forest will serve his brother as best man, and Frederick Crawford, James Crighton, Edwin Heister, Noel Morency, and Ralph Watt of Oak Park will be the ushers. Walden Edwards and Robert Bell will stretch the ribbons, and Lucy Shaw and Elizabeth Loomis, small cousins of the bride, are to be flower girls.

Autumn Becoming More Popular as the Season for Weddings.

By Mme. X.

TRADITION makes the spring the season especially dedicated to weddings, but autumn nuptials are growing in favor in this country. There are several of note in this community in prominent families.

Yesterday Miss Laura Wilkinson Ware's marriage to Howard Fuller Isham was celebrated at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Arthur Ware, at Winnetka.

The Wares are no longer real Winnetkans as for some years they have made their home in southern California, but they are linked to Winnetka by a long residence here before moving to California. They built and occupied the handsome house at present the home of the Henry P. Crowells, which overlooks a wilderness of tree tops to the lake.

It was loyalty to her childhood's home that inspired yesterday's bride to persuade her parents to return here for her wedding. The Wares have been occupying the Casey Woods house for the summer, where yesterday's wedding took place.

The young couple, after a honeymoon spent in a western trip, will settle in Pasadena, Cal., the home of Mrs. Isham's parents.

Miss Amy Morehead Walker's marriage to James Alfred Field on Thursday of this week is the next on the carpet. Miss Walker is a third generation Chicagoan, being a granddaughter of the late Samuel J. Walker, and a daughter of Judge Charles M. Walker.

She is one of that influential group of Chicago young women who have not been satisfied with a purely society life. As Mrs. Raymond Robins' secretary she has been associated with much of the most scientific reform work done in this city. She has an unusually charming personality.

As Mr. Field is an instructor at the Chicago university Miss Walker will continue to be a Chicagoan.

Sept. 26 is the date set for the wedding of Miss Harriet B. Lyon, daughter of Mrs. Thomas R. Lyon, to Hamilton Daughaday, son of Mrs. Hamilton Daughaday. This is to be celebrated at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gary, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, at Hubbard Woods.

Ten days later the marriage of Miss Nora Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morton Butler of Evanston, to Edward L. Ryerson, son of the Edward L. Ryersons, will be celebrated at Evanston.

This young couple will also live in Chicago, where they have taken the house on East Division street formerly occupied by the Uri Grannises.

By the marriage of this, their youngest child, the Edward Ryersons are left quite alone in the three big houses in which they spend the varying seasons of the year. They have accomplished the unusual feat of building, furnishing, and moving into two large country houses in one year.

Their wonderfully situated winter home near the top of a hill in the lovely Montecito valley, a short distance from Santa Barbara, Cal., is one of the finest places in that region, while their Lake Forest residence, into which they only moved five or six weeks ago, is a most distinguished piece of architecture. Its exterior is quite unlike anything yet achieved in that region of beautiful country residences.

As a rule Lake Forest houses, especially those of recent years, have a gay, informal air about them. English, French, and Italian architecture of various epochs have been adapted and applied to give this purely American result. But the Ryerson house, with its gray crenelated walls against the dark background of the thick virgin woods surrounding it on all sides, has an air of austere dignity quite unique in this part of the world. Both inside and out stateliness is the keynote of the house. The very formal garden, fountain, pool, and balustraded terraces enhance this effect.

The library is one of the most beautiful in the west. It is of fine proportions and entirely paneled from floor to ceiling in burr walnut, a richly grained, dark toned wood. Rare and ancient tapestries adorn the walls of the long and wide vaulted corridor and of the dining room. The drawing room is a charming salon, which, in spite of its unusual size and lofty ceiling, has a delightfully habitable air.

Its long French windows open out on a broad terrace, beyond which the lawn—a wide green stretch of velvety turf—sweeps to the encircling woods. The drive to the house from the main road has been so cunningly planned that it seems a great distance from the gates to the chief entrance, a winding way, well lighted at night by a double row of electric lamp posts.

The various bedroom suites on the second floor and the breakfast room and morning room are the latest word in luxurious and tasteful furnishing. The whole place, house, gardens, garage, and gardener's cottage, is one of Howard Shaw's chef d'oeuvres.

Although they knew that the marriage of their youngest and only remaining child would leave them alone, Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson have built this and their California house large enough to hold their married offspring when the turn of the wheel enables the latter to come home. At present their daughter, Mrs. Donald Frost, and her two children are visiting them.

The Joseph Ryersons are expected soon at the home of Mrs. Joseph Ryerson's parents, the Hugh McBirneys at Lake Forest. They are coming on for young Edward L. Ryerson's wedding, as are also his aunt and cousin, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, and Miss Suzette Ryerson, who will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Moss of Lake Forest. Mrs. Arthur Ryerson has taken the George Taylor house in East Division street for the winter, but will not move into it before some time in November.

People are already returning to Chicago in quite considerable numbers. The Joseph G. Colemans and their son, Loring Coleman, and Mrs. Charles L. Strobel and children will arrive on Thursday from a summer on the shores of the Pacific at Mirimar.

It is hard to keep away from the war these days. It permeates our social and domestic life to an extraordinary degree, particularly the latter. So many households are served by cooks, maids, butlers, and valets of various nationalities that much internal discord and unrest is created as each war bulletin is read and discussed by the back stairs powers, and even at dinner tables discretion must be observed lest the patriotic feelings of the man or maid serving be hurt. Many a hot discussion or violent expression of opinion has been halted midway lately by a warning glance from the hostess considerate of the deep sympathies of her employés. Happy the family served exclusively by citizens of a neutral nation!

It is not only the Americans in Paris who are turning to help those left at home in this European mixup. Those of our countrymen stranded in Germany are also filling peaceful but useful rôles. That these are, however, not always congenial is proven by the sad tale of Abram Poole. He is in Munich collecting an exhibit of German post-impressionist, futurist, and cubist paintings.

When the war broke out he enlisted in the Munich home guard. A uniform and sword were given him. He was put through some preliminary drilling and then set to guard a massive, frowning, awe inspiring structure.

As he nightly patrolled the adjacent streets under the shadow of those soaring, speechless walls he wondered whether it was a royal palace or an arsenal which he was protecting. When at length he found out that it was a sausage factory his ardor cooled and he asked to be excused from further nocturnal duty.

The whereabouts of the "Jack" Winterbothams is a matter of speculation on the part of their family and friends. They went to Nauheim in July, where Mrs. Winterbotham has been taking the cure for the last two summers. The outbreak of hostilities cut him and his wife and children off from the rest of the world. Letters and cables have so far been unanswered. Their friends are, however, sure that wherever they are they have landed on their feet.

We may look for articles on the war and some of its aspects from George Porter's pen, his first venture into—shall we say journalism or literature?

Did you know that the Germans never marched under the Arc de Triomphe in their historic entrance into Paris over forty-three years ago? The night before their entry a young patriot, one Sergeant Hoff, dug such a deep trench in the archway that it was impossible to march under this famous monument, and the Teutonic army arrived at the Arc de Triomphe, divided and marched around it. A nearby street was named Rue Sergeant Hoff by his grateful compatriots in honor of this achievement, and his name is thus perpetuated.

Few of those of our fellow citizens directly or indirectly affected by the European catastrophe merit more sincere commisseration than the three prominent Chicago women who have established high class American schools on foreign soil. Miss Maude Martin's school in Paris, Miss Mary Nixon's in Florence, and Miss Risser's in Rome are well known institutions that have given the final educational polish to many of the daughters of Chicago's most prominent families.

The war menaces the existence of these schools, whose unfortunate principals have made themselves responsible for the rent of their respective premises and have engaged teachers and servants. They are anxiously asking, "What can we do?" The answer is far to seek.

NEWS OF THE WOMEN'S CLUBS.

By Inez Travers.

THE Association of Jewish Women has been strenuous and successful in its efforts to make the council home at Western Springs, Ill., an ideal vacation spot for the tired women and children doomed by poverty to spend their time in the congested districts of the city.

The home is supported by generous contributors and improved in every particular. It is situated in the midst of four acres of cultivated ground, which is furnished with a miniature playground and wading pool. The latter affords unlimited delight to the children, many of whom have never seen water in anything larger than a dish pan, being unfamiliar with the luxury of a bathtub.

The home is a two story wooden building, airy and light. It must seem almost palatial to some of the guests with its wide veranda for the sunny hours of the day and its spacious sleeping porches for the night. On the grounds also are wonderful shade trees and some flowers. Much care is taken to furnish meals at once nutritious and appetizing.

To this free paradise have come all summer a succession of fortnightly guests from the districts near the Maxwell street settlement—mothers and children and young girls tired from their work in factories and run down from lack of air and proper food. They received their fortnight vacation free and the railroad company furnished them transportation.

Many of the children who were taken to the home for a vacation had to be furnished with clothing before they could go, as the only garments they possessed were those they had on and they were in a ragged condition. The work of clothing some of the little guests properly for the outing developed upon the Ida Saxton club and members of the Association of Jewish Women.

Miss Mabel Koening is house governess and instructs the children in lessons entirely new to them, lessons of courtesy and thoughtful unselfishness, which they have been unable to learn either by example or teaching in homes where conditions are so bad that there is quarreling over the sharing of scant rations.

Miss Koening has won for herself the love of many of her little charges and the quickness with which they respond to her teachings is a surprise even to one of her confidence in humanity.

The gain in health for the children is, too, a thing that will last them through the trying winter to come or at least make them better able to bear it.

The mothers with the inspiration offered them by the pleasant surroundings are taught many lessons of economy and efficiency in housekeeping which they carry back and put into practice as well as their home conditions will allow.

Mrs. M. Barbe, Mrs. Greenbaum and Mrs. Hamburger have been untiring in their efforts to help these tired women of the slums with their problems and make their outing a lasting benefit in their lives. Large contributions to the home have been given by the Associated Charities, Mrs. Emanuel Mandel, Julius Rosenwald, the estate of Solomon Hamburger, and numerous others, but the cost of the undertaking is great and the home is still in need of funds.

Among the girls who have entered the beauty contest of the Home Circle for Bachelors day, Sept. 23, at the Home exposition in the Coliseum, are Miss Marie Walter of Chicago Heights, Miss Helen Greenfield of 523 Independence boulevard, Miss Gladys Thomas of 2830 Sheridan road, Miss Evelyn Corrigan of 7745 Green street, and Miss Clara Wirth of Kenilworth. Mrs. Laura Willoughby Greene will have charge of the beauty contest. Prizes will be awarded for the prettiest blonde, the prettiest brunette, and the prettiest Titian haired girls. There also will be a prize for the prettiest grandmother.

DOWNTOWN.

The first meeting this fall of the German-American Independent Woman's club will be held Sept. 23 at the Hotel La Salle and will be devoted to the interests of peace. Mrs. Frank Schaedler president of the club, is now in Munich assisting in Red Cross work there, and it was her suggestion, made in a letter to Mrs. Ignace J. Reis, vice president of the club, that the opening session be devoted to a discussion of the ending of the war Louis P. Lochner of the Chicago Peace society will make the address.

The Oberlin women will meet for luncheon next Wednesday at 12:30 p. m. at Field's.

The annual report of the New Future association shows that the organization during the last year has taken care of 800 delinquent women and girls. The report was made by the president, Mrs. Fred L. Rossbach, at the first fall meeting last Wednesday at the Congress hotel.

The first meeting of the Chicago Political Equality league will be held on Oct. 8 at the Congress hotel. At 2 p. m. there will be a reception to the president, Mrs. Harriette Taylor Treadwell. At 2:45 p. m. Charles Zueblin will give an address on "The Twentieth Century City and War." Miss Florence Holbrook will make a report of the peace committee and Mrs. Ida Darling Engelke on ward organizations.

The woman's auxiliary of the British Empire association will meet Sept. 23 at the Auditorium hotel. Mrs. W. F. Dickson is president of the club.

At the meeting of the Wednesday club last week at the Hotel La Salle, Mrs. Margaret Weber of Oak Park was elected president for the coming season. Mrs. Margaret Noee was elected secretary and treasurer. The club will met on Wednesday of each week. It is composed of German-American women.

The Chicago Dressmakers' club will give a fashion play called "Madam, Which Shall It Be," written for the club by Mme. Qui Vive and produced by Lillian Woodward Street Tuesday afternoon and evening. It will be given in the gold room of the Congress hotel.

In connection with British war relief work, the Prince of Wales chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, has joined the organizations which have taken concessions at the Home exposition to be held at the Coliseum. The Prince of Wales chapter has taken the tea and luncheon room for Sept. 19. The profits of the day's work will be devoted to the relief of the war sufferers, including widows and orphans. The committee is composed of the following: Chairman, Mrs. W. S Howell; vice chairman, Mrs. D. B. Anderson; secretary, Mrs. Hawson Hankey treasurer, Mrs. A. D. Browne; and Mesdames Frank J. S. Roberts, Clifford Mitchell, M. A. Kearns, John S. Capper, Dudley S. Welch, and H. B. Mitchell, and the Misses Bena M. Henderson and M. H. McMillan. The meetings of the chapter will begin one month earlier this season on account of war relief work. The chairman of the hospital ship committee is Miss Bena M. Henderson. A fund is being contributed to the British admiralty by the Daughters of the Empire in Canada and Daughters of the Empire in the United States. The regent, Mrs. G. Cooke [illegible], has been informed that the British admiralty has decided that it does not need the hospital ship, but has accepted the gift of the fund raised for that purpose for the equipment of a supplementary naval hospital at Portsmouth.

The North Carolina colony of the Illinois Colony club will hold its first entertainment for the fall season at the Hotel La Salle Tuesday afternoon. There will be cards and refreshments. The hostesses are Mesdames J. M. Smith, A. G. Anderson, H. D. Currier, H. E. Smith, F. W. Grubb, W. C. Fowler, Charles Houseman, Charles Healy, H. S. Mount, A. V. Lane, F. M. McClure, Charles Jegen, A. S. Rogers, and W. M. Hobbs. Mrs. Frank M. Fulton is chief of this colony.

The Willing Workers held the first directors' meeting Friday at the Auditorium hotel. The hostesses were Mrs. M. Cohn, Miss F. Elias, and Mrs. S. Fenchel. The first regular meeting of the season will be held Wednesday, Sept. 23, at room 412 Masonic temple, and will be Members' day. The afternoon will be in charge of Mrs. J. H. Steiner.

SOUTH SIDE CLUBS.

The floriculture department of the Ridge Woman's club has not diminished its activities during the summer. In May a plant market was held. During the summer several observational trips have been made by the members of the department to study the flora along the ridge Since June 1 the service committee has furnished flowers to the Chicago Flower mission. The third annual flower show of the department was held Aug. 26. Mrs C. W. Jack is chairman of the floriculture department and Mrs. Elgin McWhinne is the president of the club.

The first meeting of the season of the Hyde Park Travel club for the coming season will be on Oct. 12 at 2 p. m. at the McCabe Memorial church, Fifty-fourth street and Blackstone avenue. Dr. R. A. White will speak on "The Land of the Midnight Sun." Mrs. Paul Gottlieb will furnish the music.

The Seventh Ward auxiliary of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association has resumed work for the year. The first meeting will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Social hall, Woodlawn Universalist church, Kimbark avenue, near Sixty-fourth street. This meeting will be devoted to the cause of peace. Among the speakers will be Miss Florence Holbrook, who will outline her plan for a peace demonstration during the holidays. Mr. Lochner, who has just returned from France, will also speak. The association is circulating a petition asking Congressman James R. Mann to stand for peace insistently up to the point of national defense from attack. The precinct obtaining the largest number of signatures to this petition will be presented with a beautiful peace flag by the association.

MISS MARGARET FITCH

MISS MARION KEEHN

One thing the modern craze for dancing has done. It has brought before the footlights the young women of the city's best circles, whose talent and grace otherwise would not have been cultivated or known. In truth, the modern dancing recalls the fact that only a few years ago mothers discussed whether or not their daughters should be permitted to witness the ballet, much less participate in it. Those who attended the pageant—the History of Chicago—presented yesterday and Friday at Ravinia park were delighted with and surprised at the talent shown by the north shore young women. Under the direction of Mrs. Ruth Coffin Collins there had been perfected various groups and ballets which would have done credit to the professional stage. Two of the most graceful of the young women to appear were Miss Margaret Fitch and Miss Marion Keehn of Kenilworth. They took part in the "Fire Dance," depicting the scenes of 1871, and their sister flame and smoke spirits in the dance included Miss Evelyn Isom, Miss Nettie Isom, Miss Harriet Stuart, Miss Eleanor Serrell, Miss Priscilla Allen, Miss Agnes Pease, Miss Eleanor Sewell, Miss Cora Clements, Miss Edith Chandler, Miss Olive Bully, Miss Charlotte Parmelee, Miss Elizabeth Kulchar, Miss Helen Farrell, Miss Betty Hoyt, Miss Sarah Hoyt, Miss Marguerite Lloyd, Miss Mary Eager Lloyd, Miss Catherine Blossom, and Miss Isabel Gilmore.

The Warner Fall Opening

Authoritative Styles
Shown Tomorrow

This week—everywhere—merchants are showing the authoritative Warner's Rust Proof Corset styles for Fall and Winter.

Select your corset before your gown. This is one secret of perfect dressing.

You can make your selection tomorrow with certainty. Every fashion tendency for Fall has been considered in designing the new styles of

Warner's
Rust-Proof
Corsets

The Fall styles are most sensible—medium bust, medium skirt, with straighter lines at the front and back and the faint suspicion of a curve at the waist. This is the fashion for Fall.

Be sure of your corset. Select a style that is designed to shape your figure in correct lines.

Every Pair Guaranteed
Not to Rust, Break or Tear

Brassieres are more important than ever. Basques, for instance, demand a fitted garment beneath, and a Warner's Brassiere admirably supplements a Warner's Corset.

The Season of a Hundred
"Nights-at-Home"

It comes soon, that season—begins almost with the first chilly weather we have, and continues till Spring again arrives. All the family will gladly stay home during the nights of it, if solid, cheery comfort is assured them.

Homes tastefully, plentifully furnished—with things to sit in or lay on that really invite repose, homes with quiet, restful hangings—those are the kind that make such comfort sure.

Is yours this sort? Make it so—let Square Sincere Service assist. Surprising what this famous Kennedy way of serving does! It helps you pay, helps you choose—guards you always against the slightest dissatisfaction. And it's yours, unreservedly, for the asking.

Square Sincere Service

MISS ALEXANDRIA FOX

Mrs. David Fox of the Hotel Newton, New York, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Alexandra Fox, to William W. Rosenthal of Chicago, son of Max Rosenthal of Philadelphia. The wedding will take place Oct. 7 in New York.

New York and Newport Society.

By Mme. Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The map of Europe may change, dynasties will be overturned undoubtedly, but we may pleasantly reflect that all things are not impermanent. Ancient history at Newport never grows old and the horse show there is as live an episode of annual interest as the election of a president to the nation at large.

The only distress felt for it this year was over the circumstance that even if Alfred G. Vanderbilt did not go to the front, most of his thoroughbreds did, and there might be, therefore, a paucity of entries. The other anxiety was for Reginald Vanderbilt, who went abroad on the Mauretania on the same trip with me, and at a late date was sending out alarming messages that he could not get back. The country—and the Newport horse show—were saved, however, at the last hour by Mr. Vanderbilt obtaining passage on a cattle boat that landed in Montreal, having pursued a route fringing on the Arctic circle. Having, like Virgil's Æneas, endured many hardships by land and sea, he showed up valiantly in time to give the event at Newport its touch of genuineness. A horse show without Reginald Vanderbilt is as a matter of fact no horse show at all.

However, he was there showing entries, just as if he had not a few nights previous been sleeping out on the open deck in midocean, with only a bath towel hung from a beam screening him from the scrutiny of the stars. If Mr. Vanderbilt's English horses are serving their country, he has enough in his American family to carry away most of the prizes and keep the entries up to their normal.

Harold Vanderbilt is this year putting up some fine showings with Miss Eleanor Sears handling them.

By the way, what is the present progress of that courtship? For years he has been wooing her. He is a little under 30 and a handsome boy. All during that period which is supposedly fickle and light-hearted he has been devoted to this beautiful Boston girl, who derides the feminine graces and unsuccessfully tries to hide hers under heavily tailored attire.

However would it feel to be the heroine of such a love romance? To be pursued for years by the bearer of one of the most spectacular names and the most stupendous fortunes in America, to be his guest of honor for long cruises on his luxurious yacht, to be followed to Europe by him—and all the while to return the answer that while she likes him very much she is not exactly in a mood to wed?

That has been the situation for ever so long, and not even the boy's stalwart mother, Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, can alter the situation, although in good old fashioned, motherly style she does what she can by having the stubborn Miss Eleanor for long visits at the Marble House in Newport and at the town house in New York.

I say that this young woman had better play a close and careful game, for some mightily attractive crops of debutantes are budding, and there are not many young women of this wide earth who would turn down the youngest son of William K. Vanderbilt, whether he had the name and the fortune or not. Even Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt Jr., who had tried her luck and found it bad with the Vanderbilt name, has thrown her influence on the side of Harold. There is one observation that has been generally noted, and that is that Mr. Vanderbilt has not recently lost ground.

Henry Clews received a cable dispatch from Mrs. Clews announcing that she had reached London and would return to America as soon as she could obtain passage.

Mrs. Vanderbilt gave $150 to the Newport police to be divided among the men on duty at the Breakers during the Red Cross fête.

The wedding of Miss Alice Damrosch, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch of New York, and Hall Pleasants Pennington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Pennington of Baltimore, took place last Saturday afternoon on the lawn at Hall house, the Damrosch summer place on Northwest bay, Lake Champlain. About 200 guests were present.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Vanderbilt Webb of New York, and the maid of honor was Miss Gretchen Damrosch, sister of the bride. The bridesmaids were her younger sisters, Miss Polly Blaine Damrosch and Miss Anita Blaine Damrosch. The best man was E. Hyatt Wight of Baltimore, and the ushers Harold Phelps Stokes and Theodore Tonnele, New York; Walker Blaine Beale, Washington; Emmons Blaine, Chicago, and James Shepard Dennis, Merristown, N. J.

Learn Dressmaking Here

At the request of the hundreds of women who could not attend the classes last winter, we inaugurate for fall another course of lectures, beginning tomorrow, under the personal supervision of

Mme. Coates of New York and Paris, Who Will Give Three Courses of Lessons in Dressmaking

Each course is exactly alike, comprising 14 lessons, 2½ hours each.

Special attention given to specific problems, such as making buttonholes, darning, patching, seaming, hemming, facing, tucking, setting in lace, etc., while the principles of the correct handling of different portions of garments, such as plackets, belts, yokes, peplums, collars, sleeves, etc., are dealt with as individual subjects.

The principle of accurate and economical cutting thoroughly taught, together with perfect fitting and correct altering, constructing, making and finishing of undergarments, dresses, gowns, waists, skirts and children's and infants' wear.

You may bring your individual problem and Mme. Coates will give you her personal attention and assist you in working it out whether it be selection of suitable styles, lines, materials, colors, difficult fitting or hanging or any perplexing point on which you may desire assistance. Classes will meet on our Tenth Floor in the afternoons from 2 to 4:30 on Mondays and Thursdays, and on Tuesdays and Fridays and on Wed. and Sat. Tickets for the entire course of 14 lessons, only 50c, on sale in our Notion Section (Main Floor) and at the Class Room (Tenth Floor). Mme. Coates will be at the Class Room (Tenth Floor) at 1 p. m. tomorrow to answer any further questions regarding the lessons.

Over 50,000 yards (1,100 pieces) best quality imported broadcloths came through the U. S. custom house for the Boston Store during the month of July, direct from the best French, German, Austrian and Belgium manufacturers. We also got over 20,000 yards through during the first two weeks of August. Since then the European war has stopped all shipments. We have never offered such wonderful values in fine broadcloths as we are doing right now. Every new fall and winter shade from the lightest tints to the darkest colorings are included, as well as black, ivory and cream. And the prices, too, you will notice are lower than ever before. Beautiful, soft, lustrous broadcloths, with permanent, rich silk finish. Every yard guaranteed by the manufacturer to give entire satisfaction. Another Step Forward in Corset Styles

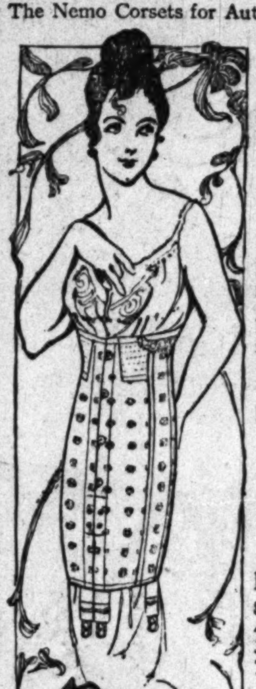
Third Floor—Center



The Nemo Corsets for Autumn are awaiting your approval, new models that have been planned with greatest care molding the hips into apparent if not actual slenderness. The figure above the waist line, with the slightly higher bust, is not rigid, but perfectly comfortable, though held with sufficient firmness for the new more closely fitted bodices or basques. In no instance should the corset top be high enough to come over the curve of the bust, as it did in the old high models. The top should be first, full enough for the figure to rest easily inside the corset, then there will be no "pushing up" of the bust, no compression of the diaphragm. There is a marked difference between the old and the new forms of high bust corsets. Whether you are stout, average or thin, tall or short, remember there is a Nemo Corset especially designed for your type of figure. In it you will possess a grace impossible with a corset carelessly chosen. Our fitting service, noted for years as Chicago's best, was never better, never more eager to serve you. Our corsetieres are at your disposal to fit you correctly as to styles, bringing out your own good lines, subduing the too prominent flesh, to fit you hygienically so there will be no pressure on sensitive nerves or vital organs. They will fit you so that the abdominal wall will be supported, not weakened and pressed down. Nemo Corsets are so designed and constructed as to preserve and enhance bodily health if correctly fitted. For this unexcelled fitting service no extra charge is made.

Three Slender Figure Models that will do much to popularize Nemo Corsets this fall:

Nemo corset, No. 305, is made of dainty figured batiste, low bust with elastic section over diaphragm, slightly curved waist line, long snug fitting skirt, especially over the hips and thighs, 3.00

Nemo Corset, No. 520, ought to prove a wonderful favorite among the new fall models, it has entire side insertions of Lastikop webbing, eliminating the hip bone that medium or slight figures find annoying, at............ 5.00

Nemo Kopservice corset, No. 562, has a long webbing section over the diaphragm and deep webbing that gives at the top and bottom of the back and an especially good corset for vocalists, 5.00

is greater this fall than ever—for the corset being a little higher is more likely to show at the curve of the bust than before, which of course no well dressed woman would tolerate—Warner's Brassieres better than any, answering every requirement of the new figure for fall, being boned to properly support it, and designed in enough models to fit all types of figures, every day brings to our corset store figures that belong to no special classification, and that find much trouble in being fitted. In the past they have taken a brassiere home and made it over.

Because of these distinct figure requirements, our brassiere section is in charge of experienced saleswomen who are good judges of line and are competent to recommend the proper model for your figure, for Warner brassieres have a model to fit most every woman.

The short waisted woman may say that all brassieres are too long in the back for her. Our saleswomen would give her one with the back shortened. We want to impress on our patrons that we have Warner's Brassieres to fit every type of figure and that we take the necessary care to see that they are properly fitted. In Warner's Brassieres there are models for stout and slender figures, models for dancing, athletic, negligee and street wear. Sizes 34 to 52, at.......... 49c to 2.50 that buys two Tribunes each day—one to be taken to the "office" and one to be kept at home.

Of course, the Master of the House wants to read The Tribune on the cars and during the day. In many cases he considers it vitally necessary for him to have it at hand for its market quotations—not to speak of its baseball scores.

But it is equally important that the Mistress of the House has a Tribune at home, not only for the news and for its feature departments on fashions, cookery, etc., but also for its advertising.

It means a great saving in family expenditures if the Mistress of the House is kept in intimate daily touch with the hundreds of responsible merchants who announce their best offerings through The Tribune.

No other medium can perform this service so efficiently as The Tribune. It carries more advertising than any other Chicago paper and many leading advertisers use it exclusively.

NEWS of the RELIGIOUS WORLD

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Young Men's Christian Association college, which trains men for professional leadership in the work of the Young Men's Christian association, will begin its year's work next Tuesday at 9 o'clock at the Central Y. M. C. A. building, 19 South La Salle street. It will also begin soon the construction of its new building on land bounded by Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth streets, Ingleside and Drexel avenues.

The president of the college is Frank H. Burt, LL. D., who is assisted by a faculty of seven other teachers.

It was the intention of Dr. Burt and the trustees to break ground for the new building Oct. 1, but conditions growing out of the European war, affecting certain contracts, made it necessary to postpone the date somewhat. All other plans are ready for the work of building, and it is expected that the delay will only be a matter of a few weeks.

PHOTO WALLINGER.

The building and its equipment will cost $500,000. It provides for an administration section containing offices, classrooms, library, assembly hall, and laboratories, one devoted to athletics and physical education and another to apartments for the residence of 100 students. The dimensions of the lot are 220x463 feet and the building dimensions are 163x[illegible] feet.

The ground for the building was purchased in December, 1911. The raising of the $500,000 was committed to a group of association leaders, who mapped out a campaign under a plan called the "team work" plan. The group representing the Chicago district was assigned the task of raising $250,000 and the rest of the territory in the west and middle west states was asked to raise $250,000.

The purpose of the association college is to give men who expect to become Young Men's Christian association secretaries a technical and professional training in the same way that theological seminaries, law and medical schools train men for the ministry and for the legal and medical professions.

College training work was carried on last summer at Lake Geneva, Wis. The total attendance at the camp was 5,000. Last July fourteen graduates of various colleges entered the central department of the Y. M. C. A. for training in the practical side of association work. Those who prove themselves adapted to the work will then be given positions of leadership.

It is the desire of Dr. Burt to impress upon the churches and colleges of the country that the work of the Young Men's Christian association is a profession which a college bred young man can be justified in choosing as a lifelong task, with opportunities for advancement and usefulness.

Two new departments will be introduced into the curriculum this term, the railroad and the rural departments. W. N. Northcut will be dean of the railroad department and F. B. Knapp will be dean of the rural department. Students have been enrolled in the college in the last ten years from fifty-four states and provinces and from fourteen different countries.

The officers of the board of trustees are: F. W. Gerould, chairman; L. Wilbur Messer, recording secretary, and Willis S. Herrick, treasurer. Other Chicago men who are trustees are Henry H. Marcusson, James F. Oates, George L. Robinson, O. A. Heppes, A. Stamford White, Walter A. Rogers, and J. F. Skinner. Ten other trustees live in other cities.

The sixty-third anniversary of the birth of the Rev. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Christian Endeavor society, was celebrated yesterday in all parts of the world He was born Sept. 12, 1851.

Dr. Clark is now familiarly known as "Father Endeavor" Clark. He organized the first Christian Endeavor society in the Williston Congregational church, Portland, Me., of which church he was pastor, on Feb. 2, 1881. Other churches of several denominations adopted his idea and he was called to different cities to explain his plans and methods of working with young people. For twenty-nine years he has given all of his time to the spread and direction of the Christian Endeavor movement until there are now 80,000 local societies and 4,000,000 members distributed in many different countries. Dr. Clark has traveled in promoting his work 825,000 miles—433,000 miles by rail, 325,000 by water, and the rest by other means of locomotion.

The Chicago Society of Christian Endeavor will hold its annual convention in the Northwestern University building, West Lake and North Dearborn streets, next Friday and Saturday.

One of the departmental meetings which will be sure to excite a lively interest will be devoted to the subject of citizenship. Among the speakers will be Judge Mary Bartelme and Maj. L. M. C. Funkhouser. An attorney will instruct the delegates in the method of voting. A. J. Shartle of Boston, business manager of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, will be one of the special speakers who will address the convention on the general work of the Christian Endeavor society.

The Rev. Herbert Francis Evans, who preached his farewell sermon last Sunday as pastor of the Highland Park Baptist church, will begin his duties as professor of Biblical literature and religious pedagogy in Grinnell college, Grinnell, Ia., next Wednesday. Dr. Evans, who received his doctor of philosophy degree at the University of Chicago in 1907, was for three years director of religious education in the Second Baptist church, St. Louis, one of the largest churches in the Baptist denomination. His pastorate at the Highland Park church began last June. The Rev. M. S. Waller will supply the pulpit until a successor of Dr. Evans has been secured.

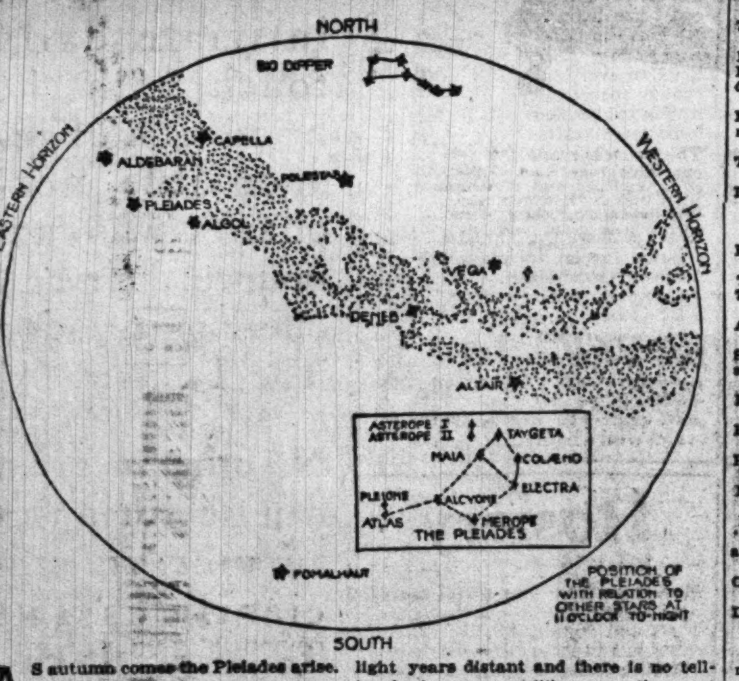
ASTRONOMY.



POSITION OF THE PLEIADES WITH RELATION TO OTHER STARS AT 11 O'CLOCK TO-NIGHT

AS autumn comes the Pleiades arise. This is a bit early for early evening observations, but by 11 o'clock not only this cluster of sky gems but the great sun Aldebaran, which follows in their wake, will be above the horizon.

By looking a little north of east later in September between 8 and 9 o'clock the observer will find the Pleiades arising with their misty light and will see one of the celestial groups which has most entranced the imagination of men.

Six of the Pleiads usually can be seen with the unaided eye. The chief stars of the group form a figure somewhat resembling a short handled dipper. Unusually good eyes can distinguish from eight to eleven of the stars, although the normal vision takes in only six. There are more than 3,000 stars in the group, and not all of them can be seen with a telescope, but the camera has recorded them.

They are enveloped in a nebulous mist and astronomers are convinced that they represent a great system in development. One of the stars, Alcyone, is supposed to be sixty times brighter than Sirius, the brightest star within our vision.

The Pleiades are two or three hundred light years distant and there is no telling for how many million years the great suns of the group have been evolving out of the condensing mass of the nebula.

To nine of the stars have been given the names of Atlas, the nymph Pelone and their daughters, Alcyone, Electra, Maia, Merope, Taygeta, Celaeno, and Asterope. Alcyone, the brightest, a star of third magnitude, is at the juncture of the bowl of the dipper and the handle. Electra, the second star in brightness, is in the bottom of the dipper.

Alcyone may appeal to the fancy as being the sun around which the Hindus thought the whole cosmos revolved. Our sun and all other suns with their systems revolved about it even as the earth and planets revolved about our sun. It, in the old Hindu conception, was the visible center of the universe.

The lost Pleiad has appealed to the imagination of sentimental folk who were interested in the mythology of the heavens. It is supposed to be Pelone, the mother of the Pleiades, which lies just above Atlas, the star at the end of the handle.

No race of men has been indifferent to the charm of the group. They are the fireflies of heaven, the bees of heaven, the dew drops of heaven, the diamonds of the sky from Homer to the present.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY By Mme. Z.

Foreign Diplomats' Wives Helping in Relief Work.

MME. JUSSERAND

COUNTESS VON BERNSTOEFF

LADY SPRING-RICE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—There seems to be considerable difference of opinion as to what sort of a season the winter will bring forth. The general, and it will seem logical, reasoning is that with the White House in mourning and most of the embassies absorbed in watching the progress of the fighting on the other side, Washington will be rather dull. But there be those who argue that all Washington society—a good part of which is generally on the other side—will be in Washington this winter and that even the diplomats will be so anxious to impress on the world at large their absolutely care free, "I should worry" frame of mind, to say nothing of their unwillingness to be outdone by the representatives of the nations that are fighting theirs, that things here will be fast and furious.

So far as the diplomats are concerned the optimists seem to be reckoning without their hosts—or rather their hostesses—for several of the embassy chatelaines are very much occupied in their own countries and are not likely to be here at all. Neither Countess von Bernstorff nor Lady Spring-Rice returned to America with their husbands, but remained to do what they could at home to help the fighting men.

Both of them offered their services to the Red Cross of their respective countries and according to report Countess von Bernstorff is actually on duty as a Red Cross nurse. Lady Spring-Rice, so far as one knows, is not detailed for nursing duty, but is helping wherever she can—and those who know her on this side know that she is doing whatsoever her hand finds to do with all her might and with the gentle tactful kindness which has made her during the one season she has spent in Washington the most popular chatelaine the British embassy has had for years.

Madame Bakhmeteff and Madame Jusserand are each of them busy with plans for the relief of the suffering the war is going to entail, not only on those at the front who are daily risking their lives, but for the women and children left behind.

Madame Bakhmeteff at Newport is receiving all sorts of contributions for her fund for the Russian soldiers—big ones like the thousand dollar check from the Robert McCormicks, who were formerly this country's representatives at St. Petersburg, and little ones from the toy savings banks of the children—all with the same appreciation of the spirit that lies behind the gift.

Madame Jusserand was a little inclined to shrink from asking her friends, but so many contributions came in unsolicited to the French embassy here that it was decided to organize a French relief fund with branches wherever there seemed to be a large enough French element to warrant it, and of this fund Madame Jusserand has accepted the presidency and to it she is giving much of her time.

Her fund is being applied rather to the relief of sickness and misery of the poor peasants who have been driven from their homes in northern France and western Belgium, where the fighting has been heaviest than to the relief of the men in the ranks.

One of the most interesting of the many letters received in Washington from the war zone came from Mrs. Jonathan Bourne, well known here a year or two ago as the wife of Senator Bourne of Oregon. She and her sister, Mrs. Pierce of Providence, R. I., were at the Hotel St. Petersburg in Paris when the war broke out. Mrs. Pierce was under a doctor's care, and after talking things over they decided that the Rue de Rivoli suited them as well as any other place, and that they were going to stick.

Then their hotel was turned into a hospital, but having made up their good American minds to stick, they still stuck. Mrs. Bourne offered her services and is now in charge of one of the wards. Under her she has a corps of ten American girls who are detained in Paris for one cause or another, and have volunteered to act as nurses.

Also from Paris comes word that Mrs. Thackara, wife of our former consul general at Berlin, has opened a dressmaking shop in the Hotel Belmont in order to give employment to as many young French girls as possible. The Thackaras, it will be remembered, had started on a bicycle trip through Europe by way of celebrating their freedom from official cares, and were enjoying it so much that there was a wager up as to how many thousand of miles they would make, when things began to happen and their bicycle trip was abandoned.

Which reminds one that Alvey Adee, first assistant secretary of state, who has been in the department, since—O, well, since the beginning of time more or less—and who each season goes off for a bicycle trip through Europe, is among the most recently returned refugees.

Which again brings one to another employé of the state department who, going abroad for a holiday, has remained to work. Miss Caroline Larner struck Europe just at the opening of hostilities. Like Mrs. Bourne, she decided to stick. Moved by the spirit of adventure—and by the spirit of philanthropy—she went to Brussels and sought out the American legation, and offered her services in making the way straight for her stranded countrymen. Were they glad to see her? A state department clerk loose in Europe! Well, if there are any more of them still in captivity they had better steer clear of our overworked embassies and legations. They eat 'em alive there.

HISTORY OF MODERN EUROPE.

In fear of an insurrection, the government withdrew and the commune took charge of the city. A council was chosen, and the radical element came to the front. A clash occurred with the assembly at Versailles, and several men were shot. The fight was now between the commune and the assembly. The latter, strengthened by soldiers released from Germany, proceeded to invest Paris. It was not for forty-nine days that the besiegers were able to break down the defense. Street battles followed, and the city was set on fire by women carrying cans filled with coal oil. Anarchy reigned everywhere. Public buildings were destroyed and art treasures ruined.

The commune had all this time held a number of prominent persons as prisoners. These were executed when it was seen that the city would fall to the assembly forces. It appeared as though the revolution was come again. Seventeen thousand are said to have perished. Later there were trials and many thousand persons were punished. The republic was finally established, with Adolphe Thiers as president, and the country painfully began to recoup from its terrible experience.

France Makes Quick Payment.

By war and German annexation the population was reduced about 2,100,000. To the amazement of the world, but of Germany especially, the enormous war debt was paid before it was due, so wonderful was the recuperative power of France and the industry and thrift of its people. Business began to regain its normal activity, finance was put on a sound basis, and the army was thoroughly reorganized. The year of the Franco-Prussian war also saw Italian unity completed. After the Sedan surrender the French soldiers guarding the pope returned to France and the king thereupon took possession of Rome.

Under its new constitution the German empire began most auspiciously. In time Bismarck's high protective tariff was adopted, and it has had a great part in the encouragement of German local manufactures and the industrial revival, which was also facilitated by progress in science, especially applied chemistry, the rise of the merchant marine, and the development of the export trade.

Another Bismarckian triumph was the triple alliance, the union of Germany, Austria and Italy, of which so much has been heard at the present day. A long fight with the Socialist party, which in various forms had been asserting its doctrines, was not so successful. The party, although often torn by internal dissension, made a steady increase in its voting strength, and the old chancellor had often to regret the suffrage which he gave in the constitution. This party developed many able men from the days of Lassalle to the present time, and in the reichstag and out the leaders have kept the government almost constantly on the defensive. Not repressive laws, not prison cells, have been able to silence its orators or stop its many printing presses.

The war now going on, however, has demonstrated that both in France and Germany the Socialists have put country before party.

During the period following the war in France great trouble occurred among the mixed people of the Balkan provinces. Herzegovina had revolted against the Turks, and the coreligionists in adjoining states had aided the rebels. Turkey itself had a revolution, and within a year saw three sultans mount the throne. Bulgarian Christians killed some Turkish officers, and this was followed by massacres which shocked the whole world. The revolutionists were joined by Servia and Montenegro in a war on the sultan and to make it unanimous Russia and Roumania entered the lists against Turkey in 1877. A bloody struggle, lasting eleven months, ensued. A large army besieged Plevna, but could not take it by assault, so strongly was it fortified and so ably defended by the Turkish general, Osman Pasha. He had to surrender, however. When Adrianople fell the sultan gave up.

Treaty of Berlin.

The treaty which followed extended the Bulgarian border south to Greece and gave independence to Servia, Roumania, and Montenegro, but Greece protested and Servia objected to Bulgaria's advantage while Roumania protested against what Russia was taking from her. So a new treaty was drawn at Berlin. This gave Servia, Roumania, and Montenegro their independence of the sultan's rule, but cut greater Bulgaria in three, leaving Macedonia to Turkey and East Roumelia and Bulgaria still under Turkish dominion, but self-governing. The sultan was to confirm the prince selected by Bulgaria, and he was to pick a Christian governor for Roumelia.

Russia took a part of Armenia and retained that portion of Roumania in Bessarabia [illegible] had to be content with some swampy country at the Danube mouth. Epirus and a part of Thessaly went to Greece. Austria got the occupancy and administration of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which have proved to be a contributing cause of the present pan-European struggle.

The results of the treaty of Berlin satisfied none of the interested parties except Austria. Russia never forgave Bismarck for his part in depriving her of what she considered her share of the spoils, and, indeed, from then on she was ready to enter into any combination against Germany.

The presidency of Thiers in France was succeeded by that of Marshal MacMahon, but a dispute arose as to the form of government under which the country actually existed, and there was some danger of a return to a monarchy. However, this passed, and by 1875 the republic was firmly established. MacMahon, totally without statesmanship, reactionary and obstinate, became involved over the retirement of several generals, and resigned. Jules Grevy was elected in his stead in 1879. A strong foreign policy was adopted, and France launched out as a colonizer in Africa and China to offset similar ambitions on the part of her rivals. The ship of state had comparatively smooth sailing, although it approached a crisis in 1888-89, when the popular deputy, Gen. Boulanger, who had been minister of war, made a dramatic play, backed by monarchists, at leading the nation against Germany. He aspired to dictatorship, but the movement came to nothing.

When Emperor William died in 1888 his successor, the Crown Prince Frederick, was already fatally stricken with disease and lived but about three months after the coronation. This brought to the throne the present ruler, his son, William II. His character is now so well known that it need scarcely be said that it was but a short time before he and the iron chancellor disagreed. It was not so much a question of differing policies as one of temperaments. William II. had come to the throne to rule and not to be ruled. Before two years had passed he demanded Bismarck's resignation.

William I. had made Bismarck, but the chancellor had united Germany and put his master firmly on the throne of an empire. Germany was now the dominating military power of the continent and was making vast strides in commerce and manufactures. All this was due directly to Bismarck. He was an old man now. He had not lost his cunning, but times had changed and so had masters. This new kaiser had as much determination as the chancellor himself. The divine right had in him an ardent champion. He was a thorough believer in militarism. He could be trusted to go far. So the old man resigned and retired to private life.

Bismarck Victor iu His Fall.

As the previous phase of this history of modern Europe might be called the "era of Metternich," the present might be called the "era of Bismarck," so completely did the iron chancellor of Prussia dominate the period. Otto von Bismarck-Schönhausen may be said to have perfected the system of the Austrian diplomat both as to internal affairs and foreign relations, but he carried the Metternich ideas to a far higher point and he was in reality far more successful, although he, too, in the end had his downfall. Bismarck, however, though he fell, did so as a victor, and his policies were not reversed; it was only that the young kaiser, more imperious than his grandfather, brooked no dictation, even from the forgemaster who had welded together the German empire with blood and iron.

Spain during the nineteenth century was for the most part unfortunate in its rulers. It languished under Ferdinand VII. When his end approached he attempted to rescind the Salic law. This was opposed by Don Carlos, his brother and heir, and the king changed his mind. He was persuaded, however, to destroy the revocation, and on his death his 3 year old daughter Isabella was proclaimed queen, her mother acting as regent for seven years.

Don Carlos and his followers fomented a revolution which went on intermittently for a generation. The people obtained a constitution and a parliament. Finally, in 1840, the Queen Regent Christina was driven out, owing to violent factional quarrels and Carlist agitation. Isabella II. reigned from 1843 to 1868. She proved completely unfitted for a modern throne. Her term was marked by bad management, insurrections, corruption, and governmental fiascos. For three years from 1865 the country was on the verge of anarchy, and the queen fled to Paris, where she lived until her death many years after.

A provisional government was established and a liberal movement prevailed. A monarchy was decided upon and the choice fell upon Leopold of Hohenzollern, a selection which resulted, as has been told, in the Franco-Prussian war. When Leopold declined, the crown was offered to Amadeo, son of the Italian king. He accepted and began a reign full of political disturbance because of the disfavor with which he was regarded. So threatening did this become than in 1873 he resigned. The republicans were again in the saddle. They established a government, but it was not fated to live. Republics were not popular, and in less than one year it fell for want of recognition.

In despair, Spain reverted to the Bourbons, and Isabela's son, Alfonso, thereupon became king. The country received a liberal constitution, which carried with it a parliament of two houses. Alfonso reigned ten years, and on his death in 1885 there was another regency by his queen for their child, Alfonso XIII. This condition existed for sixteen years, when the king became of age.

Revolutiins in Portugal.

The sister kingdom, Portugal, suffered also from bad or incompetent kings and from revolutions. King John VI. had fled from Napoleon to Brazil. The soldiers revolted against English occupation and a constitution was adopted and John returned to his throne. Following his death in 1826 Portugal was governed by his successor in Brazil, Dom Pedro, for a short time. He preferred Brazil to Portugal, however, and abdicated in favor of a daughter, Maria, whom he betrothed to his brother, the latter to act as regent till she became of age. This brother, Miguel, however, was made king by those who feared Dom Pedro's liberal measures. The princesses' adherents rebelled and war went on for several years. Miguel was defeated and Portugal had a queen until Maria's death in 1853. Her successor, Pedro V., lasted only eight years. Next came Louis I., who reigned nineteen years and Carlos I., who occupied the throne from 1889 until 1908, when he was assassinated with the crown prince. Another son, Manuel II., ascended the throne, but the promise that he gave of carrying out the reactionary and illiberal policies of his father resulted in a revolution which drove him into exile and the establishment of the present republic.

Belgium had a more fortunate set of monarchs. Under Leopold I. of Coburg the country prospered. It was during his reign that the army system was organized which has borne such good fruits in the present war. His son, Leopold II., became king in 1865. The prosperity continued, and although there were riots by Socialists and others, the kingdom advanced materially. The present king, Albert I., his nephew, was crowned in 1909. The constitution has been broadened and the suffrage greatly extended.

In Belgium's little neighbor, Holland, three Williams governed it in succession, until on the death of William III. it took a queen in 1890, who reigns as Wilhelmina. There has been a growth of parliamentary power and a liberalizing of the constitution. It has been, like Belgium and Denmark, happily free from political upheavals.

Long standing friction between Sweden and Norway resulted in a peaceful separation, Norway taking as king a Danish prince who rules as King Haakon VII. The present Swedish royal family descends from Bernadotte, Napoleon's old marshal, who was adopted as a son by King Charles XIII., who was without an heir. Bernadotte, as Charles XIV., was king until 1844. The constitutional history of Sweden dates from 1866.

Greece Gains Freedom.

Greece had been under Turkish dominion for many years. Not only had it lost its independence, but even its ancient tongue. In spite of this and unspeakable oppression, the Greeks still dreamed of independence, and the revolutions in Spain and Italy reëchoed among the Hellenes. In 1821 they revolted and for eight years waged a war in which they were almost extinguished. The war of the revolution was marked by great barbarity on the part of the Turks, who had always persecuted the Greeks brutally and several times massacred whole villages and carried off women and children as slaves.

One of the reasons for the Turks' severity was the fact that the Greeks were Christians, and that, too, was a reason why Russia intervened in the name of the Greek church. But the intervention of the powers did not come until the Turks with a large army had embarked on a war which threatened to destroy the whole Greek nation. The butchery of Missolonghi occurred and the occupation of a large part of the country followed. While the whole civilized world shuddered at the atrocities of the Turks, Russia became jealous of England's sympathy for the downtrodden patriots, and, fearing an advantage to the British from this, after peaceful negotiations had failed accepted a challenge of war from Turkey in 1828 and invaded the country.

With French aid she brought the sulton to terms and a Bavarian prince became a Greek king. Turkey also lost Wallachia and Moldavia, on the Danube, save for a nominal control.

Otto was the youngest king of modern times, being but 17 when crowned. He found a state of affairs quite like that in Albania today. The people were turbulent, undisciplined, and uneducated. Coming from a realm where absolutism was the rule, the young king, with the advice of his own countrymen, began a reactionary reign which lasted almost thirty years. His subjects blamed him for not securing more territory by the treaty of Berlin and he was deposed and in his place in 1868 came George, the son of the king of Denmark, who lived to see the Turks again defeated, but who died by an assassin's hand in Saloniki last year. The kingdom was increased by the cession of the Ionian islands by England, and Turkey gave up a part of Thessaly.

The last of this series of the Modern History of Europe will be found in the Color Section of next Sunday's Tribune.

MISS MARCELLA WELLINGTON.

One of the youthful sprites who has taken part in the recent pageants at Ravinia park is Marcella Wellington. Little Miss Wellington is the daughter of Mrs. Blanche Wellington of 1935 Chase avenue, Rogers Park, and is a dancer of grace and promise.

ETIQUETTE.

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer.

Any question on etiquette will be answered for you if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

"DEAR Miss Van Rensselaer: I am to be married in two weeks and it is to be a quiet wedding at home. Only the two families will be present. Please advise me how to enter the room where the minister is. There is to be a young woman friend and young man to attend. Would you kindly tell me in what order I am to place the families at the table. And also would you tell me if I am to cut the cake at the table? A. R. F."

The bridegroom and his best man come in from one door and you with your bridesmaid from another, and take your places before the minister. If you can have music to march in by, have your bridesmaid go in first. Have the minister sit at your mother's right and your most distinguished guest of honor at your left. The placing of the other guests does not matter. Cut the cake at the table if you wish. It is a pretty custom and lends intimacy to the whole ceremony.

"Dear Miss Van Rensselaer: Will you please advise me as to the following: In sending a chest of silver to a bride should I have her initial or the bridegroom's engraved on the pieces, or neither? I wish to present it before the wedding. In a wedding where the groom also wears a ring, does the bride present him with his ring or does he get it himself, and is his ring used in the marriage ceremony? In a simple home wedding is it necessary for the bride to wear a veil, and should she turn about and greet her friends immediately after the ceremony is over? If the bride is dressed in a traveling suit, should she carry a bouquet, and should the bridesmaids dress likewise? K. S."

It is customary to have the bride's initials engraved on her silver. In the double ring ceremony the bride provides the groom's ring. It is used in the marriage ceremony. At a simple home wedding it is not absolutely necessary for the bride to wear a veil if she does not care to. Immediately after the ceremony she receives the congratulations of her friends. If the bride is dressed in a traveling suit she may carry a bouquet. A bride in a traveling suit does not usually have attendants, or even one attendant. If you are to have bridesmaids, wear a white wedding gown.

"Dear Miss Van Rensselaer: When making a call, should my sister and I rise when another caller rises to go? I presume the hostess should do so. Which arm does a man offer to a woman in taking her into dinner or to promenade at a dance? I understand that where a number are dining together the person toasted does not drink with the rest. Where two are dining alone and one proposes the other's health, does the same rule hold good? J. T. W."

It is neither necessary nor customary to rise when another caller leaves. The hostess always rises when her guests depart. A man offers his right arm to a woman whom he takes in to dinner. A toast proposed when there are only two persons is such an informal thing that the rules of toast drinking are not strictly adhered to.

"Dear Miss Van Rensselaer: Where watermelon is eaten should the fork be laid on the plate when finished, or stuck into the melon? GERTRUDE."

The fork should be laid on the plate, never left standing in the melon.

Surprising Results from the Use of

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

For imparting health to the scalp and luxuriance to the hair nothing excels Newbro's Herpicide. It is familiarly known to thousands of users throughout the World as the Original Remedy for destroying dandruff contagion and saving the hair and as a delightful hair-dressing. The letter from Mrs. C. K. Sharp of Luverne, Ala., which comes voluntarily and unsolicited, is a glowing tribute to the wonderful power for good concealed in this well-known scalp prophylactic.

READ MRS. SHARP'S LETTER

Luverne, Ala., Feb. 16, 1913.

I want to give my testimonial on the wonderful results of using Herpicide. December 14th, 1911, we adopted a little girl from the Orphanage. Her head was almost entirely covered with what we term "scaled head," one side being entirely bald. I used every remedy I ever read or heard of, including physician's prescriptions, but they availed nothing. At last in desperation and as an experiment, because it isn't advertised for that, I began on Herpicide. The first few applications stopped the itching. After using two and a half bottles she was entirely cured.

I wish you could see her hair. If I had used any more Herpicide I don't know what we would have done with it as she already has hair enough for two. The bald places are well covered and it is peculiar that all the new hair is curly, while the old hair is straight. The child, whose name is Elcurtis, is now eight years old and calls herself the "Herpicide Girl." MRS. C. K. SHARP.

Each day reveals almost marvelous and frequently astonishing results achieved by the use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE. There are surprises in every bottle which may be expected by the one who uses HERPICIDE carefully and intelligently. While the results are not always of such an astonishing nature as those experienced by Mrs. Sharp, they are invariably satisfying.

HERPICIDE eradicates the contagion that causes dandruff and thus checks itching of the scalp and falling hair. The life, luster and luxuriance of the hair, so intensely admired by everyone, has come to be naturally associated with NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE, the exquisite and delightful hair-dressing.

Riding On the Bridges Fun for Some People.

In the spring a new kind of fan develops. On a bright day—especially on Sunday—a crowd of men and some women may be seen on the bridges when they turn to let boats through. They stay on and ride around and then hang around until the bridge is turned again. The bridge tenders say that there are well known bridge fans who come down and take several rides each day. Naturally they get in the way of pedestrians and the bridge tenders try to discourage the custom, but the old "merry-go-round" spirit proves too strong and the bridge fan soon is back again.

A Little Different Suffrage Story.

"WHAT was all that argument out in the hall?" asked the Riverside resident when his wife returned to the breakfast table. "I haven't had any coffee yet. I was wondering what was keeping you. Your voices were pitched so high and your face is all flushed. What was going on?"

"He seemed like such a nice man," answered Mrs. Suburbanite, hurrying after the coffee pot. "I had no idea at first who it was could be ringing this time of the morning."

"Did you forget all about my having to catch a train?" growled the head of the house. "Who was it? Some one looking for a flat, or some one with something to sell?"

There was a pause before the answer came—time enough to permit the blushes to half way disappear. "I wish I could just remember, dear," she stammered, "but it was so pretty the way he put it. 'It is you women who are to become the bulwark of the nation,' I think it was he said. I told him I would call you, but he said it wouldn't make any difference. He said it would only be necessary to see me."

"Say, for heaven's sake," gasped the round steak provider. "Who was he and what did he want?"

"O, he told me where to go and what to tell you. And he gave me his card. It's here in my waist somewhere if I haven't lost it. But what have I got to wear? I know all the other women will be dressed up. He seemed like such a nice man. He——"

"Let me see that d—— card."

"Wait a minute, Freddie. I've never paid much attention before. But can we vote for anything we want to? He seemed so nice. He——"

But friend husband by this time had hold of the little card. He fumbled it a moment before getting it face upward and then read:

"G. Henry Grabbe, candidate for assessor."

"Are you sure it doesn't spoil the hair?"

"Sometimes it makes the hair burn up, but when it does that we make no charge."

"Isn't it burning now?"

"I'm sure I can't say. You could feel as soon as I could."

Jean Adair: "My husband when he was elected senator went to Washington, but I stayed at home. I was afraid the pipes might freeze if I left the house without any one to look after it, but I've found out it is better to leave a house alone than to leave a man alone. My husband used to write to me a lot about a Mrs. Dean. That was when he first knew her. After a while he didn't say so much about her, and now he never writes about her, but I've learned that when a man stops talking and starts thinking it's time to get busy."

The manicure girl is telling of her various conquests. Comment by the hairdresser: "If the things happened to you that you say happened to you some publisher would put a binding on you."

Jean Adair: "I'll tell you all my thoughts and you tell me if they mean anything."

Maclyn Arbuckle: "That man is a crook. Huh? You say he has four young children? Well, they're about the only thing he has that he didn't steal.

"What's this about the Twenty-first ward? They want $800 to carry it? Why, I used to get that district for two barrels of beer and a barrel of sauerkraut."

Evelyn Weidling: "Are you married?"

Mr. Arbuckle: "No, I still get buttons sewed on in a tailor's shop."

Bill Pruitt—"A bunch of cowboys went into a saloon and took a dummy with them. They stood him up against the bar and gathered around him so that the bartender couldn't get a good look at him. Then they bought drinks for him as well as for themselves, remarking meanwhile how drunk their friend was getting.

"At closing time they went out, but left the dummy standing with his back to the bar. The bartender told the dummy that it was closing time, but the latter never made a move. Again he told him he had to close up and that the patron would have to get out.

"After warning him several times the bartender lost his temper, grabbed a loaded billy, and struck the dummy over the head with it. The dummy fell to the ground and the cowboys rushed in, shouting that the bartender had killed their friend.

"'I couldn't help it, boys,' said the bartender. 'He drew a gun on me.'"

"Peas don't roll off my knife any more."

"Why don't they roll off your knife any more?"

"Because I eat them with my mashed potatoes."

Johnny Dooley and Yvette Rugel—I'm a pretty important man, I am. I've got 2,000 men under me.

"What do you do?"

"I'm the night watchman in a cemetery."

STATE, ADAMS AND DEARBORN STREETS

Announcement

The Fair has been awarded the exclusive privilege of introducing, in Chicago, the new

Annette Kellermann Knitted Garments of Fashions

TOMORROW, on our Second floor, in a miniature theater that adjoins the sweater section, these new garments will be exhibited on and demonstrated by Annette Kellermann's leading pupil, a girl of beautiful face and form.

The Napoleon Cape
The Versatile Jacket
The Byron Cape
The Military Cape
The Military Jacket
The Campus Coat
The Sylvanit Coat
The Outing Coat

are just a few of these new garments, which are manufactured by the Pennsylvania Knitting Mills. In Chicago they are presented exclusively by The Fair,

At 4.95 to 9.95

THESE garments, which express Miss Kellermann's scientific ideas, will be posed by a pupil of the Annette Kellermann School of Physical Culture. To make the demonstration doubly interesting, Miss Kellermann's pupil will give private consultation, and will answer any questions that will be asked of her concerning the Annette Kellermann Physical Culture or Facial treatments, etc. Questions that require detailed and elaborate answers will be referred to Miss Kellermann, herself, who will reply to them by mail.

This interesting exhibition and demonstration every day during the coming week, from 10 A. M. to 12 noon and 2 to 4 P. M. Second Floor

There Are Many Reasons

why so many more women are going to Stevens' this fall for their tailored suits, dresses and coats than ever before. Prominent among those reasons are:

First: We are, during this year, while building, positively making the lowest prices on high grade merchandise that have ever been made in the United States.

Second: You know that we have no old merchandise from last season to show you and work off. Every garment we show you is strictly new.

Third: You know that the general character of the Stevens garments as to styles, graceful lines, fine materials, beautiful finish and workmanship are actually superior to those usually found in general department stores.

No. 5—Broadcloth Suit with Redingote coat trimmed with handsome ornament and buttons of the braid and broadcloth combined. The shaped hip piece and godet flare give this coat a distinct grace and style. Velvet collar and cuffs. The skirt has the fulness shirred onto a yoke. Expertly made of a soft, silkly broadcloth, this suit is a decided value at $35.00.

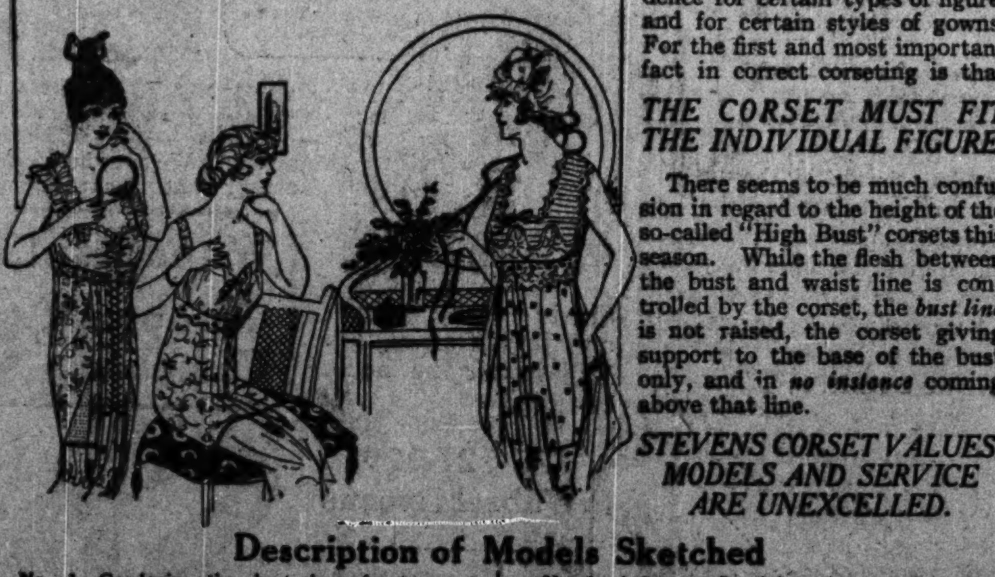
No. 4—Handsome broadcloth suit with long belted Russian coat trimmed with ornaments of braid and hand embroidery in a beautiful design. Black satin and white satin collar combined, embroidered in gold and silver. The richness of workmanship and materials make this suit a remarkable value for $45.00.

In Velvet & Plush Coats showing the new long waisted, belted effects & smart cape coats, $37.50 to $75

The New Stevens Corsets

show many variations from the models the past season, influenced of course by the quite radical changes in the lines of gowns. While many models have come in with the higher bust this does not mean that the medium and low bust models are no longer in evidence for certain types of figure, and for certain styles of gowns. For the first and most important fact in correct corseting is that

THE CORSET MUST FIT THE INDIVIDUAL FIGURE.



There seems to be much confusion in regard to the height of the so-called "High Bust" corsets this season. While the flesh between the bust and waist line is controlled by the corset, the bust line is not raised, the corset giving support to the base of the bust only, and in no instance coming above that line.

STEVENS CORSET VALUES, MODELS AND SERVICE ARE UNEXCELLED.

Description of Models Sketched

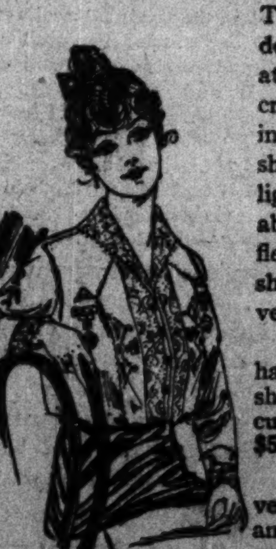
No. 1—Gardenia, the best lace front corset made. The model illustrated is for the average size figure, is beautifully fashioned on the newest lines, and made of a fine quality imported broche. Four elastic insets at the bottom give to every movement of the figure; a splendid value for $11.50

No. 2—A Stevens Special corset, one of our best new models and a splendid value. Lightly boned for the slender and medium figure, and made from dainty pink flowered linen batiste. Price $5.00.

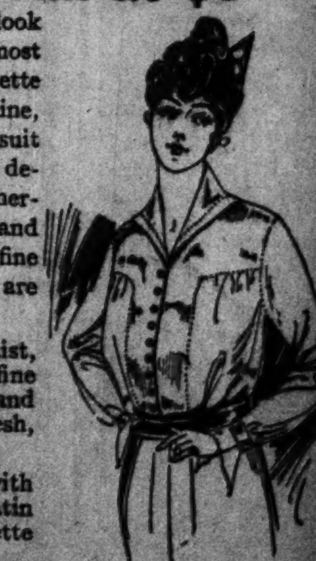
No. 3—La Vogue corset $2.00, made of mercerized broche, a delightfully comfortable and satisfactory corset for the average figure.

Beautiful Blouses Special at $5

That you will surely agree look double the price. There are most attractive new models in Georgette crepe, chiffon and crepe de chine, in black, white and the new suit shades to match suits that will delight you for $5.00. Also innumerable dainty effects in white and flesh crepe and chiffons and fine shadow laces for this price that are very special values.



At left Georgette crepe waist, hand embroidered, in silk, fine shadow lace collar and vest and cuffs. Special in white and flesh, $5.00.



At right tailored blouse with vest, yoke and collar of wash satin and sleeves and body of Georgette crepe. Special $5—white.

Special Value in a New Skirt at $7.50

A stylish model of the new Kayonla cloth. The long tunic has four plaits at the side front, where the skirt fastens with button trimming. This skirt has unusually good lines and is a wonderful garment for the price, $7.50.

Commenting Tardily on "Joseph and His Brethern."

By Percy Hammond.

THE right time to set down consideration of a spectacle like "Joseph and His Brethren" is directly following the first night performance, when one is still reacting to the influence of the mis-en-scene and the enthusiasm of the audience; but the restrictions on time and space imposed by the cabled news made detailed review out of the question immediately after the first presentation of the play in Chicago a fortnight ago.

With the glamor of the pictures gone from the memory, a second visit was necessary to reanimate the impressions. There was recollection only of an extensive pageant peopled by numerous picturesque figures, reciting the literate, if mediocre, speeches of the author—mediocre save in those passages wherein he daringly placed the words of Holy Writ in contrast with his own. And it is not, apparently, easy for even a practiced playmaker like Mr. Parker to write against such a superabundance of scenic glory as Mr. Tyler provides in the exhibition.

But the second visit did not disturb one impression created at the first—that "Joseph and His Brethren" is by far the best of its kind, as drama. I do not think that there is any pretense that any production of the past could rival it in its especial field of spectacle, save only "The Garden of Allah," wherein the matter and the manner were at unequal warfare, with the manner unqualifiedly triumphant. The latter play hardly calls for consideration as being of the kind of Mr. Parker's work, which may be compared, at large, with Paul Heyse's "Mary of Magdala," Maeterlinck's "Mary Magdalene," Rostand's "La Samarataine," and, perhaps, such minor examples of play writing as "Ben Hur" and "The Shepherd King." The last named is mentioned, of course, only because its author, like Mr. Parker, undertook to make a narrative from the Bible serve as the "argument" of a romantic melodrama; for recollection of the work is that it was, as drama, slovenly, smug, theatrically illiterate, and unmistakably apologetic for its scriptural source.

Mr. Parker's play is none of these things; neither is it, on the other hand, poetic drama of the quality of Rostand's "La Samarataine" and Maeterlinck's "Mary Magdalene." Neither the Frenchman nor the Belgian was animated by any fervor for holy writ in turning to the Bible for the respective plays; both sought to leaven the plain narrative with invented incidents of forthright sex; and both, moved by this idea, achieved certain effective, if not notable, passages of passional lyricism. Also, both made plays of theatrical effectiveness, as did Heyse.

The author of "Joseph and His Brethren" does not, I believe, pretend to be a dramatic poet, but a working playwright, bent upon writing popular successes avowedly for revenue. His honesty in the matter has been well rewarded; for he is a rich man. The play on view at the Auditorium is a good example of why he has been successful with the greater part of the public here and in England. He saw in the story of the shepherd lad, beloved by his patriarch father and hated by his numerous brothers, direct, unqualified stuff for the popular theater, and wrote it in that state of mind. His invention is not in any passage more startling than is to be found in the work of a good reporter seeking to fill in the gaps of a "story" given to him in bare outline. In this respect the play is very human, appealing, and reasonable while losing nothing of the "reverent" quality—a quality upon which too much stress is prone to be laid in considering plays of the kind. Mr. Parker was frankly writing for the theater, and not for the church, the films, or tableaux-vivants.

Some good climaxes are achieved—Simeon's "Are there no lions in Dothan?" at the end of the second scene of the first act, for example, and, in another and easier key, Joseph's impassioned promise to save Egypt, at the end of the third act. Mr. Parker's deft touch in combining sheer pageantry with the tricks of the stage is well shown in the latter incident, and again in the final scene of the play, wherein the incident of Jacob's blessing of his reunited sons is effective because the aspect of austere simplicity has been given to a really elaborate employment of theatrical devices. The average gathering of playgoers is not apt to be impressed by anything so obvious, even when made theatrically apposite, as a ritual of domestic devotions; but there is as much popular excitement nightly when Jacob is borne in on his last scene than was created there by the chariot race in "Ben Hur."

The play is acted in its chief parts in the only right way in which a play of the kind may be acted. All the players, save Miss Kaelred, strive for the beat and rhythm of the King James Bible versification. Mr. O'Neill and Mr. Tynan achieve it with small effort, and are correspondingly effective. Mr. Tynan, in a long and exacting part, is indeed excellent in his sustained simulation of fervor and faith, and he achieves a definite measure of composition of character even against the rivalry of the scenery and supers, of whom there are many more than I recall ever having seen before even on this stage of great distances. Mr. O'Neill's reading is always a delight, as well as a lesson in how this sort of thing may be done properly without "elocution." Miss Kaelred intonates in the approved 1914 key; but, then, that is the key in which Mr. Parker footlighted the Lady Potiphar. Miss Romer's dancing is good—if for no other reason than because it is dancing and not the delsarte of the usual "divertissement" in spectacular plays.

The University of California has paid to De Wolf Hopper and to the skill of Gilbert and Sullivan the compliment of asking the comedian to appear in their "Trial by Jury" on Sept. 25 in the Greek theater of the university at Berkeley, Cal., though comic opera is not commonly regarded as within the rigid purview of theaters built in the style of the Athenian amphitheaters. The occasion will mark Mr. Hopper's first appearance in "Trial by Jury," in which, presumably, he will play the rôle of the susceptible jurist as to whom the ensemble sings at every opportunity:

"For he is a judge——
And a good judge, too!"

"Trial by Jury" was so successful when it was first given in London, in 1878, that it had much to do with cementing the long collaboration between Gilbert and Sullivan. Apart from the satire based on the human propensity of juries to give verdicts in favor of the woman without regard for the evidence—a theme which has recently enlisted the satirical fling of Sir James M. Barrie in his "The Legend of Leonora," in which Miss Maude Adams is to be seen later in Chicago—the operetta was hailed as a perfect example of musical burlesque, making fun, as it did, of the standard forms of grand opera.

Miss Maude Leslie, who plays with Miss Florence Reed in "The Yellow Ticket," was a member last year of B. Iden Payne's Fine Arts theater company. Sidney Booth of the same cast was in the service of Winthrop Ames' imposing Little theater enterprise in New York.

"The Benediction," a three act play by Frieda Hall, composer of "The Girl in a Million" and wife of the Chicago Journal's dramatic critic, will be produced in Michigan City Sept. 25 under the direction of Jed H. Flanagan. Patrick Calhoun, Jane Ware, Grace Lane, and William Rainsford are in the cast.

The Hull House Players will open their season at the Hull House theater on Sept. 24 with the presentation of four new one act plays of American authorship. This bill, which will be repeated on Sept. 25 and 26, will be made up of "The Children," by P. B. Corneau; "A Matter of Business," by H. S. Allan; "The Spider web," by Bernard Sobel, and "Where There Is Smoke," by Harold Heaton.

* * *

The Miss Jane Burr who has been engaged to play in "The Salamander" is identified as the divorced wife of "Jack" Punch of St. Louis, the present wife of Horatio P. Winslow, editor of The Masses, a Socialist periodical, and the daughter of Leopold Guggenheim of the famous family of financiers.

* * *

Thompson Buchanan's American melodrama, "Life," to be produced by W. A. Brady, will have Miss Kathleen McDonald, Miss Leonore Harris, and Mrs. Stuart Robson in its cast. Miss Harris will be a lady villain and Mrs. Robson a clairvoyant.

* * *

His manager timidly quotes Sam Bernard as saying that he will act no more outside of New York City after his present tour. It is quite credible, although not a matter of vast importance. Mr. Bernard is very wealthy and may do as he pleases. However, there are comics who could much more easily be spared.

* * *

Arthur Byron, Gus C. Weinberg, and Miss Marguerite St. John will be in the Chicago cast of "Today," starting next Sunday in the Princess.

* * *

N. C. Goodwin is to have the chief part in Jack Lait's new play, "The Bohemian," due for production in Los Angeles next month.

* * *

Besides Miss Ruth Rose, daughter of Edward E. Rose, the playwright; Miss Rosina Henley, daughter of Helen Bertram, the opera singer, and James O'Neill Jr., the second generation aspect of the cast of "Joseph and His Brethren" contained when it was called for rehearsals in Chicago, Miss Lorna Doone Russell, daughter of Ada Dwyer. Miss Russell withdrew to marry, and is now a resident of Chicago, as Mrs. Amussen. Miss Dwyer, who returned from Europe last week, arrives in Chicago today to meet her son-in-law for the first time.

Miss Dorothy Parker, the pretty brunette who was here three seasons ago in "Pomander Walk," acting the chief woman's part and speaking her father's rhymed prologue before the curtain, has become the wife of Lennox Pawle, an English actor returning to this country to play Micawber in Mr. Parker's new "David Copperfield" play, "The Highway of Life."

* * *

Miss Edna Ferber's wise saleswoman of the Emma McChesney stories is to be footlighted in a play called "Roast Beef Medium." Producers have for at least three years been considering the stories for stage use.

* * *

"Love-Insurance," a story by Earl Derr Biggers, is to be made into a play by A. E. Thomas, author of "The Rainbow" and "Wanted—$22,000." Mr. Biggers wrote "Seven Keys to Baldpate"—a fact which has not been given much attention since George M. Cohan dramatized that story.

* * *

Observing that the drama has not flourished since her retirement, the ladylet who was so well known thirty years ago as Mrs. Tom Thumb, is to return to the stage. She is now 73 years old and fifty-six years have passed since she first became a public entertainer. When "Gen. Tom Thumb died she retained his name, although she some time afterward married another midget, known as Count Migri. The famous P. T. Barnum was once her manager.

* * *

Miss Fritzi Scheff will tomorrow night appear in New York City in a new version of "Pretty Mrs. Smith," which failed here in its original form. Miss Kitty Gordon then had the chief part.

* * *

The Keith management last week canceled the bookings of Charles E. Evans in "It Can Be Done," a comic item in the Holbrook Blinn repertoire last spring in the Princess. The reason given is that the sketch is a bit raw for variety theater audiences.

* * *

"In Old Kentucky" has at length succumbed, but it took the kaiser, the triple entente, the triple alliance, and embattled Europe to overcome its marvelous hold upon the affections of the public. A. W. Dingwall, so long the directing manager of McVicker's, has given the order to disband the company, and explains that the war has taken the public mind from the drama—or, at least, from that part of the drama represented by this melodrama, which has survived twenty-one seasons.

Charles D. Waldron, easily the best of the thre actors who had the name part in the long Chicago run of "Daddy Long-legs," has withdrawn from that to take up the chief part in Austin Strong's melodrama of the Boxer rebellion, "The Dragon's Claw."

* * *

Miss Marie Bates, for the character of a comic Irish woman, and Emmett Corrigan, for a sagacious chief of police, are mentioned by its promoters as of the special cast which will act "While the City Sleeps" on Oct. 25 at the Auditorium.

The million or more dollars to which James K. Hackett recently fell heir is to be used, in part, to finance his return to the activities of an actor-manager. This resumption of industry on his part will concern, among other plays, one written by Brandon Tynan, who has the part of the Canaanite shepherd lad in "Joseph and His Brethren" in the Auditorium. Mr. Tynan's play has been written on a basis of the "Craig Kennedy" stories, and ahs been accepted by Mr. Hackett for his personal use as a star. A second of Mr. Tynan's plays is to be his vehicle when, after his season in "Joseph and His Brethren" is ended, he goes forth with the formal label of a star under the Liebler management.

Thirteen years ago, at a time when his experience in the theater was represented by some seasons of service as an actor of boys' parts in the famous company of the New York Lyceum theater, Mr. Tynan became the playwright and star of "Robert Emmet." He did not know that at the time Arthur Wing Pinero, Palgrave Simpson, Clement Scott, and J. I. C. Clarke, among others, had written plays of the same title and theme.

"My play was a failure," says Mr. Tynan. "True, it made $30,000 net; but the manager got the money."

Miss Iren Frenwick will lead the life of an Atlantic City shop girl for a time previous to her appearance in Edward Sheldon's "Song of Songs." She will undergo the privations associated with this employment as a sacrifice to her art, believing that she thus will understand better the character of the heroine, Lily Kardos, who began similarly her unconventional career.

* * *

The Logan Square theater has changed its policy from vaudeville with the installation of a stock company under the direction of Sam Lederer. The first bill is "The Sweetest Girl in Dixie," and it is played by Will N. Rogers, Leota Klyda, William Walling, Kathrine Hathaway, Mae Gardener, Joseph J. Lewis, Paul Juul, and George Miller. Twenty cents is the maximum tariff.

Miss Billie Burke Has Two Successors in New York

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—If Billie Burke thought, when she married Florence Ziegfeld and dulled the piquant interest of a thousand or two envious fluffs, old and young, she would make Charles Frohman angry, Billie Burke thought right.

But if Billie Burke labored also under the agreeable delusion that Mr. Frohman could do nothing or would do nothing about it, Billie was wrong.

For in the first two comedy productions that Mr. Frohman has made this season he has introduced youthful actresses with promising futures, either or both of whom he unquestionably hopes to help along toward stardom under the Frohman banner.

One, and just now the more advanced of the two, is Ann Murdock. Miss Murdock is a Titian beauty you may remember having heard of as "the youngest leading woman on the American stage." That was four years ago, when she was bouncing about aimlessly in "The Call of the North," playing opposite Robert Edeson, the star.

Her debut as a Frohman possibility, however, made this week in "The Beautiful Adventure" indicates that she has set out to tame her wild spirits, and succeeded very well so far as she has gone. The morning after the first performance she was acclaimed by a number of reviewers who heretofore have been quite unable to see her even with the aid of the strongest glasses.

"The Beautiful Adventure" is the comedy that ran the better part of a year at the Vaudeville theater in Paris, reference to which was made in these columns several weeks ago. Relating the experiences of a young woman who elopes with the man she really loves, a few moments before she is to be married to one she does not care for, but is being forced to wed, it is quite Parisian in flavor. But it carries also an appealing charm in the youthfulness of its romance and the humanity of its philosophy, spoken by an old fashioned grandmother who believes "a man should be a man and a woman a woman" despite the unsexing social and domestic reforms of the day.

Grandma, for instance, not knowing the elopers have not had time to hunt up a clergyman, and accepting them as the expected bride and groom, rather viciously sneers at the young man as a "nincompoop" when she discovers him sleeping in an armchair outside the door of the nuptial chamber.

You see, grandma had sneaked back after bidding the young people good-night to spread three sprigs of rosemary before the door of their room, it being an old superstition in her family that this would determine the sex of the first born, guaranteeing a son and heir. And her anger at the situation revealed was quite natural.

She lectures the flustered youth on the disgust that mollycoddleism inspires, and calls her granddaughter to hear her. Without intending it, her arguments are a final blow to their tottering faith in conventions. Next day the true and rather embarrassing situation is revealed by the arrival of the discarded bridegroom that was to be, and is later patched up by an emergency call for the clergy.

In the English adaptation by George Edgerton some few lines have been stricken out and the principal scene has been redressed for the benefit of the overimaginative young person. Though the young lady of the adventure has retired for the night, when she is recalled by the racket that her grandmother makes she still is fully and formally clothed in her traveling costume. In the original version, of course, she reappeared in a wonderful negligee thrown hastily over an equally wonderful nighty.

The second little girl of the 1915 Frohman list is Jessie Glendenning, who helped John Drew officially open the regular season Labor day. Miss Glendenning, a fluffy little blonde of definite talent, is the principal attraction in two acts of Mr. Drew's new play, "The Prodigal Husband," also from a French original.

Mr. Drew, in this instance, is a bad boy. He comes home in the lingering stages of a damp night out, in the first act, quarrels with his wife's attorney, who is trying to patch up their separation, and finally is only half redeemed when he discovers his concierge dead and agrees to take in the homeless 12 year old daughter she has left behind.

Miss Glendenning appears in the next act as the same little girl six years later. She is still Mr. Drew's adopted daughter, but there are ugly rumors that their relationship is more intimate. Which, though you would hardly believe it, puts the idea into Mr. Drew's head. If they say this beautiful young girl is his mistress, why not? And she is forced to run away to escape him.

She goes straight to the wife whom Mr. Drew has cast off because she is something of a saint and objected to his excesses, and when he follows her there, and is surprised to find his wife looking so handsome and so fit, it is comparatively easy for her to induce both her benefactors to make it up.

Although "The Prodigal Husband" contains most of the elements of a typical Drew play, it isn't so pleasant as those he has had, and personally I have some doubt as to just how his public is going to accept it.

With Cohan and Harris the season so far has been one hit after another. "On Trial" is still the talk of the town, and "It Pays to Advertise," which has just followed "Potash and Perlmutter" at the Cohan theater, is the hit of the week.

Here is another lively farce on the same old theme of the bunco artists and their eager victims, but the twists of it are so amusing and the characters so exceptionally well cast that there are hardly any waits between laughs during its telling.

An echo of the Wallingford and the Spurlock stories, the adventures of the advertisers center about the "pinhead" son of a soap magnate. Father has tried every scheme known to man to force son to go to work, but son has successfully eluded the impulse. Finally father conspires with his secretary, a personable young woman with whom son already is in love, and between them they concoct this plan:

The girl will encourage the youth, and when she has purposely excited both his interest and his pity, father will ruthlessly "fire" her, and son will naturally agree to go to work for her sake and "make good." The conspiracy is a great success and the young man is threatened with a dawning intelligence.

Backed by such money as he can raise and urged on by an enthusiastic youth, formerly press agent for "'The Broadway Belle,' a rotten show," he goes into his father's business. Father doesn't believe in sensational advertising, but the press agent does, and the idea is to so boom the new soap company that before their capital is exhausted father will have to acknowledge them as dangerous rivals and buy them out.

Playbills of the Week.

MRS. DOUGLAS CRANE
DANCING at the PALACE

Illinois theater—"The Belle of Bond Street," with Sam Bernard in his best impersonation, that of the wealthy Hoggenheimer. The vehicle is "The Girl from Kay's," in which he performed here in 1904-'05. It has been revised as to text, provided with a new score, and otherwise changed with a view to overcoming the ravages which the flight of the seasons makes in the lighter plays with tunes. Miss Mollie King will have the part played a decade ago by Miss Hattie Williams. The "team" of Norton and Lee, dancers, is part of the Bernard company. This evening for the first time, serving to reopen the Illinois.

La Salle Opera house—"One Girl in a Million," a musical comedy aimed directly at the clientele of this theater by writers and composers well acquainted with its exactions. A singing Raffles is the chief character, and this part is performed by Felix Adler to the expressed satisfaction of the audiences, which have been large since the run started. The Misses Eva Fallon, Leonora Novasio, Nita Allen, and Patsy Shelley are of the cast. Second week.

Auditorium — "Joseph and His Brethren," gorgeously staged melodrama—twelve settings in the "vast" manner of "The Garden of Allah." It is well liked. James O'Neill, Brandon Tynan, and Miss Katharine Kaelred head the cast, which is uncommonly large. Miss Violet Romer leads a ballet. Third week.

Powers' theater — "The Yellow Ticket," a melodrama which runs true to the footlight tradition that official Russia is not made up of gentlemen. Miss Florence Reed plays the heroine, a persecuted Jewess, with much feeling for the manner in which the part is written. Edwin Arden is her chief associate. Second week.

Grand Opera house—"Under Cover," melodrama of the matched-wits type, with the "kick" held back until the very finish. H. B. Warner has the chief part. Third week.

Olympic theater—"Potash and Perlmutter," Montague Glass' tales footlighted, with entertaining results in the case of this cast, at least. It has Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr in the title parts. Fourth week.

Blackstone theater—"Tipping the Winner," mild English farce, affording employment to a numerous company. Miss Edith Taliaferro is at its head. Second week.

Cort theater—"A Pair of Sixes," American farce, with Frank McIntyre and Miss May Vokes. Sixth week.

Princess theater—"Within the Law," with Miss Margaret Illington as the sympathetic confidence-lady. Final week.

Garrick theater—"Peg o' My Heart." Thirteenth week.

VARIETY ENTERTAINMENTS.

Palace Music hall—Miss Elizabeth Brice and Charles King will top the program, singing and dancing in their easy, familiar way. They qualify as "neat." Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Crane, advertised as "The Castles of the Pacific Coast," will dance; and there will be more dancing by a Russian band, the Horeliks. "Imperial," of course! Miss Olive Vail, Fred J. Ardath, and James Cullen are other contributors.

Majestic theater—Miss Kitty Gordon comes to act the chief part in "The Pink Nightgown," a brief farce by J. Kinsey Piele. Harrison Hunter will be with her. Jack Wilson and Franklyn Batie, in songs and patter; Imhoff and Conn, in their comic sketch called "The Doings of Dr. Louder"; Miss Ethel Kirk and Billy Fogarty; and a terpsichorean horse, saddled with the name "Tango Chief," also are listed.

McVicker's theater — Henry B. Toomer, monologist; Mlle. Amoros and Ben Mulvey, in a dance called "A Night in Paris"; Pisano and Bingham, in "The Wop and the Irish Girl," and Dixon, Bowers, and Dixon, comic gymnasts, are named.

Great Northern Hippodrome — "Troubles at Rehearsal," a comic sketch of Monday morning tribulations in a low price "vaudeville" theater, is to be given. There will be "acts" and "turns" by Clark and McCullough, Grant Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Roberts, and others.

Colonial theater—Hans Herbert and a little company will headline in a sketch called "Mistook" until Thursday, when the American Newsboys' Quartet will take the chief position in the program.

Columbia theater—The Love Makers, a company which has Sam Howe as its chief "burlesquer."

American Music hall—"The Passing Review of 1914" is the title of the new week's "burlesque."

ONE WEEK THEATERS.

Imperial—"The Confession," a melodrama by Hal Reid.

National—"September Morn," last season's La Salle success.

Victoria—"Maggie Pepper," with Miss Isabel Randolph in the Rose Stahl part.

Crown—"The Call of the Cumberlands," made from Charles Neville Buck's novel by Hugo B. Koch, who will act the chief character.

Scores of Suggestions, but No Opera—Yet. By Ronald Webster.

LOOKING across the Mississippi river, Homer Moore, the critic of one of the St. Louis papers, takes aim with his pen and hurls a great blob of ink right into the middle of Campanini's opera house in Chicago.

Mr. Moore's interest in the opera situation in Chicago—he devotes two of his three columns to it—is probably a compliment, because it shows that he has been forced to some extent to make a standard of Chicago.

"That there will be an opera company may be taken for granted," says Mr. Moore.

"What sort of an opera company will it be?

"Now is the time for Chicago to answer that question once and for all, and in so doing set an example to these United States that may be followed, and if it is followed will give to Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and possibly St. Louis, its own opera company, identified with the best interests of its own city, realizing that it has a home city and not looking across the ocean for it."

Mr. Moore's suggestions are in brief: Do away with the middleman, the agent of singers who sticks the $1,000 tags on them; give opera all the year round, or most of the year; the pricing of seats so that the man of $100 a month can go once a week with his wife.

The plan is pleasant to consider, even if it should turn out to be impossible. The forcible weaning of this child—American music—from its European mother milk, and the substitution of a coarser but possibly more nutritious food, will probably produce colic and kindred ailments. Mr. Moore advocates a spanking instead of medicines. Possibly he is right.

Almost anything may have happened in the grand opera situation since this was written, so intense has the patriotic fervor of producers gone.

On Tuesday it was known vaguely that some of the Chicago Grand Opera company representatives were in New York negotiating with the Century company for a season here.

The Century company has obviously its best chance. The release of some hundreds of singers from the contracts of European opera houses, and from those American companies which have ceased to exist as far as this season is concerned, makes it possible for the Aborns to organize companies even better than their Century company in New York.

Boston has been arranged for already by the Bevani Opera company. Twelve weeks of opera will begin Monday, Oct. 5, at the Boston theater. The singers are said to have been recruited from those intended for Mexico City, Porto Rico, and Havana. There are a few Bostonese, but most of the company appears to be Italian. The operas announced thus far include only the standard Italian operas.

The pendulum swings between modernism and reversion to early types, even in church music. Pope Pius X., who died Aug. 19, restored the Gregorian chant and drove modern and more dramatic music out of the church. The popes, it is said, are at liberty to make the music conform more or less to their personal tastes and beliefs. On that account they have a wide influence over music. It will be interesting to see what the new pope's attitude is.

Receipts of the first two performances of the Century company in New York will be turned over to the Red Cross society.

Emil Fischer, who was one of the most popular singers of German opera in this country, died on Aug. 11 at Hamburg, Germany. Fischer sang tenor in church choirs, baritone in Danzig opera, and finally bass in opera, ascending in fame and reputation as his voice descended. He had by his fiftieth anniversary in opera sung 101 parts in 3,455 performances. Fischer was the first famous Hans Sachs of this country.

The book of the opera "Parsifal" in her trunk almost caused the arrest of Miss Elizabeth Faulkner, a sister of Mrs. W. R. Chapman, who manages the Maine festivals. They left Beireuth after hearing the opera and were stopped at the German border. The examiner believed that "Parsifal" was a description of the German Parsifal airships, and was convinced with difficulty that he should permit the Americans to leave.

David and Clara Mannes will have a try at an American novelty this season—a sonata for violin and piano by Cecil Burleigh, an American who teaches in Morningside college, Sioux City, Ia. It is called "Ascension," and is said to be the first sonata for violin and piano written around a Biblical subject. Programs of the recitals will say that the first of the three sections portrays the coming of Jesus, including the hate of Herod and his order that all the children of Bethlehem be killed. The second suggests the uprising of the people and the crucifixion, and the last the ascension. The persistent idea that music can be made to say specific things may possibly be true. It gives, at any rate, a chance to scoffers. When the announcement of this sonata, for instance, says that the first movement ends with Jesus' return from Egypt—well, it is unconvincing to say the least.

During the last week the management of the Chicago Symphony orchestra has received word of the arrival in New York of Mr. Tramonti, the principal harpist, and word from Mr. Steindel, the principal violinist, that he expects to reach Chicago the latter part of September. With them the organization is virtually complete.

One of the most interesting events in the music world, at least from a historical viewpoint, is the competition of American trained pianists to be held Oct. 15 for the privilege of playing in the American concert to be given Nov. 2 by the Chicago Symphony orchestra. The work chosen for the test is the MacDowell concerto in A minor. Charles G. Dawes has offered a prize of $200 to the winner.

Glenn Dillard Gunn, who inaugurated the all-American idea with two concerts last season, is in charge of the competition, and will conduct the orchestra again. Those who have entered their names are: Miss Mariea Hanley, Chicago; Josef Adler, Cincinnati; Miss Sue F. Olp, Saginaw, Mich.; Miss Carrie S. Roberts, Chicago; Pasquale Tallarico, Wilton, N. H.; Miss Margaret Wieland, Chicago; Miss Belle Tannenbaum, Chicago; Miss Sarah Suttle, Chicago; Miss Irene Gardner, Cincinnati; Miss Myre O. Reed, Cincinnati; Bernard Dieter, Naperville; Mrs. Stella Kriegshaber, St. Louis; Miss Florence Bettray, Racine; Miss Edith M. Bly, Germantown, Pa.; Miss Carol Robinson, Chicago; Miss Marie Kryl, Chicago; Carl Busch, Milwaukee.

Two American concerts will be given this season. Mr. Gunn has received over twenty scores thus far, and is jubilant over their apparent quality.

The Bach Choral society, John W. Norton conductor, will present this season Bach's "Passion," according to St. John, and Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." A change of policy in membership is announced. No dues or fees of any kind are to be exacted and invitation has been extended to any singers, professional or amateur, who may be interested in Bach. The first rehearsal is to be held Oct. 5 in the recital hall of the Chicago Musical college.

Something About Miss Florence Reed.

Until quite recently it was the usual order of things for stage celebrities to rise in opposition to a child of theirs going on the stage. Therefore, when Roland Reed, the comedian, observed in his daughter, Florence, his only child, early symptoms of the lure of the footlights, he did his utmost to cure them. In this course he was aided and abetted by his wife, who herself was never of the stage, except by marriage, and didn't propose that Florence should tackle it.

All this was years ago in Philadelphia, where Miss Reed came into being, grew to girlhood, and acquired her early education in the Sacred Heart convent. Cropping out with the frequent exhibitions of dramatic talent, which were the girl's by right of inheritance, was a decided gift for music, and this the parents encouraged, so after she had absorbed what the best music teachers in Philadelphia could impart she was taken to Leipsic, where for a year she studied under Leschitizky, who was Paderewski's instructor.

On the death of her father the call of the stage mastered Miss Reed, and she so far overcame her mother's objection that she set out to look for an engagement, although she was only 16 years of age. She made her debut in Proctor's Fifth Avenue theater stock company in New York in the rôle of Kittie Fauntleroy in "Dr. Bill." She remained with this company for some time, then joined Malcolm Williams' stock organization, playing the "leads" in his company in Providence and Worcester and with the Chicago Opera house stock company. Next she became leading woman for E. H. Sothern, and then came a stock engagement in Los Angeles that was unique.

Here Miss Reed received $3,000 before she set foot on the stage. She went to Los Angeles as leading woman for the Belasco stock at a salary of $300 a week for eighteen weeks. The company was playing "The Dollar Mark" when she arrived, and she was not in the cast. That play, instead of lasting only a week, ran for ten, and all the time Miss Reed was having a pleasant time and drawing her weekly salary.

She played Pamela in "Girls" and next went into "Seven Days," creating the part of Anne Brown, the psychic girl, and scoring a big hit. One of her best successes was as the siren in Walker Whitesides' presentation of "The Typhoon" at the Chicago Opera house—her last appearance here until the present one at Powers' in "The Yellow Ticket."

"Every once in awhile," says Miss Reed, "my mother weeps salt tears because her daughter and only child is on the stage."

MISS MARGARET CONWAY

Miss Margaret Conway is one of the young women who will assist in the sale of programs at the "safety first" field day given for the benefit of Our Lady of Lourdes school next Saturday. The affair is being given to raise funds for equipping the school with safety appliances.

After War Is Over.

By Burton Roscoe.

WHATEVER way the fortunes of the war pan out, this fair land of ours is going to be considerably cluttered up with dukes, princes, barons, and other notables who are down on their luck. At almost any pawnshop of respectable standing in the community you will be able to buy honor legion crosses, imperial insignia, and honorary badges which have been left there by more or less businesslike members of defunct royal houses.

I am speaking from precedent, mind you, and not making prophecies idly. After the Napoleonic, Franco-Prussian, and Austro-Italian wars a couple of good Braganzas were shaving chins in Paris, a bona fide Bourbon was measuring tape to respectable pecuniary advantage in a gents' furnishing establishment in Vienna, while Hapsburgs and Bonapartes of undeniable lineage were ready to turn an honest dollar in the leading cities along our Atlantic seaboard.

What with Prince William of Wied, late lamented ruler of the principality of Albania; ex-King Emanuel of Portugal, ex-Dictator Huerta of Mexico, ex-President Castro of Venezuela, and the horde of regal persons of a day or so in the kaleidoscopic changing principalities of the Balkans all out of jobs and the prospects being that their numbers will increase shortly, it looks like a hard winter in the king business.

Heretofore they have been flocking to England or France, but I could never figure out what they did to keep from starving to death. And with royalty generally on the blink all over Europe, the United States will be about the only place they can come to. With this possibility open to contemplation, it is highly probable that Dr. C. R. Henderson and Prof. Graham Taylor will be organizing committees to alleviate the situation of the unemployed divine right protagonists.

But the twilight of the kings means the rising sun for the spoofers.

It used to be that an American who wanted to make an impression during his vacation would go to a novelty shop and buy about six bits' worth of European hotel and steamship company labels and plaster his grips and suitcase with them. Then he would kick the bags around for half an hour and smear dirt on some of the labels and tear the corners off of others to make out as if they had seen some rough and strenuous service across the waters.

This idea is getting a little hoary and decrepit. It is showing distinct signs of senility. Too many have used it. If you are on a boat landing or at a railroad station and see a grip with a lot of fancy European labels plastered all over it you have your unswervable suspicions that the owner thereof has never been east of Saugatuck, Mich. The idea doesn't get over.

But this war is going to save the day for the soda fountain clerk that looks like a Leyendecker advertisement and all his brethren in the gentle art of spoofing. And it lends itself just as readily to adoption by the bold and patriotic devils who carved their initials and the U. S. A. in the catacombs of Paris and left their street addresses with Mimi in the Chat Noir and asked her to answer their post cards.

They can go to an enterprising uncle before long and shake their heads when he looks expectantly toward their watch pockets and ask to look over a layout of genuine foreign honorary badges. After one has made his selection at a total outlay of say about four beans he can get a broad blue or red ribbon for about two bits to hang at an angle of about 90 degrees across his dress shirt. The badge then goes about midships on the ribbon.

Thus dolled up he can go to a dance or party or dinner or reception and await results. Some unlettered boob will be certain to chuck the badge under one of its spokes and ask, "What's this?"

This question will be the dolled up one's cue to show deep emotion and spill a couple of tears to draw a crowd of fairies before he bursts out with a short of pleading for all to refrain from bringing up a subject that brings back such unpleasant memories.

"O, please, please don't remind me of that now. But since you are curious, it was presented to me by the late Grand Duke Berglein de Alcazar. It's the Cross of the Imperial Bull, you know. The grand duke, rest his venerable and lovable soul, decorated me with the cross to show his appreciation for a little loan of $30,000 I advanced him when we were bucking the wheel at Monte Carlo. As fine an old sport as ever had a dukedom, and to think, he was killed—yes, shot down in his saddle during the fierce battle of Rapsobonia in 1914. I can't get over it—no, sir, I can't get over it."

He will have the rah-rah boys with college secret society pins and the fraternal-order crowd, the brilliant hue of the flag of a certain snakeless island with envy and the fair damsels clamoring for dates with him if he pulls it off smoothly.

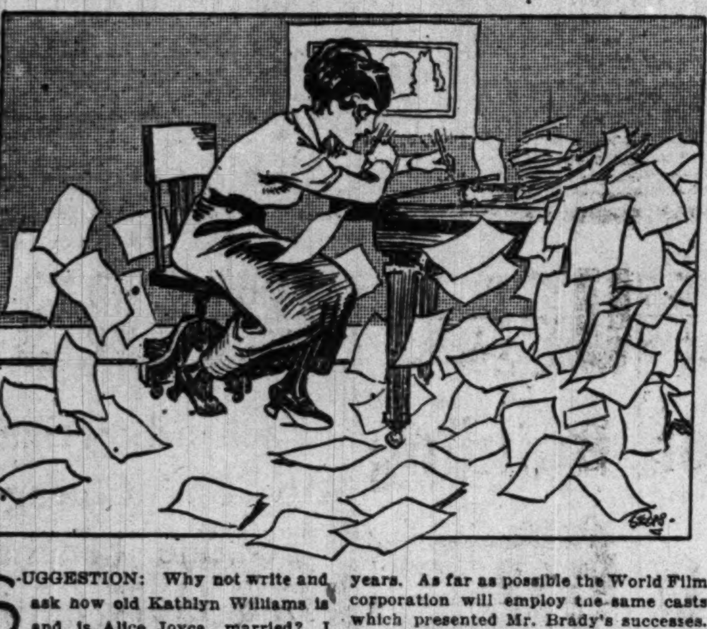
GOSSIP of the MOVIE PLAYS and PLAYERS

By Mae Tinee



SUGGESTION: Why not write and ask how old Kathlyn Williams is and is Alice Joyce married? I have trained my left hand to write answers to those questions automatically, while my right, unobserving and undisturbed, goes right on with other business. In my shop I give out, orally, at two minute intervals, information on these two subjects. Why be original?

I don't know how old Kathlyn Williams is.

Alice Joyce is married to Thomas Moore.

All ready now—
How old —? etc.

Bess Meredyth is trying to trace the crooked minded person who poisoned her dog "Whitey," her special pal, and there is sorrow and anger in her heart. If the miscreant could be caught and hauled to the studios he would meet with some old fashioned justice.

Myrtle Stedman has been doing delightful work in "The Hypocrite," written by Lois Weber and produced by her and Phillips Smalley. In one part of the picture she is in the garb of a nun and she makes a beautiful picture. Courtenay Foote as a monk takes the male lead. A great combination this—Lois Weber's story, direction by the Smalleys, and the superb acting of Foote and Myrtle Stedman. The play will probably be in five reels.

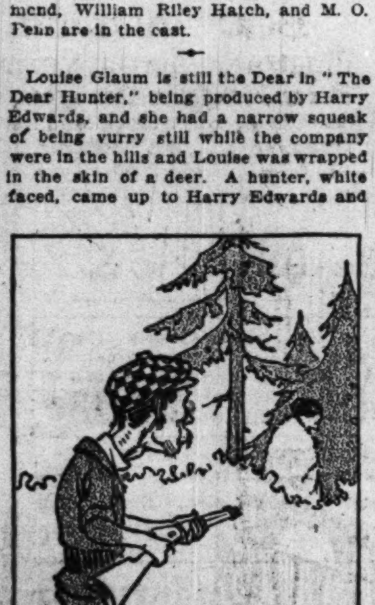
Billy Jacobs, aged 3 years, who plays in Sterling Kid comedies, and who is the youngest leading man in the world, entertained a couple of hundred motion picture people recently when he directed a scene on the big Universal stage. One of the stage carpenters made him a toy camera and, merely for the fun of it, Billy was induced to direct a scene. He conducted himself according to the best traditions and demonstrated that he was well acquainted with the mannerisms of directors.

The World Film corporation has acquired all the rights and producing privileges to the plays which William Brady has produced during the last twenty years. As far as possible the World Film corporation will employ the same casts which presented Mr. Brady's successes. Mr. Brady has consented to this arrangement and many of the actors and actresses who played the leading rôles which they made famous in the original speaking stage version are expected to appear. Even more elaborate mountings will be given Mr. Brady's plays than when the "legitimate" attractions were produced. Exteriors will be taken on the actual sites called for in the author's book, while Mr. Brady has consented to loan the interior sets used in his production to the World Film corporation to assist it in its picturing of his successes.

It is said that the salary of Max Linder, Pathe's leading man in Europe, is $70,000 a year.

The Whartons have produced a picture to be released through Eclectic that contains a scene calculated to make even the most blasé of theatergoers gasp. The working title of the picture is "The Kiss of Death"—this being the name of a famous diamond around which the story is built. In the scene referred to a trolley car runs wild and finally, leaving the rails on a high bridge over a gorge, is dashed to pieces on the rocks far below. To get this remarkable picture it was necessary to stop traffic on a busy trolley line for a number of hours, secure permission from a city to damage an iron bridge, and, of course, buy a big trolley car outright. Thurlow Bergen, Elsie Esmond, William Riley Hatch, and M. O. Penn are in the cast.

Louise Glaum is still the Dear in "The Dear Hunter," being produced by Harry Edwards, and she had a narrow squeak of being vurry still while the company were in the hills and Louise was wrapped in the skin of a deer. A hunter, white faced, came up to Harry Edwards and said: "In the name of goodness, why take such risks in the hunting season! I would have shot this young lady in another second or two had I not heard her call out something." The whole party were silent for a minute or two and took no more deer scenes in the wooded hills.



"Did you really shoot those lions in the picture?" was the query put to Director E. A. Martin so many times in connection with "In Tune with the Wild" that the producer became exceedingly weary. While standing in front of a Los Angeles playhouse he was introduced to a group of Selig fans. One of the women started the usual gushing query: "Did you really—" when Martin interrupted: "No, lady; we did not shoot them. I sang to the lions at the auspicious moment and they were glad to lie down and die without bullets."

I have at hand a letter from Miss Ethel Clayton, in which she states that she has not left the Lubin forces to join the Universal company. Lucky Lubin!

Stella Razeto of the Selig company went to the theater the other night, principally to see how her beloved pet dog Paddy Woofen acted in "What Happened to Mary Jane." Imagine her indignation when she heard the following conversation behind her.

"Say, that Mary Jane is all right, ain't she?"

"Sure, but what do they want to use such an ugly little mutt as that dog for? Why not get a good dog!"

The news has leaked out that House Peters, the New York motion picture actor who has just concluded his contract with the California Motion Picture corporation at San Rafael, Cal., recently joined the ranks of the benedicks. This will be a sad blow to the host of matinee girls who have been showering the popular actor with letters of admiration. Peter's wife is a New York girl who went out to join him at San Rafael. It is understood that the couple will take an extensive honeymoon before the husband returns to the "movies."

Will You Take Your Star Married or Single?

We asked a couple of weeks ago whether or not it would make any difference to fans if they were to learn that their idols were married. There follow excerpts from letters received.

Dear Miss Tinee: Would I take my favorite married or single? I could never "have" either one, so I take them as they are. I couldn't love Mary Pickford any more, nor could I admire Carlyle Blackwell to a greater extent. Both are famous, and marriage has marred them for no one. A MOVIE FAN.

Dear Miss Tinee: I should say I would rather they were single! I do not know why, yet I'd rather they were single, especially J. W. K. and Vivian Rich! MISS ST. M.

Editor's Note—This concludes the series of letters on the subject. Next Sunday a new department will occupy this space. The head will be Voice of the Movie Fans. If you have any suggestions, kicks, or bright ideas relating to the moving picture industry, you are cordially invited to send them along.

Ed Coxen received the highest number of votes this week. His picture, therefore, will appear in The Frame of Public Favor next Sunday. Of the other players voted upon, the following six are the leaders:

Bryant Washburn, Florence Lawrence, Carlyle Blackwell, Antonio Moreno, Dorothy Kelly and Bessie Learn.

If you want to see a picture of your favorite player, send in your vote to "Right Off the Reel," care of this paper. You may cut out and make use of this form if you desire.

GRACE CUNARD

THE HEARTS of many enthusiastic "movie" fans will be made glad today with this presentation of the picture of Miss Grace Cunard of the Universal Company, who, poor pun, is a universal favorite. Miss Cunard was born in Paris. Her mother was an American and her father, a Frenchman, was a descendant of a noble family that was powerful before the revolution. Her parents brought her back to the states while she was extremely young and she was educated in Columbus, Ohio.

When only 13 years of age she played in "Dora Thorne," and because of her excellent work in the rather mediocre production was afterwards much sought after to take child parts. Later she played with Eddie Foy and with other stars of note.

About five years ago motion pictures interested her. She spent much of her time watching various screen productions. Finally one day to her own surprise and the surprise of all those who knew her she went to the Biograph company and applied for a position. She received it immediately, and was at once successful. Later, she went to the Lubin company, and has, besides, worked for the Republic and the Kaybee. The Universal now claims her for its own, and makes the boast proudly, for she, playing opposite Francis Ford, and writing with him, has given much prestige to this organization. The last splendid team work they did was in the "Lucille Love" series.

Miss Cunard has brown hair and gray-blue eyes. Her chief charms are her vivacity and a certain roguishness that is apparent in even her most serious moments. Her favorite sports are horseback riding and automobiling.

The LOVE AFFAIRS of PEGGY

[Copyright: 1914: By The Tribune Company.]

Nearer and nearer comes the day when some one will immortalize herself on the screen as "Peggy." In this episode "Dad's good looking friend" does something unexpected. What do you imagine the outcome of his grand idea will be?

MATILDA and Bess and I talked over my contretemps with dad's friend, and while we thought him quite behind the times, we made up our minds to give him for once what he wanted, and so we planned a campaign for his visit on Sunday that we thought was a wonder.

He approved of youth.

He would see in me the youngest thing that ever gamboled o'er the plains of life. Painstakingly, Matilda, Bess, and I traveled back over the memories of our childhood days, making notes by the way. As they left me Saturday night after our final seance, they whispered on leaving:

"Don't forget—your shortest dress."

"And the hair ribbon to match."

"And the——," but just then mother came up and we stopped. She looked at us suspiciously.

"What are you girls muttering about?" she wanted to know.

"Nothing'm," we all said. She chatted for a moment with us, then went away, and a minute later the girls left. Then she called to me.

"Peggy!"

"Yes'm."

"Remember—no diddings tomorrow."

"Mother," I said, reproachfully. Just—"Mother"—that was all.

Sunday morning I was up bright and early. Singing, I ran out to the garden and gathered some flowers for the table. Caroling, I arranged them. I went out in the kitchen and helped mother with the dessert—she wanted to make it herself, so it would be especially good for the dear man—and tied a red bow on my parrot's cage. Then I went up to my room to get ready for company.

Of course, I'd taken my bath in the morning, but I gave my face a grand extra scrub with lots of soap—not rinsing it especially well, so it was all shiny. Then I didn't put on any powder. I glowed like a young harvest moon. Then I parted my hair in the middle and braided it in two tight pigtails, which I tied on the extreme ends with enormous bows of ribbon, which matched the dress I had put away six months ago because it was too short, and which now I hauled forth with anthems of praise ringing through my head because I hadn't had a charitable fit and given it to the poor. I wore some white cotton stockings and some house slippers with low heels.

Then, journal, dear, I did a little practicing in front of the glass. When a girl has been a young lady for such a long time as I have, it takes quite a little concentration for her to become a child again.

"What are you doing, Peggy, dear?" mother called once as she passed the door.

"Just getting dressed, darling," I answered sweetly.

"Want me to button you up?"

"No'm—thanks. I'm all done." And she went on her way, humming. She thought, undoubtedly, dear journal—"At last my child will do me credit!"

And her child meant to!

Just before dinner was announced I opened my chamber door—banged it after me with a childish bang that shook the house, and tore down the stairs, singing at the top of my voice: "O where, O where, is my little dog gone!"

With the words of this haunting melody still on my lips I bounced into the living room, where were mother, dad, and the assembled guest. I stopped abruptly and stood on one foot.

"O, 'scuse me!" I said, twisting my handkerchief into a hard knot. Silence greeted me. An awful, vacuum-ey silence. Then I heard Mr. Nicholson's voice: "Hello, there, Peggy! I didn't know you for a minute."

"Neither did I," dad echoed in an awful voice. And from the chair where mother sat stiffly came a weaker echo: "Neither did I!"

"O, it's me all right," I assured them, hippity-hopping to a chair. "Say, Mr Nicholson, I tied a lovely bow on my parrot's cage. You'll see it when you come in to dinner."

"I'd like to," he said, gravely. "And what can your parrot say, little girl?"

"She can't say much of anything yet," I said, "but I'm teaching her something." I giggled. "Want to know what I'm teaching her?"

"You bet!"

"Hoch der kaiser and home rule for Ireland!" I told him, triumphantly.

He laughed.

"A young politician, I see."

"What's that?" I wanted to know.

He explained: "A politician is a person who knows less than anybody else about politics."

"O," I said vaguely, "I see. Tee hee, O, Mr. Nicholson, I'm a poet and I don't know it! Har har!"

"Dinner is ready, madam," our maid announced. And we went in. As we sat down at the table I clapped my hands:

"I know what we're going to have for dessert!"

"Peggy!"

Dad and mother spoke together and at once. I hung my head and relapsed into silence, which I broke after some minutes to remark: "See the pretty bow on Polly's cage? I made it!"

"It's a beautiful bow," Mr. Nicholson said, gravely.

I nodded. "I can make lots of things," I told him. "I made some doll clothes. I'll show them to you after dinner. I have three dolls. Two are girls and the other is a boy. He's named after you. I named him the other night after you were here. He looks like a smart Aleck! He—"

I suddenly became conscious that mother was standing. Her face was flushed and her teeth were caught in her under lip. She said: "Peggy, I think you must be mad! I shall take you to a doctor tomorrow. In the meantime I shall be obliged to ask you to go to your room. I can't bear to look at you or listen to you any longer. You can't be ours. You seem like a crazy child! You—"

But I had waited for no more, dear journal. I rushed out of the room and up the stairs. Once in my own room I threw myself on the bed and cried until the pillow was soaked.

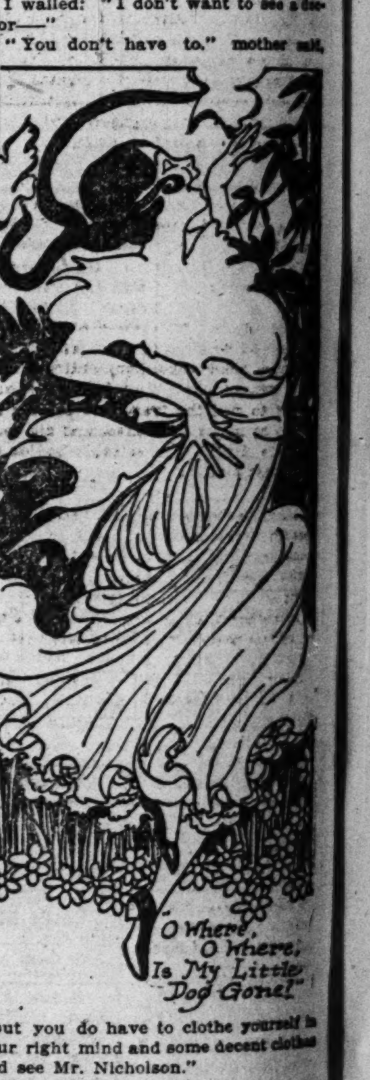
Suddenly there came a knock on the door.

"Cub id!" I gulped.

Mother entered. "Get up!" she ordered.

I wailed: "I don't want to see a doctor—"

"You don't have to," mother said, "but you do have to clothe yourself in your right mind and some decent clothes and see Mr. Nicholson."



O Where, O Where, Is My Little Dog Gone!

"O, mother—I can't!"

"You must!" she said, firmly. "But you won't mind, Peggy, when I tell you that instead of being disgusted with you, he raves over your cleverness and declares you must go on the stage. First, though—he knows of a studio where—"

"Mother!" I squeaked. "Mother!"

And when I finally got back to the company I grabbed him and tangoed him all about the room.

Do dreams come true?

They do, they do!

I'm going to be a "movie" actress!

Answers to Movie Fans. - By Mae Tinee.

PHYLLIS P. C.: Arthur Johnson and Lottie Briscoe are not married; neither are Marguerite Clayton and Gilbert Anderson. Your votes received.

L. K. AND THE REST: Yes—yawn—John Bunny is still active. Screen players play every day sometimes. There are times when they are not called upon for weeks. What do you mean, was Pearl White captured on a trip out west? Somebody tell you the Injuns got her? Surely it's a natural stone that is rolled down the hill. She says she is not married. If one must be silly, one might just as well be silly over adventure as anything else, is the opinion of this competent critic. You're welcome.

MISS L. G.: No, and again, no, no! Dear Mr. Bushman sees quite as well as he ever did. Nothing unpleasant will ever happen to him that he can prevent, you may rest assured of that.

MARIE R. K.: "Dear, sweet child," am I? Grr-rr-rr! And I cannot answer your question, since you do not give me the name of the company. I should say I don't hope you'll never write again! When you flatter me like that?

BENJAMIN F. H.: If you will send a stamped and self-addressed envelope, I will send you some printed material which will answer all the questions you have asked regarding scenario writing. There is not space in these columns for such replies.

JENNIE S.: Mary Pickford is 21 years old. She has been with the Famous Players for a number of years. Pearl White says she is not married.

CUDDLES: The Vitagraph studio is located at East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. The Edison is at 2826 Decatur street, New York City. You're vurry welcome!

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire it, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed, Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Mae Tinee in care of this paper.

Questions that have been repeatedly answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

BERNICE B.: Grace Cunard and Francis Ford say they are not married.

HAZEL P.: I wouldn't set a price on my scenarios if I were you and I wanted them accepted. You'll be lucky if they're taken at the regular rates. If you will send a stamped and self-addressed envelope, I'll send you a list of studios that accept scenarios. I'd try some of the western ones if I were you.

SEEKER: I didn't know she was married. If you keep track of the Kalem productions, you probably will see her soon in some one of them.

HELEN LILA: O, yes, you may call me Mae, if you wish. Yes? Well, you just ought to see me! Edith Storey is 20 years old. Yes, I think her attractive. Donald, I think, is the first name of the Kent you mention. Norma Talmadge is not married, to my knowledge. Vurry welcome!

DONA A.: Cleo Madison is with the Universal western company, the studio of which is located in Hollywood, Cal. She has fair hair and gray eyes. She is at present appearing in "A Trey of Hearts." She was on the stage for years before entering the picture field.

H. E.: When the films look as if the wind were blowing, the wind probably was at the time the picture was taken.

N. R.: Surely, I'll "favor" you! The picture of Irving Cummings appeared in the Sunday paper, Aug. 2.

INTERESTED: A stamped and self-addressed envelope sent to this department will bring you printed material on how to write photo plays.

JOSIE: Yes, Harry von Meter is "nice" to look at. He is about 35 years of age.

J. M. L.: I have no information regarding the actor you mention.

HILDEGARD: Stamped and self-addressed envelope, please.

STYX: So you think Mabel Normand is "sure some girly"? Well, I agree with you. She is with the Keystone branch of the Mutual company—or was the last I heard. I don't believe she is married. She's quite young.

RUTH: Warren Kerrigan is not married. He's about 28, I should judge. Kathlyn Williams has a son of whom she is exceedingly proud. I don't know how old she is. Why do you want to know?

Autos and Autoists in the War.

By Reed L. Parker.

MOTORCYCLISTS are being paid $4.80 a week for active service in the army. In addition they are paid a bounty of $48.50 on enlistment, and promise of half that amount when discharged.

Mechanical transport is already playing such an important part in the war that in the opinion of some, there are possibilities of the demand for tires and other accessories for motor vehicles exceeding the supply.

In the London Times appears a short article on the methods of transportation in the theater of war, and the writer attributes the extraordinary rapidity of movement of the German patrols to the extensive use made by them of motor cars; this, of course, is altogether independent of the heavier and slower machines being used for the transport of food and ammunition to the fighting forces. According to The Times correspondent the Germans are using armored cars extensively for patrol work—powerful machines carrying eight, ten, and sometimes more men with a quick firer. As soon as possession has been taken of a village or a new stretch of country reconnoitred, a number of armored cars are sent along to the next village in front, followed by a cavalry patrol; this, of course, strikes terror into the rural population and brings it home to them as nothing else would that the enemy has arrived. Indeed, there is now no doubt that the extraordinary rapidity of some of the German movements must be attributed entirely to the coöperation of the armored motor cars with cavalry.

J. S. Critchley, president of the Institution of Automobile Engineers, has been appointed by the English war office an inspector of mechanical transport. This position carries rank as an officer in the army service corps.

A rather amusing and decidedly instructive anecdote comes from the London Times correspondent at Petrograd. He recalls that, at his last interview with the Russian military authorities just before the war, Prince Hohenlohe, the Austrial military attaché, expressed some surprise that the Russians should be requisitioning so many motors, on the ground that their roads were too bad to allow the machines to be used to advantage. "Yes; but yours are good," was the response. It appears that both Russia and Austria are making considerable use of motors where roads permit, and the Times correspondent suggests that this may explain the rapid alternation on the frontier of engagements which are otherwise somewhat confusing.

There have, of late, appeared in the press various censored telegrams referring to large forces followed by "members of huge transport motors." It will be fairly safe to assume that the forces in question were British, or at least were backed by British transport, since the number of heavy wagons available in France and Belgium is small, and if these countries were dependent entirely upon their own supplies of motors we should expect to find the transport carried out mainly by motor omnibuses and big touring cars fitted with suitable bodies for temporary service.

Alarm is being felt at the general speeding up of the motor traffic in London consequent upon the speed limit being withdrawn from vehicles upon government service. Many motorists driving in a purely private capacity have made this an excuse to disregard the speed limit.

As an indication that Germany expected a war as early as June and prepared for the emergency the following is printed in an English trade paper:

"From motor cars to nonskid chains is quite a natural step, and in these times of war, when motor cars are already playing so important a part, the value of these chains is greatly enhanced. When it comes to trying to go across a field or over some sodden ground it is only by means of nonskid chains that such movements can be carried out successfully. Quite a little story with a history attached to it comes to us from Mr. Green, who is responsible for the destinies of a nonskid chain concern. It appears that so far back as June an order came from Germany for several thousands of sets of nonskid chains. We have seen the order, and it certainly looks quite an innocent little document which at that time, of course, did not appear to Mr. Green as anything other than a pleasant surprise and a welcome increase of foreign business. Everything was quite in order except that the goods were not to be dispatched immediately, but to be held until asked for. The day before war broke out between England and Germany a telegram came demanding the urgent dispatch of these nonskid chains and the duplication of the order. The sequel is quite happy, as, in the words of Mr. Green, "unfortunately there has been a little delay in executing the order and the chains have not yet gone."

MOBILIZING FRENCH ARMY TRUCKS

Despite the vigorous censorship, scraps of news from those on military service at the front continue to leak through, and news has been received from the well known French rider Gabriel that he is serving as a motorcycle dispatch rider with the French army.

Something like 1,000 drivers and conductors in the employment of the London General Omnibus company have had to leave the service in order to rejoin the colors on mobilization.

The Scottish Motor tradesmen have offered more than 1,100 cars for war service.

A German airman escaped unharmed when carrying out a bomb dropping expedition over Liege. He tied a lantern to a rope, 200 feet long, which hung below his aeroplane. The Belgians were deceived, firing on the lantern and smashing it to atoms, while the airman dropped his bombs in comparative security.

Armored motor cars are being used by the Belgian sharpshooters in their hunt for German cavalry patrols.

Motorcycle ambulances are being used by the belligerents.

According to unofficial figures the British expeditionary force took with it seventy-seven motor cars, seventy-two motorcycles, and 2,062 bicycles.

No traffic is allowed on French roads after 7:30 p. m.

Every roadster is being provided with a "dickey" seat by order of the English war department.

Forty miles an hour is the speed limit in nearly every city of England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland, providing the car bears the legend, "O. H. M. S." (on his majesty's service).

The Brooklands aerodrome has been taken over by the English government.

Military motorcyclists in London are now provided with a card attached to the handle bars of their machines, on which is printed in bold lettering "O. H. M. S." This is found to secure them almost uninterrupted passage, even in the most crowded parts of the city. Unauthorized people who use these letters are severely dealt with.

"I'm singing for charity."

"For the love of charity, don't sing."

"Washington was a great man. He couldn't tell a lie."

"I'm a greater man. I can tell a lie every time I hear one."

"I suppose you think that you are such a great man you ought to be president of the United States."

"No; I don't want that job. I want a steady job."

"Little boy, what would your mother say if she knew you were smoking cigarets?"

"She'd be sore. They're her cigarets. I saw a horse drop dead the other day. It was out in the Italian district and the street had one of those long Italian names. The cop asked me to spell it. I couldn't. He couldn't spell it either, so he didn't know how to write down his report. Finally we had to drag that horse four blocks until we reached Jones street."

"What do you think of that diamond?"

"Is it genuine?"

"Why, it's as genuine as the roses on my cheeks."

"I wouldn't give you a nickel for it."

"I've heard your aunt is getting fatter."

"Yes, and she's so fat now that the only thing that she can buy ready made is an umbrella."

"Why don't you get married?"

"Why don't you marry me? If you marry me, you won't have to work another day."

"I'd have to get a job as night watchman."

"I'll have you know that the girl who marries me will get $20,000."

"It's worth it."

George McKay and Ottie Ardine: "Help the Salvation army, please."

"What have the police got to do with it? You don't look like a regular army girl."

"No, I'm only a volunteer. Are you a married man?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"O, I suppose I was born lucky."

Mr. McKay in criticising Miss Ardine's German accent, remarks: "You're one of the why don't you come to see me never kind. I live where the cars bend. Let's get on the beginning of the boat. Why don't you talk English?"

"Are you a self made man?"

"When I first started in business I borrowed a dollar and bought some soap. Then I started to peddle the soap."

"And now you're worth millions."

"No; now I still owe the dollar."

COLONIAL.

Ogden—I suppose I will have to be up all night again; I have to make up my expense account.

Benson—Why don't you tell the truth and get a good night's rest.

Ogden—I am a victim of insomnia. For instance, I can't sleep if I hear the cat on the back fence.

Benson—Here's something that will be effective, and you will be able to sleep tonight.

Ogden—When do I take it?

Benson—You don't take it; you give it to the cat in some milk.

Ogden—I heard that you were very musical. Is that right?

Benson—I should say so; I was born with drums in my ears.

Brandon—How much for your hack to the park?

Russell—Five dollars.

Brandon—I do not want to buy the rig.

Russell—I should hope not; the horse alone is worth $5.50.

Brandon—Why did you call your first born son Bill?

Russell—Because he was born the first of the month.

Brandon—Did you say that Jim stole your handkerchief because it looked like the one that was stolen from you? Why, I have one just like it.

Russell—That's very likely; there were two stolen.

THE ASSOCIATED FURNITURE MANUFACTURERS

in the National Furniture Exposition Building

Offer Sample Furniture at 50% to 60% Saving

ATTEND THIS SALE TOMORROW

A SAVING of 50% to 60%—of course you know what that means; but do you realize what sample furniture really is? Let us tell you. Do you ever remember, in the days when you were a kid, of your mother or Mrs. Jones next door making a pie or a cake for a church social or a country fair? Can you recall all the loving care and skill she exerted in making that pie or cake? Do you remember the deft pats and pokes that she gave it before putting it in the oven to be baked to a delicious brown? The reason your mother or Mrs. Jones went to all that extra trouble—exerted all that extra care—was because she was making sample pastry. She was sending her product out for people to stare at, to examine, to criticise.

That is the case of sample furniture in a nutshell. If you can just keep that picture of your mother making that sample pastry you can get an idea of how sample furniture is made. Furniture manufacturers are judged by their sample furniture. They secure their orders on it. It is the backbone of their business and of their reputation. So you can see that only the finest examples of furniture building—of furniture art—are found among sample furniture.

And now we are going to tell you again, and we want the fact to sink in, that you can save 50% to 60% on sample furniture if you come to this exhibition in the National Furniture Exposition Building, Michigan Boulevard and Fourteenth Street.

Remember, sample furniture is always perfect—furniture made to please the critical eye of the furniture buyer who would detect the least flaw in a jiffy. Now think of this: Here in the National Furniture Exposition Building you can get sample furniture a this great saving. Come down here tomorrow morning early. One look at the goods will convince you. If it doesn't, go to any downtown store, compare pieces and prices, quality for quality, and then you'll realize what we are offering you. Remember, it will be a case of first come, first served. The best goods go the quickest. If you want to take advantage of the greatest furniture buying opportunity in a lifetime, you will be here early tomorrow morning.

We have no retail delivery system, but we have made arrangements with the Illinois Express Company, the Jones Motor Car Company, and the National Transfer Company to deliver your purchase without cost to you. All purchases, however, will be on a cash basis. At the prices quoted we cannot afford to extend credit.

Bear in mind that the pieces illustrated here are merely examples selected at random from this great stock of samples. They don't begin to give you an idea of what this sale really is—of what you will find here in the National Furniture Exposition Building, Michigan Boulevard and 14th Street. But the prices are representative of our hundreds of other bargains.

For Motorist and Motorcyclist

By High

Inquiries concerning motorists, motorcyclists, etc., will be answered. Address letters to "High Speed," care of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

UNQUESTIONABLY the eastern section of the Lincoln highway, as described in THE TRIBUNE last Sunday, will find much greater travel than will the western section, which extends from Omaha to San Francisco, a distance of 1,930 miles. There are more automobiles in use in the eastern half than in the western, although the number is increasing in the west with rapidity, but with the gradual improvement of the great highway easterners will use this to travel from Chicago to New York rather than take the longer route though Buffalo, although it may be some years before the highway will equal the northern route from the standpoint of good roads.

From Omaha west the motorist will find himself amid the great farming lands of Nebraska, with level roads and little scenery save that offered by wheat fields, but as he approaches the Rockies he will enter the land of scenic effect and will have no end of interesting objects and driving that will be something of a novelty to those accustomed to a flat country such as is found in Illinois and Indiana. He will travel over some of Colorado's prison made roads, through cañons, up mountains that will occasion low gears and will rise from 1,030 feet altitude at Omaha to 1,800 feet at Grand Island. Five miles past Kearney he will be half way between Boston and San Francisco and he will keep on climbing until he is over 6,000 feet up when he reaches Salt Lake City.

Near Eureka the altitude is 9,0[illegible] feet, and then the gradual descent begins, so that at Reno it is 4,500 feet, but another rise is occasioned by the Sierra Nevada mountains, some 7,000 feet. Then there is a drop of 4,500 feet in a little over fifty miles. The motorist will see immense farms, huge herds of cattle, mining industries; he will have opportunity to camp out en route, if he is a lover of outdoor life; and he will find mountain streams that will offer sport in fishing.

The distance from New York to Omaha, the eastern section of the Lincoln highway, is 1,458 miles, and when the New Yorker has reached this point he has still to go 236 miles before he has reached the half way point. He has had easy going so far, and now begins the pull on the motor in the steady climb into the mountains, and it is for this reason that his car must be in tiptop shape, with efficient brakes, and the motorist must have a practical knowledge of his car and know what it will and will not do.

In the table of distances herewith not all the towns and cities are listed, for space would forbid; but the important ones are given, so that the traveler will be able to familiarize himself with the general lay of the land and know something of what he will be expected to do:

Answers to Queries.

"I am a reader of THE TRIBUNE and would thank you if in the next Sunday issue you would give me the best and most direct route from Galesburg, Ill., to Oelwein, Fayette county, Ia., and state if possible if the roads are marked, if hilly, sandy, etc. Also the best route to Racine, Wis., by way of Richmond, McHenry county. Please also give the number of miles.

"AARON WOOD, Galesburg, Ill."

Go from Galesburg to Davenport, Ia., by way of Alpha, Milan, and Rock Island. It is a dirt road most of the way, but generally good, while the distance is fifty miles. From Davenport to Dubuque, eighty miles, is by way of De Witt and Maquoketa. The road is dirt and for the most part is hilly. Now take the Hawkeye trail through Epworth, Dyersville, and Manchester to Independence, sixty-five miles. This is a dirt road, hilly for a way, and then level. The distance to Independence is thus 195 miles, but THE TRIBUNE has no directions from Independence to Oelwein, although it is only a short distance. Nor can it be stated whether all the roads are marked; the Hawkeye trail is, however. To reach Richmond go from Galesburg to Aurora, through Kewanee, Princeton, Mendota, Earlville, and Somanauk. This will be 150 miles. Then take the river road north to Elgin, twenty-two miles. Keep on the west side of the Fox river to McHenry by way of Algonquin to Richmond, which is thirty-five miles, or 207 miles from Galesburg to Richmond. You will have to go to Lake Geneva and then east to Kenosha and north to Racine, a distance of fifty-seven miles.

"Please let me know the best route from McHenry to Lake Geneva. I drove from McHenry to Lake Geneva on one road, which had sign posts with the number of miles, and it was one of the worst roads I ever encountered; in fact, I could hardly drive over it. Do I have to go through McHenry to reach Lake Geneva from Chicago? A. F. P., Chicago."

It is not necessary to go through McHenry. You do not state which road you took, so it is impossible to give another route from McHenry to Lake Geneva. As good a way as any is to go to Elgin by way of Addison, Bloomingdale, and Ontarioville, then north along the west side of the Fox river to Algonquin. Here turn west at the city hall and go through Crystal Lake and Ridgefield. From here you can go through Hebron or west through Woodstock, Harvard, and Walworth, with the latter route preferred.

"Please give me in next Sunday's TRIBUNE the best road from Janesville to Chicago, going in on Milwaukee avenue and the nearest boulevard running the same direction as Milwaukee avenue.

"E. O. SMITH, Janesville, Wis."

There is no boulevard paralleling Milwaukee avenue, but when coming into Chicago in Milwaukee avenue you can strike the boulevard at Logan square and can go south into Garfield park or east and strike Lincoln park on Diversey boulevard. Leave Janesville by way of Main street, going through Delavan to Lake Geneva, which is thirty-four miles. You will enter Lake Geneva in Main street and should keep on that to Broad street, then turn south and follow the lake shore, turning left up a good grade. At the top of the grade turn right and then curve left to a country road. This will take you through Genoa Junction and into McHenry. Cross the bridge and then immediately turn right, following a good road through Wauconda, Long Grove, and Buffalo Grove to Wheeling. Here you will come to Milwaukee avenue, which can be followed direct to Logan square. From Lake Geneva to Wheeling it is about forty-four miles and twenty-two miles more to Logan square, making the distance to the boulevard 100 miles. It is then eight miles to Jackson and Michigan boulevards.

THE TRIBUNE WEEKLY ALMANACK

September

Autumn Approaches.

THE cheerful dead leaf falls, prophetic of the putting on of the gay cerements of scarlet, yellow and brown, of the coming Vallombrosan days of cheery chill. The harvest moon comes new into the sky, the hen house gets a coat of white wash.

The good fruits of the earth go into jars and the store room in the cellar bulges like the store rooms of Egypt in the seven fat years. The helpful good man stirs the tomato butter, a service of appetite, a domestic rite of anticipated pleasures. The damson plum contributes its tart good offices to the gathering of foods.

Melancholy gains no recruits as the outdoors approaches the sear and yellow; the dead leaf dropping early from a red oak is not its messenger. The pumpkin soon will show yellow in the shocked field. The strategic rabbit leads the ecstatic dog into burrs and nature is assisted in her reproductive plan of scattering seeds broadcast.

The closed gentian will be massed in open fields, the fringed gentian hidden in coverts where premature frost may not too dangerously interfere with its ripening of seeds; a bold beauty is the fringed gentian risking its existence at the edge of frost. Warblers are in full return from the north.

Bulbs are on hand for winter forcing and as the green goes into retreat without, it is brought into action within. Autumn comes Sept. 23, a fat, smiling creature with a leaning toward the flesh pots, a Sancho Panza of a season with a sense for comfort, a mind for well proven proverbs. Give him two blankets and let the leaves color and fall. He is a philosophical person of inexhaustable content.

The Gardener at Work.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS for flower shows have been in the minds of growers since early in the year. To exhibit or not to exhibit has been the question, for the fancy chrysanthemum goes into training, is fed, forced, pinched back, and pruned and coddled for a date in the calendar. There are rules for the monster beauties, and rules for the richly flowered, symmetrical trees. Yet the humblest gardener and back yard amateur can have a handsome perennial chrysanthemum to enjoy annually, or he can raise prodigies for a local flower show.

The perennial chrysanthemums in whites, yellows, and rose colors are one of the delights of autumn. Their silvery foliage and pungent odor are part of the season when mints and calamus or sweet flag perfume the air. The bushes of small flowered buttons live many years in the same place, require little shelter in winter, and give flowers until November. At this season the gardener pulls up dried plants that may have gathered around them, brushes away webs, and knows that when other flowers are gone they will be ornamental.

Chrysanthemums may have originated in Japan and the orient, but France and England have contributed some fine strains. American breeders also have succeeded in growing curious pompons, the ball and cone shapes, curiosities in petals, colors, and centers, and singles and doubles in great variety. Books are written about them, and the chrysanthemum shows in the parks and at the Horticultural society educate the public.

Garden work this month divides itself plainly between the present in the garden and the future of spring plants and those for the house. Watering must go on, but little should be done when nights are cold. Dry plants do not freeze so easily as those which have had a great deal of water. Plants in bloom must be cared for, dead ones pulled out, and places made for bulb planting. The perennial borders should be cleaned, and in vacant spaces seeds of English daisies, pansies, forget-me-nots, silene, hollyhocks, columbines, and larkspur must be sown. They will come up this fall and, getting a good start, will be ready to set out in the spring.

The house grown poinsettias begin to show signs of ambition. Old plants need more care than the young, vigorous ones. They should be watered sparingly and kept in an even temperature if it is desirable to hold them back for the holidays.

Kochia tricophylla, the summercypress or burning bush, is painting bright spots of color in many dreary places. Kochia will grow anywhere. It is cheerful on a cinder heap, shaping its fernlike bushes gracefully in the freshest green, which becomes carmine, then blood red at this time of year. Because it is hardy and scentless its sterling qualities as a plant for school yards, railway stations, and park corners are not made use of as often as it deserves.

The hydrangea otaksa, grown in tubs on porches, will continue to be handsome and turn its luxuriant flowers from rosy pink to violet a week or two longer. A 50 cent plant will give satisfaction and looks well among potted ferns. The fire ball salvia is ornamental.

Notes of the Automobile Trade.

The Triple Action Spring company of Chicago, manufacturer of the Johnson shock absorber, is making additions to the factory in East Twenty-eighth street, near Michigan avenue. The new plant when completed will occupy 29,000 square feet of floor space, which will enable the company to double the output.

William D. Myers, former sales manager for the Stutz Motor Car company, is now with the Cole Motor Car company. Mr. Myers has a large acquaintance with the men in the retail selling end of the automobile industry.

More persons were killed in Chicago and the rest of Cook county by falls in their homes last year than were killed in the streets by motor cars; more died of accidental asphyxiation, more were killed by street cars, more were drowned, nearly twice as many died by burns and scalds, and nearly three-quarters as many died from falls from wagons and horses, and falls on the street and sidewalks as died from automobile accidents, according to figures contained in the biennial report of the coroner of Cook county for 1912 and 1913.

Another indication of the rapid movement of Chicago's business center for the automobile industry from Michigan avenue westward is given in the location chosen by the Autocar Sales and Service Company of Illinois for its new sales rooms and service station—753 and 755 West Jackson boulevard.

The Best Tire Built is Not a War Price Tire

Goodyear Prices Same as in June

Bear in mind in these extra-price days that Goodyear tires—No-Rim-Cut tires—sell at old-time prices.

To pay more is a needless tax. You know—or should know—that Goodyears are the best tires built. They outsell any other. They excel all others in four great ways—
In the No-Rim-Cut feature
In the saving of blow-outs
In combating loose treads
In the All-Weather tread

These are exclusive features. In these ways—at least—any price you pay buys you a lesser tire.

1,500,000 Pounds of Extra-Grade Rubber

We have secured abroad—by having men on the ground—1,500,000 pounds of extra-grade rubber. It was practically all the good rubber available. And we paid the before-war prices.

Ships are bringing this rubber now. Much of it has already arrived here.

We bought most of the good rubber. Prices of "off rubber" have advanced. So the Goodyear factory and the Goodyear users are in a unique position.

No Under-Grades

We pledge you the same grade of rubber as always. Our formulas have not been changed. Never will Goodyear tires be lowered in grade, no matter what rubber costs.

Today our prices are the same as in June. Practically every standard tire today sells for more than Goodyears. Some sell immensely higher.

Don't pay those extra prices. Don't run the risk of under-grade rubber.

There were always reasons for buying Goodyear tires, resistless to men who knew them. Today there are new reasons—compelling reasons—due to this fortunate purchase of rubber.

Get the full benefit. Your dealer will sell you Goodyear tires—built as we always built them—at the prices he charged in June.

The proper lubrication of any piece of machinery is very essential for long life and lack of trouble.

Hyatt Roller Bearings are self-oiling, as the lubricant is carried in the hollow center of the rollers and distributed over the entire bearing surface through the spiral slots that alternate right and left.

This is one reason why Hyatt Quiet Bearings give a maximum of service with a minimum of attention from the user.

Two books, one about motor car bearings in general for prospective purchasers, the other for automobile owners, will be sent on request.

RAYFIELD CARBURETORS

Your carburetor is the most important part of your car, just as vital as the lungs and heart to a man.

A Rayfield carburetor will bring out the best that is in a car, but with a poor carburetor even a splendid motor will act indifferently.

A Rayfield Will Give You

More power—a faster getaway—more speed—more flexibility—more mileage from every gallon of gasoline, 10% to 50% is our guarantee. Moreover, you get these advantages at the same time and not one at the sacrifice of another.

Put a Rayfield on your car and not only get your gasoline bills down to reason, but find out how good your own car really is.

No matter what the car, nor what the carburetor on it, the Rayfield Model G will not fail to give you better service than you are getting now.

Our branch can put a Rayfield on your car in a few hours, or it can be installed or adjusted by your own garage man.

More Great Movements of Fall Merchandise Will Open Monday

And still the good things pour in from manufacturers who have been co-operating in our great Million Dollar Distribution of Merchandise.

All this past week we have been taking over huge lots of splendid goods and making them ready for sale.

There is a fascination about an event like this, the long hours of work and planning, getting the merchandise together, unpacking it, putting it on display, then the advertising and the quick response of the public.

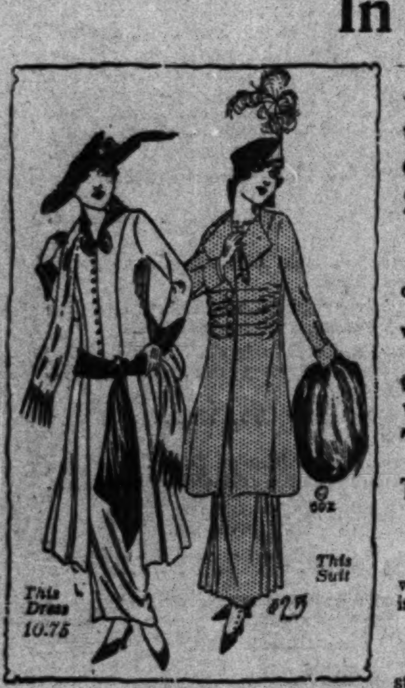
Women all over this city who have been watching the stirring events of the past two weeks will be here to share in these fine offerings tomorrow.

If Benjamin Franklin Had Written This Advertisement, It Probably Would Have Been But One Sentence:—

"A Word to the Wise Is Sufficient." Wise Women, Therefore, Will Take Note.

A Sale of Women's Autumn Suits at $15 & $25

In Grades Ranging from $20 up to $35



Fourth Floor.

Determined to do something out of the ordinary to begin the Autumn season, we entered into an agreement a month ago with two of our best suit manufacturers to purchase a number of suits (in the cloth), to be ready early in September.

One manufacturer agreed to make—

Suits of Real $30 and $35 Grades Which We Can Sell at $25.

These include, broadcloths in the long basque coat models with high velvet collars and pleated skirts. Fine worsted poplins of a very high grade, tailored with fancy designed long coats. All $25.

The other manufacturer worked on

Suits of Real $20 and $25 Grades Which We Can Sell at $15.

These suits include diagonals, cheviots and worsteds, tailored in the full 45 inch coats, satin lined to the waist, velvet collars and cuffs. Also medium length coats for women who are inclined to stoutness. All $15.

In both instances we selected the materials in the bolt, and insisted upon certain specifications as to style, tailoring, linings and finish. If these suits do not take the city by storm then we will miss our guess.

Two Fine Groups of Dresses at $10.75 and $12.50

The Dresses at $10.75 are in Basque Style, Made up in Fine Wool Crepes.
(See Picture)

Black, Hague blue, green, navy and brown. Long waisted basque style, with silk collar and cuffs. Skirt is box pleated. Women's and misses' sizes, $10.75.

Steamer Rug Coats at $7.50

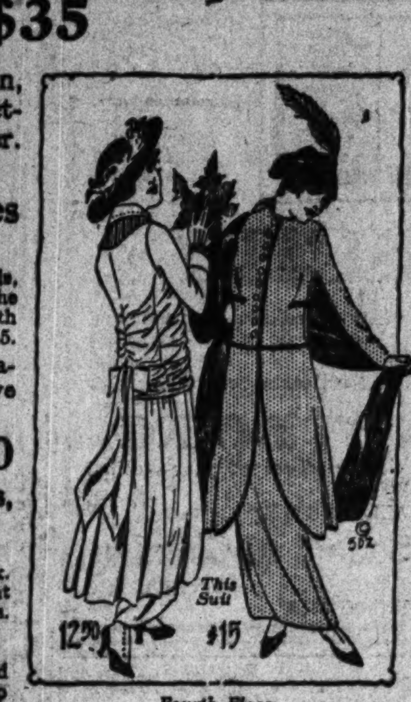
Two styles in navy, oxford and brown, with velvet storm collar or long shawl, edges bound in broadcloth, sizes for women and misses, $7.50.

The Dresses at $12.50 are in Silk Poplins, Made up in Latest Autumn Models.
(See Picture)

Russian green, Copenhagen, navy blue and black. Very distinguished models, showing the gathered front and back. Silk and organdie collars, and other styles.

Long Diagonal Coats at $13.50

These coats are satin lined full length. Inlaid velvet collars, set-in sleeves, fancy cuffs, all sizes up to 46. All $13.50.



Fourth Floor.

300 Ostrich Trimmed Hats at $5

These Hats are $6.75 to $8.75 models. They are of Lyon's Velvets, Salt's Velvets, Croise Velvets, Velour de Nord and Silk Plush—trimmed with ostrich aigrettes, bands and plumes. Just 300 in the lot, and we shall sell them all at five dollars each.

It will not surprise us in the least if these hats are taken before twelve o'clock noon, on Monday. Hence it is only fair to warn our customers that only those who come promptly will be likely to share in this sale.

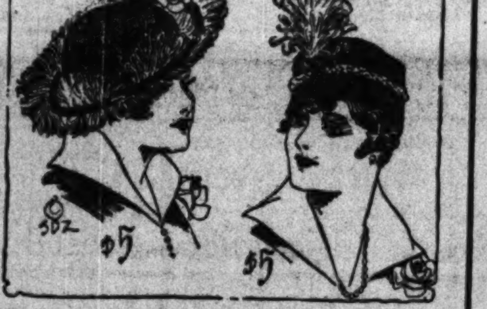
But that is not all. Here are—

1,500 Velvet Hats (Untrimmed) at $1 Each

A manufacturer in a hurry for early business let us have these 1,500 hats. Price was secondary with him. "Here, take these hats, which ordinarily retail for $1.50 to $2, and sell them for $1." There are sailors, continentals, turbans and dress shapes, all in erect pile black velvet.

3,000 Fancy Feathers, 50c Regular 95c to $1.95 Qualities

Among them are black peacock plumage, imitation paradise and aigrettes, cassowary plumage and ostrich feathers, all at 50c.



Great Purchases of Wall Papers

As a Result of the War

400 HIGH-GRADE TRUNKS

Manufactured for S. Clarke & Co., Bowling Green Lane, London, England, Come to Rothschild s to Be Sold

Here is the story:

S. Clarke & Co., of London, England, ordered these trunks of Goldsmith & Son, Newark, N. J., makers of the famous "Neverbreak" trunks.

When the time came to ship them war had broken out, and the order was canceled by cable.

The trunks were offered to us at a sharp price-concession. We bought them all—400 in the lot.

The Cablegram Tells the Story:

Executives and Managers.

Some Progressive Concern Can Use My Services to Advantage.

For the past seven years I have been in the sales department of two of the leading advertising specialty houses in the United States—concerns with a capital of $1,000,000, and each employing over 100 traveling salesmen and selling over a million dollar worth of goods. The past three years I have been and am now assistant sales manager, and have shown that I can pick live ones, make them work, keep them good natured, loyal, and enthusiastic.

I can write an excellent letter—intelligent, forceful, reasonable, and convincing—and correctly constructed. I am a hard worker—like to work, and can get through it quickly and handle lots of it.

I prefer something along the line of my present connection, or something in the advertising, publishing, or printing business, as I am more familiar with those lines; however, I can quickly adapt myself to any line, particularly the selling or advertising end. I am married, 40 years of age—look younger and feel even younger than that. I haven't a lazy bone in my body. Am absolutely dependable.

If you are a really big man and want efficient help, you can make a good profit off my services. Let me talk to you, and if you'll tell me what kind of a man you need, I'll tell you honestly whether I am the man and satisfy you that I am right. Address E O 33, Tribune.

Most Beautiful
Suburban and City House Combined
in All Chicago.

This beautiful home is located within the city limits, 30 minutes from the loop, convenient to station on the Ravenswood branch of the N. W. "L."

The house is finest yellow pressed brick, red tile roof, and very attractive design, from a Moorish palace in Granada, Spain.

Large living room, dining room, butler's pantry, kitchen, sewing room, and servant's dining room on first floor; 4 large bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, and den or library on second floor; large ballroom, with servants' rooms and bath on third floor; finished in hardwood throughout; hot water heat.

The grounds occupy over city block and are embellished with beautiful lawn, trees, shrubs, and flowers. There is also a garage and an up to date yellow pressed brick tile roof chicken house on premises.

This property can be bought at a great sacrifice on account of owner closing out business, and is an ideal spot for any one wishing a quiet and restful place, free from factories and steam railroads, but with all city conveniences and where the land value within seven years will be worth more than the purchase price of the house and grounds today.

FOR SALE—HIGH LAKE TOWNSITE.

Success is largely due to foresight. Success is plainly visible today to the homeseeker or investor at High Lake. Get busy today, not tomorrow, not next month or next year. Today is the opportune time. High Lake is the place. One look will satisfy you that there is nothing else comparable in the way of country homesites or business chances. Its unsurpassed location, beautiful healthful surroundings, high altitude, etc., presage an unprecedented demand for this property and materially higher prices.

Send for booklet and plat and arrange to go out and make a personal inspection. Reasonable prices, convenient terms.

America Mobilizing in Agriculture.

[Private car excursions Tuesdays, Sept. 15 and Oct. 6.]

ALL AGREE that the European war will cause a great demand and general advance in price for products of America's farms. Need of bread by the warring nations will find the way to get grain from our farms. For years following such a war these nations must come to us for our surplus food. Their agriculture will be handicapped, as its labor must be done principally by women, old men, and surviving soldiers minus an eye, hand, or foot. Although this war is a curse upon civilization, it can't help but put this country far ahead if we remain neutral.

THE EXPORTS of wheat and flour have already risen to extraordinary proportions. We can spare 325,000,000 bushels out of this year's crop without inconvenience. 30,000,000 pounds of wool have been bought in the Boston market on rising prices since the war broke out. One can hardly mention a necessity to sustain life for which our markets will not be stimulated by foreign orders. The destruction and expense of the war is estimated at $40,000,000 per day. From present indications our Michigan beans and potatoes will advance in price beyond all records.

AMERICA IS MOBILIZING in agriculture. About 20% more boys have just started in at the fall terms of agricultural colleges the country over than ever before. No other nation in the world is educating her farmers so rapidly and so thoroughly. Our Federal Department of Agriculture is already the finest in the world.

DIVIDENDS ON MANY STOCKS have stopped temporarily. Industrial securities have been shaken to their foundations. Last week the Pullman shops closed down completely and threw 14,000 men out of work. There is no panic, but the great tide of America's wealth for investment is pouring into the channel of real estate and farm land. Never have I known a more earnest and lively land seeking movement than right now. My excursions show it. Twice in succession I have had to use two special cars to accommodate the people, and there will be as many or more on September 15.

SPACE permits only a reference here to the opportunities in agriculture offered in the Swigart Tract of land in Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford Counties, Michigan. It is such a far reaching subject that I have issued a big 72-page book with 115 photographic illustrations to tell you about our resources, crops, soils, water supplies, climate, rainfall, seasons, live stock, roads, towns, class of settlers, and progress being made. The book is indexed and treats of 100 different questions you want to know about. Send for this book or call for it and a large map.

THE MARCH to the Swigart Tract is on. Get into the ranks with the 2,000 satisfied customers who are backing our big project with their money, their muscle, and their brains. Ours is a co-operative plan. After your contract is partly paid, you are insured for the balance. We maintain a corps of farming instructors on the lands, and they regularly visit every farmer. We operate demonstration farms, have a seed supplying arrangement, and are developing one of the largest apple orchards in the country. There are many other features that make for a united and well directed effort for progress in this district, with which I shall be actively associated for many years to come. A down payment now of $10 to $50 will start you towards the ownership of a 40 acre farm, with payments as low as $5 to $10 per month, or annual terms if preferred. For you to delay means that you are narrowing your chances, and the land will cost you more.

MY NEXT PRIVATE EXCURSIONS will be Tuesdays, September 15 and October 6, by the P. M. R. R., leaving my offices at 11:30 a. m. Fare $8.30 round trip, to Wellston, rebated on purchase. You get back to Chicago at 7:20 a. m. Thursday or Friday of the same week. Automobiles and guides furnished free. Offices remain open Saturday afternoons and Monday evenings.

Southeastern Oklahoma.

Letter received from L. E. Titus, 1912 Dayton-st., by A. T. Steinel, General Emigration Agent of the Rock Island Road, La Salle-st. Station:

Dear Sir: I desire briefly to give you my opinion in regard to what I found in reference to the Indian lands in Southeastern Oklahoma, that are to be sold beginning Nov. 3d to 12th and the 16th to Dec. 2d, that might be helpful to those who desire to take up some of these lands. I called at Lawrence Heyworth's office, Land Dept., Room 600 Harvester Bldg., Chicago, Ill., to make inquiries of the lands and the country in general, and after the interview a number of my friends who were also interested persuaded me to go out and look the ground over before investing, which I did.

I took the Rock Island Road, and made my stopping point at McAlester, as that was more centrally located. I went over a number of these tracts of timber and grazing lands, also the timber and agricultural lands, and the prairie lands, and found them to be better than were represented to me and would compare favorably with farming land in Illinois.

I have since returned and have filed my application for 320 acres with Lawrence Heyworth, knowing them to be absolutely responsible.

I called at their office last Saturday and told them the only thing that I would make an exception to was that they did not represent it one-half as good as it is. My friends are also filing their applications, and to those who are interested I can heartily recommend "it's the opportunity of a lifetime for them to get rich agricultural land at a very low price." Yours very truly, L. E. TITUS, 1912 Dayton-st., Chicago.

Rainfall, 40 to 50 inches yearly.
Appraised at $1.50 to $3.00 an acre.
Value of these lands many times the appraised value.
We locate, inspect, and buy through power of attorney at sale, charging fee per acre.
No taxes for three years.
Residence not necessary.
Terms: ¼ cash, balance 1, 2, and 3 years at 5%.
File your applications at once, as we locate by number, according to order in which they are received at Lawrence Heyworth's Real Estate Office, Indian Reserve Dept., Room 600 Harvester Bldg., cor. Harrison-st. and Michigan-av.

INVESTMENT & COLONIZATION Companies.

Wanting land, timber, and mineral tracts of 5,000 to 500,000 acres in the U. S. and Canadian provinces, write us. All these lands will double in value after the close of the present European war. Our prices now are low—easy terms of sale. We have large holdings and can supply our clientele. Tell us what you want—we have it.

PENINSULAR LAND & TIMBER CO.,
Suite 923 Stock Exchange Bldg.,
Chicago, Ill.

INVESTMENT—DO YOU REALIZE THAT the European war has caused the banks to conserve and has tended to delude the investing public into waiting for more certain times? Do you realize that this year's crop of wheat, corn, oats, barley, and hay alone show a gain of six hundred and twenty-one million dollars over the crops of last year? Do you not realize that this alone will make prosperity certain and that when prosperity is here the money you could have invested now will not do half as much for you? Now is the time for you to get your money working. We cannot afford to sacrifice our laboriously built-up business prospects with investment sharks whose idea of justice to themselves is injustice to others, but we are willing to give a legitimate investor of $100 or more an opportunity never before equaled. A safe investment on a basis of 20% of the real value; a 500% profit. Let us prove it to you. Address P S 258, Tribune.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been entirely taken apart, each part examined, and if necessary replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values, these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

READ THIS

We are not offering for sale any cars with the idea in mind of getting more than they are worth, but are putting them on the market at a price that means good value to the purchaser, believing, in so doing, that a satisfied customer is worth more than all the advertising in the world. Therefore, if you are looking for a used car that is guaranteed to be right in every respect, look over this list, pick out what you like, and let us demonstrate its condition to you; and if terms will be of any assistance to you, we can grant same to you without any additional being added to the price. The following is only a partial list of cars in stock:

1913 Cole, 40	$1,000	1912 Knox	800

Are You a Regular Reader of
The Daily Tribune?

Two hundred thousand of you who read The Sunday Tribune every week are not regular readers of The Daily Tribune as well. This is shown by our circulation figures, which are about that much larger on The Sunday than on The Daily.

Most of you two hundred thousand people who read The Sunday and not The Daily Tribune live a considerable distance away from Chicago and probably depend upon a daily paper from some city nearer to you than Chicago, because you receive this daily paper sooner than you would receive ours.

While The Daily Tribune is pre-eminent among the newspapers of the world in its news service, this service is by no means all that The Daily Tribune renders. If you are not content to wait for the world-famed news service of The Daily Tribune, at least the following exclusive features, outside of what is generally termed news, are well worth your attention:

Dr. W. A. Evans - - -	How To Keep Well
La Marquise de Fontenoy -	Foreign Gossip
B. L. T. - - - - - -	A Line o' Type or Two
Marion Harland - - -	Housekeeping Helps
Bessie Ascough - - -	Fashions
Jane Eddington - - -	Economical Housekeeping
Doris Blake - - - -	Help to Lovers
Lillian Russell - - -	Beauty and Health

Also News and Views of Sports, Society, Real Estate, Financial, Music, Theaters and Movies.

In addition to the news of the European War furnished to The Tribune by the Associated Press, The London Times, The New York World and The New York Sun, we have three special, exclusive correspondents on the way to the very scene of action, from whose pens can be expected cables and letters that will not appear in any other newspaper. James O'Donnell Bennett has already sent three cables from Brussels; Joseph Medill Patterson is on the way to join the German army and John T. McCutcheon is en route to join the French army.

The store news contained in The Daily Tribune's display ads and the opportunities in the Want Ads should not be overlooked by anyone. The Tribune prints more clean, high-class advertising than any other newspaper in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis or Boston. To know where, when and what to buy is very necessary just now.

So, if you are not a regular subscriber to The Daily Tribune, consult the subscription rates printed in the paper you now hold in your hand and send in your order NOW.

Running a City as a Business Enterprise

By Henry M. Waite

City Manager of Dayton, Ohio

DAYTON—conservative and factionally governed for many years—has adopted the most advanced charter ever presented to an American city. Government by deficit is the best reason for the change in administration—annual expenditures in excess of revenues, inadequate control over employes, excessive cost of city supplies and operations, failure of contracts for service to conform to specifications, and unreadiness of city officers to undertake active leadership for the welfare of the community. Dayton had had a government sterile of all but the most commonplace benefits—due in some measure to official incompetence, but in a larger way to long neglect of their duty on the part of its citizens.

In May, 1913, the people, by an overwhelming majority, nominated fifteen candidates for a New Charter Commission, and in September the City Manager Plan, under a new charter, was adopted. The Commission organized soon after election and as its first step, selected the City Manager, who in turn named the Directors of the several departments in the city as governed by the charter, these appointments being confirmed by the Commission. The City Manager Administration began its official task January 1, 1913. The people are manifesting an almost unbelievable amount of interest in the affairs of their city government and apparently are entirely satisfied with the results shown thus far.

The business form of government is proving much less expensive because the Manager is empowered and has chosen men for their efficiency only. This allows business methods to be established and savings made by reducing forces; and business methods substituted in the purchase of materials, and in the consolidation of the government into five departments—Service, Safety, Welfare, Finance and Law.

The organization of the Department of Finance in particular has been perfected and is as thorough, as efficient and as up-to-date as the best accounting system in any private manufacturing corporation. In keeping with this advance in the Finance Department, all other departments are being organized. There is, everywhere in the city service, that spirit of co-operation and earnest desire to serve the people, which was not universally evident in the past.

BEFORE a city is ready to consider the question of a change in government, the citizens should be given an opportunity to know many of the facts concerning their own city, which can be accomplished only through an efficient organization of municipal experts. I refer to such an organization as the Bureau of Municipal Research which operated in Dayton for a year before any effort at a charter-revision campaign was even considered.

This Bureau made detailed investigation and surveys of all city departments, thereby furnishing material which served as a basis upon which to build the new charter, also material necessary for publicity purposes during the charter campaign.

The charter commissioners are thoroughly imbued with the idea that inefficient government is due to badness of methods rather than badness of men; and as remedies have promulgated a purchasing department, the granting of franchises, public improvements and other subjects. Only the five departments mentioned are necessary to perform every duty that is essential in making the city up-to-date in every respect.

THE City Manager, as the administrative head of the government, appoints and fixes salaries of his immediate subordinates including the principal departmental and sub-departmental heads and their deputies, and is personally responsible for the entire administration. The Manager is empowered to employ and dismiss such of his employes as he desires, and to stipulate such compensation as he deems necessary. In this instance civil service clauses are incorporated, which provide examinations to determine persons eligible for appointment. However, it is further provided that the Manager, in consultation with the chief examiner, shall make the designations for appointment from the entire eligible list, rather than from the three highest.

THE City Manager Government is pledged to keep its expenses from exceeding the public revenues. It has inaugurated the purchasing of all city supplies by a central purchasing agent, a civic workers' league to secure the co-operation of children in a city-wide clean up, a city complaint station to act on complaints of every character. The collection of rubbish has been resumed after a year of inaction throughout the city. Adequate clothing, shoes, socks, etc., are now supplied to prisoners in the workhouse. Physicians are rendering gratuitous service to those unable to pay. Women members of the Greater Dayton Association are organized to raise funds for a survey of dependency, delinquency and kindred problems. Dayton now has efficient control of communicable diseases, and a clean milk supply. A free legal aid bureau has been formed to give advice to citizens unable to employ an attorney; and an efficient policewomen service has been inaugurated, among other things.

Such is the program being successfully carried out by the new administration in creating a new Dayton, purged of political influence. The success of this city in having an honest and able government is an object lesson to other incorporated communities as to how they can run their towns and cities by strictly business methods.

Tabs on the Famous

By Fred C. Kelly

ALTHOUGH 66 years of age, Francis Griffith Newlands, of Nevada, is one of the spryest of United States Senators. All through the summer months he looks forward to winter with its snow and sleet, so that he can take his sled and go out on the whiteclad hillsides and coast. He would rather coast down hill with his grandchildren than to skate on thin ice in the White House.

Senator Works, of California, never liked the study of mathematics in his school days. Arithmetic used to make his life a burden to him. One afternoon as he was riding home on the car, he happened to get a seat next to a little chap who was taking home some schoolbooks for study. One was an arithmetic.

"Do you like arithmetic?" asked the Senator, sympathetically.

"Naw, I hate it," replied the boy.

"Put her there," suggested Works, offering his hand.

Representative Lee, of Pennsylvania, was a blacksmith, champion boxer, wrestler, swimmer and skater before entering Congress. As if his record might otherwise be too commonplace, Lee, when three years old was picked up by detectives for the lost Charlie Ross, and held until he could prove an alibi. That incident gave rise to a nickname that has clung to him ever since. Nearly all his mail from the folks back in his district comes addressed to "Ross" Lee.

Former Senator Aldrich used to hold the record for disregard of custom and the casual amenities in the matter of replying to letters. Sometimes he wouldn't even bother to open his mail for days at a time. And it made no difference if the mail happened to include invitations to dinner or other propositions calling for an immediate reply. One day a friend in Providence wrote to Aldrich asking for an appointment to talk over a number of important matters of mutual concern. No reply from Aldrich. The friend then sent a telegram. Now, a wire message usually got attention even from Aldrich and in a few hours the Providence man got word to come ahead. When he reached Aldrich's library, the man saw his letter lying on the table unopened.

"You haven't opened my letter," he remarked.

"No," yawned Aldrich, "I haven't opened any mail for nearly a week."

Representative Ashbrook, of Ohio, has a mania for collecting rare coins. He maintains an index showing the location of practically every rare coin in the country, and full information concerning same, a good deal like the Bertillon records of criminals kept by the police. Ashbrook remarked one day that he wished Congress would adjourn so that he could go to a point in Tennessee.

"There's a man there with an 1804 dollar," he explained.

"Couldn't you buy it by mail?" he was asked.

"I don't want to buy it," says Ashbrook. "I've got one. I just want to look at it."

Senator Burton, of Ohio, who is a bachelor, was surprised to learn a while ago that a diamond solitaire comprises an engagement ring, and a plain gold circlet a wedding ring. He thought it was just the other way, because it seemed to him no more than common logic that the more valuable ring should be reserved for the more important event.

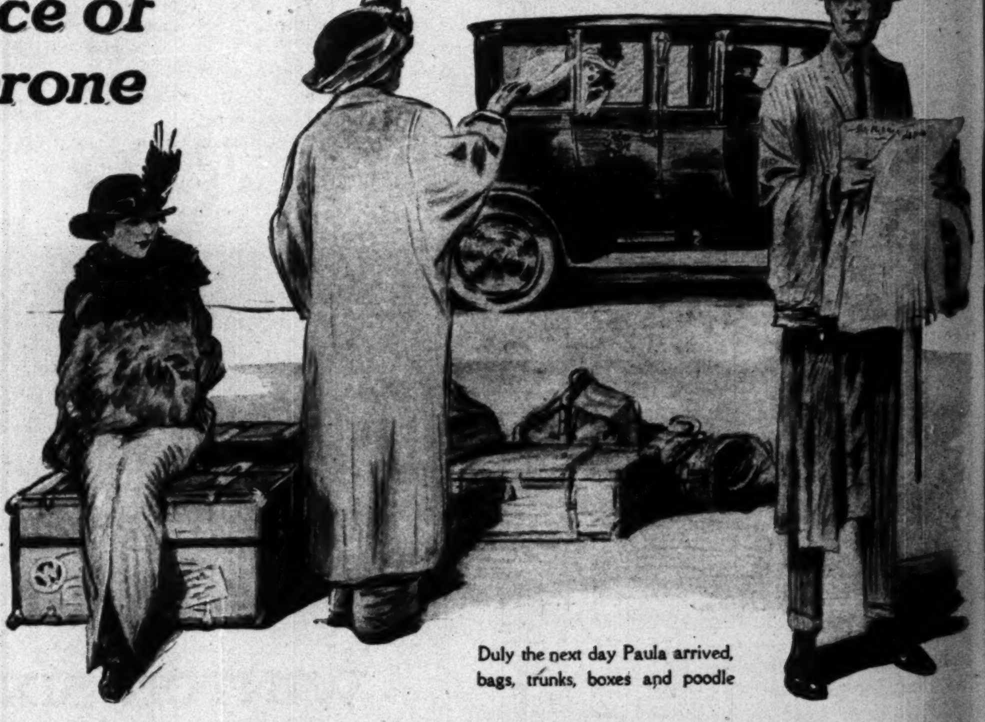
The Strategy of Paula

By Ethel Watts Mumford

ILLUSTRATIONS BY L. T. DRESSER

A Second Experience of Cupid and the Chaperone



Duly the next day Paula arrived, bags, trunks, boxes and poodle

LITTLE MRS. CHALLONER sighed thoughtfully. The first chapter of her career as a chaperone had closed abruptly with the high-handed high-sea marriage of her charge. That her losing struggle against Cupid should have met with applause was wholly a fortuitous accident. Cupid had laughed right in her face, as from time immemorable he has laughed at locksmiths and others of the Guild of Restraint. And now her struggle with the little pink god was to be resumed — the prize, in this case, to be Paula Folsome. Mrs. Folsome and her elder daughter still lingered in Paris. Paula had been permitted to remain with friends in Harley Street until Mrs. Challoner could pick her up on her arrival in London.

In her grey and pink suite in the Savoy, the chaperone was now savoring a few moments of freedom from responsibility. Her recent ward and the ward's newly acquired husband on the floor below were no longer vital concerns of hers; rather an amusing diversion.

The telephone sounded. Taking down the receiver she acknowledged the "Are you there?" which always made her feel intensely Englandy.

"Lady Cuthbridge to see you, Madame."

"Oh," exclaimed Mrs. Challoner. "Ask her to come up."

An awed voice replied, after a moment, that "her ladyship would be conducted at once to the apartment."

"Vi, you dear! I'm so glad to see you!" cried Mrs. Challoner after a breathless exchange of greetings, "but who in the world told you I was here?"

Lady Cuthbridge laughed.

"'Peerage Pete,' of course, the modern Sam Pepeys, saw you last night — and all London knew by ten o'clock this morning. But, my dear!" — she pronounced it de-ah — "it's so good to see you! We'd all heard such sad gossip, we began to fear we weren't to lay eyes on you this season."

Mrs. Challoner's eyes darkened. "Vi," she said, "all the awful things you heard are perfectly true. I'm a penniless widow, chaperoning for a living; — see how white my hair has turned! — and I've got a duck of a little millionairess to seize upon tomorrow; while right in this hotel is another who eloped the moment I turned my back. Oh, I'm an unqualified success!" She laughed ruefully.

VIOLA CUTHBRIDGE'S fine eyes drew together in a quaint furry squint. "A duck of a millionairess, you say? Tell me something about her. Is she — er — well, a probable sort of young person?"

"Ra — ther!" exclaimed Mrs. Challoner. "A beauty, and well born, too — snobette, that you are! And as for money! — I'm too stupid to think in so many figures."

Lady Vi's expression became positively conspiratorial. "Cyril," she said, and paused.

"Mrs. Folsome is ambitious," Mrs. Challoner remarked, looking anywhere but at her visitor. "In fact, she is rather counting on me to provide the entrée where — such a —"

"Exactly," nodded Lady Cuthbridge. "And I'll not conceal from you, that Cyril has got to do something — soon. The old place is shockingly run down — and fancy! he had to let the Morayshire shooting last year. Cuthbridge won't allow me to give Cyril a 'leg up'; says he's old enough to take care of himself, which he is." After which burst of confidence she paused, opened her gold bag and administered a fresh coat of powder to her aristocratic nose.

"I haven't met Cyril, you know; he was in India all the time," said Mrs. Challoner. "What's he like?"

"Oh, goodish looking chap," his sister admitted. "Well set-up, sort of general yellowish color, like all of us Middletons — uppish a bit, swears that young things bore him. Oh, we shall have to snare him, my dear. I say! can't you bring Miss — ah — Folsome, over to Cuthbridge House tomorrow for tea? I'll have Cyril there. I've asked Diana DeMall and Evelyn Manners. Cyril likes Diana, but poor dear, she's got to marry money, too. Yes," judicially, "if this millionairess ducky of yours will do at all ——" her mellow voice trailed into silence, as she arose from the settee with languid grace. "Tomorrow, then, Jeanne, my love, at five — and the golden gosling — c'est entendue?"

"This very afternoon," affirmed Mrs. Challoner, "the gosling shall be rounded up. Good-bye, Vi, dear."

The door closed upon Lady Cuthbridge's mauve draperies, and Mrs. Challoner executed a joyous pas seul.

Later that afternoon she found herself before the neat door of a neat house in Harley Street. She was ushered into a heavily Victorian sitting-room, and left to contemplate its ponderous mahogany and virtuous gloom. The tortured volutes of a marble-topped console had hypnotized her attention, when a slight sound aroused her. Standing between the dark tapestry curtains at the door was Paula Folsome. There seemed something spirit-like in the sudden appearance of the girl. She was so airy, so dainty; Rosetti might have painted her; yet his full throated, rose-mouthed blessed damozels seemed as passion flowers beside this lily maid. Burne-Jones might have caught her elfin beauty, yet his opaque browns and blues could never have transferred to canvas her delicate radiance of color. The soft oval of her face had the golden pink of the Killarney rose. Her wide grey eyes were changeful as the sea — now green, now blue. Her hair, brown and gold and bronze all at once, rippled about her ears in virginal bandeaux.

MRS. CHALLONER gave a little gasp of admiration. "Why, Paula!" she exclaimed, "I didn't know you were there; you quite startled me!"

The girl advanced smiling. She had correctly interpreted the gasp, and was pleased.

"It's so nice of you to come," she said. "Mrs. Mortimer has been longing to meet you — and here she is."

The curtains parted once more to admit an effusively cordial little woman, who had evidently found her ideal mate in a rising young doctor and her perfect setting in Harley Street Victorianism.

"So you've come to steal Paula," she bubbled. "And I shall be quite lost without her. The little witch has Dr. Mortimer and me quite at her feet, you know."

Mrs. Challoner made just the proper response, both of regret and of tempered pleasure; and presently tea was served from a colossal silver service that taxed the strength both of the maid and the tea wagon. The wicker "curate" groaned under its load of large, well-browned buns, toast, muffins, tea cakes and jam — a feast at once Victorian and gargantuan. Mrs. Challoner arose as soon as politeness permitted, and made her adieux.

"I shall expect you, then, Paula, tomorrow morning — or, better still, I'll come for you. I'd ask Mrs. Mortimer to tea with us, but I've made engagements. Perhaps a little later in the week, then — charmed, I'm sure — and au revoir."

Once in the open air she gave a sigh of relief. The combined weight of rosewood, mahogany, silver, and the Late Lamented Queen Victoria's substantial shadow, seemed to be lifted at once from her shoulders and her spirit.

DULY the next day Paula arrived, bags, trunks, boxes and Maltese poodle. Mrs. Challoner was more and more captivated. "Probable young person," indeed! Just let Vi see for herself!

At the appointed hour the wrought iron gates of Cuthbridge House opened to admit them. Paula looked with grave delight at the formal garden that stretched between the smoke-darkened facade of the mansion, and the high gray wall that defied rabble curiosity. She seemed perfectly at ease in the pompous presence of a powdered footman, and quite at home in the great resounding drawing-room they crossed, before reaching the cosy little yellow and white salon, where Lady Cuthbridge entertained her intimates. Four or five girls were lounging in the comfortable, somewhat worn Empire chairs. A tulipwood table that would have graced the Musée des meubles, bore a slim, Georgian tea service and cups of white eggshell porcelain. Without effort Paula Folsome fell into the new groove. She was simple, charming, naive, without being awkward. Lady Cuthbridge gave the chaperone a glance of meaning.

"Isn't it too provoking," she exclaimed, "Cyril went back on us, and Captain Maglan, too. Something's going on up the river."

"Or somebody," interjected The Honorable Evelyn Manners.

"Oh, no!" Lady Cuthbridge hurried to explain. "It's the semi-annual something or other of the Seventeenth Lancers." She helped herself to a wafer, signing to the very large footman to place the very small cakes within reach, and retire. The Honorable Diana, a tall girl, with the physique of a guardsman, laughed mirthlessly.

"Vi, dear, what's the use! The men won't follow us — that's all., Which explains so many militant suffragettes in 'Merry' England. By the way, did you see the last Pankhurst manifesto?"

The manless argument became heated, and it was growing late when the party separated.

"She's perfect," Lady Cuthbridge murmured to Mrs. Challoner, "and so alive, my dear. Now, if only — I'll arrange for Cyril and tea on the Terrace tomorrow."

The morrow and Lady Cuthbridge produced the promised tea, and an elderly representative from Yorkshire. Paula was enabled to gaze with admiration at both of these national exhibits, and also at the stately river and the historic Houses of Parliament from the exclusive vantage of its own Terrace

—but of Cyril's manly attractions naught was to be seen. He had executed a masterly retreat, and the attacking party, finding nothing to attack, retired in confusion.

"Jeanne," wailed the match-making conspirator, "I forbid you to let anyone else see the bewitching treasure."

"My dear," grieved Mrs. Challoner, sympathetically responsive, "you needn't worry. Nobody seems to be able to rope a really eligible man these days. Bee Benton says they've all emigrated."

The conversation took place the following day in the pink and gray salon of confidences.

"Which prompts one to inquire," observed Lady Cuthbridge, "where is the treasure today?"

"Off with a schoolmate, my dear, a Mrs. Hasbrook, who is living at Victoria Mansions, and of whom she'd been seeing a great deal before I came. Paula asked me for permission to spend the day with her, motoring; so I let her go. Tomorrow we are down to Maidenhead for the day — at the Gorham-Wells."

Lady Viola looked up eagerly.

"Now don't let Paula get interested in Budge Wells; Cyril simply must ——"

A knock at the door interrupted the sentence, and the smiling subject of discussion appeared, her eyes shining, her crinkly tri-colored hair blown in tendrils from under the pink mushroom of her motor bonnet.

"Oh, such fun!" she exclaimed. "Such a good time — twelve of us in three motors — and we went, and went, and had luncheon at such a wonderful old inn. And Mabel has asked me to punt with her tomorrow. A friend of hers is going to show us how. You don't mind, do you, Mrs. Challoner?"

"But, my dear," Mrs. Challoner objected, "you mustn't make positive engagements without consulting me. I'm afraid, Paula, you will have to telephone and decline. There are other plans, you see."

The girl looked up, a shade of disappointment in her face; but it passed like the shadow of a summer cloud, and she laughed quickly: "Oh, well, all right. I'll — I'll tell them now. You'll excuse me." And leaving the two conspirators to their chat she entered her room.

Lady Cuthbridge arose. "It's too provoking!" she exclaimed. "Nothing could be more suitable for Cyril — and I can't get hold of him; he won't listen. Aren't men stupid, though!"

LADY CUTHBRIDGE sighed, opened her lips as if to say something further, closed them again with a think-better-of-it expression, and prepared to leave. Mrs. Challoner accompanied her to the elevator, and returned to find Paula in negligee, extended full length on the settee.

"Mabel is such a pretty girl," chatted Paula; "and she's so popular. She always has crowds of men around her. There were at least a dozen more for tea — waiting till we came home. Think of that!"

"Indeed," said Mrs. Challoner, piqued. The remark seemed a reflection, but the girl continued ingenuously: "And there was a perfectly splendid chap, named 'Bim.' I liked him best of all. I was in his car with Mabel and a Mr. Wroxham."

"Wroxham?" murmured Mrs. Challoner. "The Wroxhams of Surray?"

Paula nodded. "I suppose so. He and Bim are forever chivvying each other about Surray and Yorkshire."

"A splendid family, the Wroxhams," observed the elder woman approvingly. "That's the Earl of Mordon's family name, you know."

Paula, it seemed, did not know, but appeared duly impressed.

"What is Bim's name?" Mrs. Challoner queried.

"They just call him Bim," the girl replied, a furtive smile hovering about her eyes.

"Goodness!" exclaimed Mrs. Challoner, "now I know what became of the Mona Lisa. She wasn't stolen — you just got up and walked out of the Louvre, my dear."

• • • • • • •

The gardens of Villa Sylvia were terraced to the edge of the river. On the end of the little dock, beside which a motor launch, a shell, a punt and a canoe internatioally fraternized, stood Paula. Her gown of cornflower colors and her floppy hat laden with forget-me-nots, toned softly to the dusty azure of the sky, and the limpid blue of the Thames — but all these Olympian tones paled to wanness beside the sapphire of her eyes. So thought the young man seated in the punt, as he gazed up at Paula in fascinated silence, while an unheeded damsel in pink laughed and chatted at his side.

"Why, Mabel!" Paula exclaimed. "Isn't this funny, running across you here!"

"Funny nothing," gurgled the girl in the punt, her voice, though carefully anglicized, ringing with unmistakable over-sea tones. "You and Bim had it framed. He dragged me up here just for a sight of you; and, of course, by chance you wander picturesquely to the landing at 4:15 precisely — Oh, I know."

BIM flushed till his deeply tanned face became the color of mahogany, contrasting oddly with the sun-burned gold of his hair. Paula lowered her eyes and smiled the smile of Da Vinci's lost love, as she murmured, "You are horrid! Don't you know you might make me self-conscious?"

"You!" exclaimed the vision in pink, "not on your life! By the way, why don't you both lunch with me day after tomorrow, you and Bim? I take my music lesson at twelve, so make it half after one; and don't either of you say I'm not amiable."

"I'd love to," said Paula, still with lowered eyes. "I suppose Mr. Wroxham will be there?"

Bim made a curious throaty noise that might be variously interpreted, while Mabel slowly lowered a flawless left lid over a dewy hazel orb.

"If you wish, Paula, dear, — of course."

Paula's smile became more cryptic. "If Mrs. ——— if my chaperone hasn't made other engagements for me, I'll be delighted."

"All right, then," laughed Mabel with a flourish of her parasol. "That's a go. And now, Bim, having so bounteously feasted your eyes, kindly punt me back. I've got to be at V. M. by six, you know."

The man reluctantly obeyed. Not, however, before he managed to articulate, "May I come for you tomorrow, Miss Folsome?"

Paula hesitated. "I'll telephone," she called. "I don't know, of course."

"Oh, nonsense!" exclaimed Mabel. "Bim will bring you, that's settled."

The eddies caught the punt and swung it out into the current. The tall, athletic figure of the man silhouetted sharply, as he vigorously plunged the pole and sent the little craft forward, not, however, before turning to look back with a world of reluctance in his eyes.

"Why, Paula!" It was Mrs. Challoner's voice. "Who — who have you been talking to?"

"That's Mabel Hasbrook," said Paula. "Isn't she pretty?"

Mrs. Challoner shifted her parasol, and gazed with interest. "She's very pretty, indeed, very!" she acquiesced. "I wonder where I've seen her before — her face is very familiar. Is she related to the Baltimore Hasbrooks?"

Paula waved a slender, ringless hand at the departing visitors. "I really don't know," she said hastily.

"I'm sure I've seen her before," ruminated Mrs. Challoner. "And who's the young man?"

"That's Mr. Bim," said Paula, and waved her hand again.

"But, Paula, my dear, you mustn't run off from your hostess like this. It's not good form, you know.

"Really? I'm sorry!" exclaimed the culprit, looking the picture of contrition. "I didn't realize. I — I'll try to be very, very nice and make up for it."

And very nice, indeed, she was, so irreproachable that her request to lunch again with Mabel met with no opposition. Mrs. Challoner, in fact, was delighted with the arrangement, the impromptu bride and groom having implored her to be with them for their first meeting with the new made father-in-law, due to arrive that morning. The Gerald Gainses felt that Mrs. Challoner's presence might ease the strain and help to palliate the crime of elopement.

Mrs. Challoner realized, with a little thrill, that Benjamin Loomis owed her some apologies. Lightheartedly she bade Paula "have a good time," and advised calling a taxi. She did not see Mr. Bim's big chocolate-colored car receive her charge. Instead, she sat smiling and expectant in Mrs. Gaines' sitting-room, and just at the moment when Paula, her hand in Bim's, alighted before Victoria Mansion, she was surrendering her own little hand to the cordial pressure of Benjamin Loomis, the Powder King, and listening to the big, good-natured boom of his voice.

The reunion was a pronounced success. Everybody was delighted. The spirit of celebration seized upon them all.

"I'm off on a holiday!" thundered Mr. Loomis, "and you're all my guests. Bring your girl along, Jeanne — I mean, Mrs. Challoner. I'll look her over for you — and I'm a connoisseur."

Mrs. Challoner blushed, hesitated, and accepted. Mr. Loomis was not to be denied.

All the afternoon father-in-law shopped with an utter disregard of cost, assembling wedding presents for his runaways. (Continued on Page 221)

HIKING WITH THE CHAMPIONS

BY EDDIE COLLINS

Of the Athletics

Drawing by Cesare

IT HAPPENED two days after I had joined the Philadelphia Athletics. As "Mr. Sullivan," being still an undergraduate at Columbia, I had watched two games from the grandstand at Shibe Park. The series over, Manager Mack told me to report at the railroad station in time to catch a train that was leaving at six o'clock. The Athletics were to make a quick September swing around the circuit. Needless to say, I was about the first one at the depot; for it was my first trip with a professional baseball club; and I was as eager as a boy to start. Duly I was sitting with the Athletics in their special car when a grinning negro porter stuck his head in the doorway. I understand that grin now; he knew ball players.

"First call for dinner!" he shouted. "Dining car forward."

What transpired, immediately, might have led one to believe that the porter had insulted nearly everybody in the car. There was a stampede. Every one of the Athletics was up and rushing down the aisle, throwing aside magazines and newspapers, tumbling and pitching toward the door. The porter was knocked over and it is no exaggeration to state that one of our players — a very fleshy outfielder with elephantine tread — walked over him in his haste.

"What's the matter with those fellows?" I asked a veteran who had not joined the stampede.

In justice to him, be it explained that he had a sprained ankle and couldn't run.

"They're pulling a Lave Cross," he threw over his shoulder, as he hobbled after the others as fast as his lame ankle would permit.

I came to know what "pulling a Lave Cross" meant. Lave formerly played on the Athletics. He was in the big leagues for years and during that period he was never beaten into a dining car or eating room of any sort. He always caught the first cab out of the station; he always was the first to plunge into a sleeper and select the best berth. He never ran second where personal comforts or tastes were at stake. During all his years, and the competition is keen, he was supreme.

Such haste, however, is a habit inbred in all successful big leaguers. I have noticed that after the game we all dress like firemen getting three alarms, race back to the hotel, race into the dining room, race through our meal. Then we saunter out into the lobby and kill two or three hours trying to see which foot we can stand on longer. At first I marveled at this, then I found myself racing along with the rest of them. By that mark alone,— first at the table — you can tell a ball player out of the spangles.

A big league man is rather a peculiar individual. On the field all his energies and thoughts are concentrated on one idea — the winning of the game. His day's work done, however, he throws that all off. His first desire is to avoid the crowds and excitement. Then he persistently refuses to talk baseball. If you want to make yourself unpopular with big league ball players, drop into their hotel some night and try to talk baseball to them. A very well-known comic opera actor, one of the "my-name-always-in-electric-lights" kind, strolled into the Hotel Somerset where the Athletics always stay while in New York. The fellows saw him coming and there was a mad rush. By the time this gentleman sauntered into the lobby, everybody had ducked to cover. He was a good enough fellow, but the evening is our only chance to get away from baseball and we knew that was all he'd talk.

I have often been asked what we do with ourselves when off the field. You would think that we were different from other human beings. What I shall now try to do is to give some idea of ball players out of the spangles, bringing the reader into closer touch with men whom he has often seen in the spangles.

THE figure of big, lumbering, bow-legged Hans Wagner rumbling across the field before the start of the game, is familiar to a large percentage of the male population of the United States. I question whether many of these persons have ever seen Wagner smile. On the diamond he goes about everything grimly serious.

A few years ago a company, manufacturing a certain brand of cigarettes, was very eager to print Wagner's autographed photograph on little cards that could be inserted in the boxes. They sent a man to see him in his home at Carnegie, Penn. The delegate was wise enough to secure an intermediary, a Pittsburgh newspaper man who knew Wagner well. The newspaper man was to close the deal and receive a fat commission. He offered Wagner $500 for the use of his name, then $1,000. Finally he handed Hans a blank check and told him to write in his own figures.

"No," said Wagner, stubbornly.

"Why not?" asked the newspaper man in amazement. "I thought all you ball players were money crazy."

"I'll tell you," said Wagner, "it isn't worth the money to me to encourage any boy to smoke cigarettes. If my name and picture on a card will have that result, I'm not going to sign up, no matter how high you go with your offers."

"But it means money to me," persisted the newspaper man who for years had been a steady supporter of the great shortstop.

At this Wagner deliberated.

"I don't want to see you lose out," he said, finally. "I'll give you $50 myself, but I won't sign." Of course his offer was not accepted and the cigarette company had to give up their scheme.

That is characteristic of the real Wagner. Down in Carnegie there are about twenty unfortunates, to be brutally true, "bums," who are taken care of solely through Wagner's generosity. He has a heart as big as his clumsy looking body, but he hates the baseball "bug." Frequently wealthy fans have called at Wagner's hotel on the road and tried to engage him in conversation. Generally he will excuse himself and going over to the elevator boy will sit and chat with him for an hour at a time. Wagner's worst enemy will not tell you that he is conceited, but he hates the fans prying into his affairs.

ONE day a list was pinned up on the locker room wall in the Pittsburgh clubhouse. An old ball player was broke and sick, and the men were asked to subscribe. Now most ball players will exchange a nickel for a dollar any time, and the list had as many signatures as the stage Gertrude Hoffman has clothes. One day some of the men were looking at the list and growling this way: "Well, he was a big flash spender when he had it, and thought we were pikers. No charity for me if I'm ever down and out."

Wagner pushed himself forward.

"What's a five case note?" he said, and wrote down his name. "Come on, boys, dig up. Maybe the guy needs it." And everybody in the club dug. For a Pittsburgh player to incur the enmity of Wagner is about as healthy as for a resident of St. Petersburg to get in bad with the Czar.

Connie Mack, manager of our club, is the same kind of man. Connie is forever handing out touches to old time players. He is always thinking of anybody connected with baseball from the bat boys up. I know he insisted on our little hunchback mascot getting a share of the World Series' money — not that any of the players objected — but it was Connie's thought first.

"Little Van comes in on this," he said.

At first the idea of travelling on the road with a ball club is alluring. Then it begins to pall. To us the passing scenery soon becomes monotonous. We always have to go over the same ground. Gradually the men settle down like seasoned travelers, put on smoking jackets and caps and spend the time reading, writing, and playing checkers or cards. It is one of Mack's rules that we are only allowed to play cards on the trains. Like Clark Griffith, who has such a clean living, manly team at Washington, Connie is against card playing, which only leads to night after night sessions, ill feeling and final disruption. I could tell you of at least one American League club that was broken by card games.

There is one advantage in being on the road; our actual baseball work is not as strenuous as at home. This is because we do not have to go out to the park for morning practice. Everybody has to be in bed by half past eleven and report in Mack's room at half past ten in the morning. For an hour Mack talks baseball, planning our campaign for the day.

Then we go out for a walk or write letters. Few of us eat much lunch, a heavy meal having its bad effects when the team gets in action. There is great temptation for the young minor league player, being put up at first class hotels, American plan, to eat his head off. I honestly believe that more good youngsters have been ruined for big league work simply from overeating than from any other extraneous cause. For instance, there is a young pitcher on our club who has the makings of a star. Yet he is only half a success. He lacks ambition. In the box he seems listless. This is because he has a weakness for roast beef. Before going to the ball park, he persists in stuffing himself at noon time and "Roast Beef" has come to be his nickname.

WALTER JOHNSON, the greatest pitcher in baseball, also has a noonday weakness. It is ice cream, but he seems to thrive on it. Jack Barry, our shortstop, feels off color if he does not get his slice of pie at every luncheon. He is a New Englander and comes by his preference naturally. On the day he is going to pitch, Eddie Plank, our veteran left hander, always eats tomato soup. He thinks he would lose if he did not observe this ceremony. Plank always has to rest a couple of days after he has pitched a game. He is slender and no amount of eating appears to make him fat. Accordingly, on the days Plank is not going to pitch he always strolls into the dining room and proceeds to rub it in on the rest of us. Calling a waiter he will say impressively:

"Start me off with a group of those oysters, then some soup. I'm not very strong for the fish, but bring me a nice extra large juicy steak, plenty of potatoes, all the vegetables, a salad, two desserts and a large cup of coffee."

Imagine a man trying to pitch a game of ball after a meal like that. One by one the other players get up and leave the table in disgust, themselves having been forced to eat like canary birds.

This eating business is a problem with managers. George Stallings, now manager of the Boston Nationals, used to foam at the mouth if his New York Yankees ate too much. During a close game against us, one of his men, Engle, opened the eighth inning with a two base hit. It looked as if the Yankees would win, but a moment later, our pitcher caught Engle asleep at second base.

Stallings who fidgits all over the bench during the game, dashed his straw hat to the ground.

"It serves me right," he wailed. "That's the last time I ever carry a Dutchman with a big appetite on my team." He recalled that Engle had eaten a very German meal that day and was therefore loggy.

Everybody who knows anything about baseball knows of Frank Baker. He is the one man on our club — excepting Plank — who can consume quantities of food at luncheon without bad effects. His favorite dishes are oysters and chicken a la Maryland, his home town being in Maryland.

During the last World's Series, a newspaper man drew Mack aside and said: "Say, what do you feed that fellow Baker to make him hit that way?" "That," smiled Connie, "is too precious a delicacy to disclose. I am saving it for future use."

So much for eating, which I believe to be the principal thought of most players when out of the spangles. On the road, time hangs heavily. Consider that we are only occupied three hours in the twenty-four. After a time, the theaters get tiresome. Many players are afraid to go to the moving picture shows believing that the films hurt their batting eyes. When in Boston I have accompanied different members of the Athletics on visits to old cemeteries. When we are in New York in summer the beaches are popular; in Cincinnati I have noticed that the ball players visit the great potteries. There they admire the skill of the potters, not the beauty of the objects turned out. Public buildings are an obvious attraction at Washington, but there are men on our club who have never been in the Capitol. After a few seasons "the road" settles down to a routine of reading, letter-writing, eating and sleeping. We are always put up at the best hotels. Connie Mack always stays at the same hotel as the team, but during the last World Series in New York, he was so pestered by telephone calls that he engaged another room elsewhere for sleeping purposes.

BALL players like to loaf during the forenoon. By nature we are quiet and have a tendency to herd together, and to resent the efforts of fans to butt in. It is a fact that may argue ingratitude, but most players will go to any length to elude the fan. In order to have absolute seclusion and to be free from the fanatics, Wood and Speaker, stars of the Boston Red Sox, gave up the city last year entirely, taking a cottage on the North Shore so they could be alone.

FOR the average fan is a fickle proposition. To illustrate: After we had won on our home ground the deciding game of a World Series against the Giants, a crowd of rooters gathered outside our dressing rooms. The fans were dancing with joy; it is characteristic of them to take such triumphs as personal. One of our men, whose name need not be mentioned, had played sensationally, and as he rushed from the clubhouse for a taxi, a fan yelled to him: "Hey! Hey! Don't you remember me? I'm at the park every day."

Something prompted the player to stop and look at the man, applauding him so wildly. Yes, the player remembered him.

"Sure," he said: "You're the guy who hit me in the back with a rotten apple last year, and called me yellow when I struck out with the bases full." And the fans think ball players have no feelings and forget slurs.

You will never find Chief Bender, our Indian pitcher, hanging around the hotel. Too many original fans are apt to salute him with a war whoop. Besides, he is golf mad and when not on the diamond, he is to be found on the links, being a welcome visitor at all country clubs around the circuit. Most of the fellows have a hobby. Brown, the young pitcher who did so well for us last year, is a billiard expert. During the off season he conducts a large academy in Atlantic City. McInnis and Murphy are the "movie fiends" of our club and are the only ones. They can call the name of every star as soon as they see the face on the screen. Jack Barry, our shortstop, is inordinately fond of Hebrew literature and Biblical history. This, although he, as well as his name, is Irish.

Sometimes National and American League teams meet in some city of the circuit when they are making train connections. After having defeated the Giants in the World Series, three or four of us late the next winter were on the way to our training camp. Stopping off in St. Louis we met Josh Devore in the lobby of the Planters Hotel. Josh had been unfortunate in the big series, falling down at the bat. We exchanged greetings, but Josh appeared not to know Jack Barry, our shortstop.

"Josh," I said, "don't you know Jack Barry?"

Recognizing the infielder, Devore shook hands, laughed and said: "Why should I know you? During the World Series I didn't get as far as second base to meet you."

BUT the meetings of two clubs are not always so pleasant. I have heard one of the Chicago Cubs tell a story about meeting the St. Louis team of the American League. The train bearing the St. Louis players had met with an accident and we had picked up some of their cars. The St. Louis car being coupled next to the one occupied by the Cubs, the players intervisited, told stories, and had a good time generally. It was a novelty. Gradually the Cubs began to notice that one of the St. Louis players, a pitcher, seemed very distant.

"What's the matter with that fellow? Has he got a swelled head?"

"Let him alone," said the St. Louis manager. "His little boy is very sick. He came because we needed him. Our pitching staff is shot to pieces."

Ritchie of the Cubs later heard the rest of the story. Forty-eight hours later, after the St. Louis pitcher had won his game, a telegram was handed to him. He packed his bag and went home to bury his boy.

Managers and club owners have done much to make comfortable the player on the road. I believe it was due to the efforts of McGraw and Connie Mack that the patronage of baseball clubs is now sought by the best hotels.

McGraw encourages the New York Giants to be dressy and swaggering, although always gentlemanly. He believes the "air" gives them a fighting spirit of self confidence. We know them as the "Gemmed Giants." The diamonds they own have been assayed at $15,000 to $20,000. The Giants are the dandies of baseball. When they reach a city, the hotel manicures raise the price. Their nails are always as carefully polished as those of a transatlantic gambler. Like our own club, they have a system of "inside signs" that they use off the field. For instance:

We of the Athletics take advantage of our private car to play cards and converse. There are all men there, and sometimes the language is not as carefully chosen and censored as might be desired. Imagine one of our young recruits — it is a way of young recruits — relating with infinite detail the story of an adventure he had the evening before with a girl "who is going to write him at the next city." Some of the other fellows are playing cards. Plank is reading. Baker is discussing agricultural problems with another of our farmers. A group of three is listening to the recruit's story somewhat risque. Suddenly a shout comes from the end of the car.

"Heads up," yells McInnis.

It is a signal. The recruit stops his story, just on the edge of a laugh. One of the boys, who has bought a second-hand automobile, pauses in the middle of his opinion of the dealer. Silence. A woman appears, passes through the car on her way to another section of the train.

"Down with his arm," calls Thomas from the other end of the car. Whereupon the recruit continues. So does the man who was stuck with the second-hand automobile. Chaos reigns.

BALL players today are scrupulously careful never to offend any one in any way. Especially do they take a pride in being Chesterfields when women are around. They tell a story on the New York Giants. Wilson, who jumped to the Federal League, and Doyle, who jumped to the Matrimonial League, used to be two of the best beauty fanciers of the club. It is said that they were as quick to admire a pretty woman as any boulevardier who ever wore spats. They too had an inside signal. Out for an evening's stroll Wilson would glimpse a pretty face. Nudging Doyle he would not say, "Pipe the peach" or "Get the Gertrude." Oh, no, that would be bush league work. Wilson would simply nudge Doyle and say very loudly, "What time does the boat leave?"

I have seen young fellows join the Athletics and make good. This is their general course of action. They begin by buying a sporty trunk. They then confer with one of those wily diamond brokers who follow big league ball clubs from city to city with the persistency of sharks trailing a boat. Having obtained a regular job on the team, our rising young hero first buys a ring and next a scarf pin, the latter generally looking like a memorial window. He is now a full-fledged ball player. In the clubhouse before the game he can slip his ring off his finger with the best of them, remove the safety catch from his sparkling stick pin, and hand them over to the club trainer, with this injunction:

"Watch the sparklers and the bank roll."

This is always said carelessly, and is typical of most young players. When Josh Devore — who doesn't tell a funny story on Josh? — joined the New York Giants, he carried one of those straw dress suitcases used by women east of the Mississippi, and by men in the corn belt. But Josh soon bought a trunk that could stand on end with any of the others. Also imitating the very dressy Giants he packed in it a full line of haberdashery, Tuxedo and evening dress accessories. Two months before, if he had packed his clothes into that straw suitcase he would have had to wear a barrel.

Today Josh is one of the dandies. When the Giants were coming up from Philadelphia during the 1911 World Series — stormy days too for Josh — McGraw was talking about sending one of his pitchers to see Mr. Reese of Youngstown. Reese is the man who straightens twisted muscles for ball players. He is called a "bonesetter." Josh happened to be picking at his finger.

"What's the matter, Josh, hurt your finger today?"

McGraw was all solicitude.

"Yeah," said Josh, "I've got a splinter in it."

McGraw looked at him.

"Must have been scratching your head, Josh; you better go and see Bonesetter Reese."

That remark of McGraw's is a baseball classic.

WE BALL players, sooner or later, get to hear everything about each other, and these little anecdotes disclose the less familiar side of the game. In 1911 the Cincinnati club gave the fans a surprise by adding two Cubans — Alameida and Marsans — to the team. When the German residents of Cincinnati tried to pronounce the first names of these gentlemen they sounded like atomizers in action. Most of them abandoned the usual first name familiarity and let it go by calling them "the Cubans."

Cuba got all excited about it, and sent up a couple of correspondents who followed the Cincinnati team for the Havana newspapers. As a matter of fact the men only got into action now and then, being substitutes. Finally Marsans broke in and played regularly, and the Cuban correspondents each filed a 500-word story about it, the cable tolls on which were $50. After the Cubans were playing regularly, the correspondents practically leased a cable.

Now Alameida is temperamental, and is also a son of wealth, playing professional ball for the fun of it. When Clark Griffith managed Cincinnati he understood this fact and recognized it. A temperamental Cuban frequents the cafes all the evening — another Latin trait. (Continued on page 223.)

THE PRINCE OF GRAUSTARK

BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

Author of Beverly of Graustark, Brewsters Millions, Etc.

ROBIN and Miss Guile emerged from the low, forbidding door and stood side by side on the pavement looking up and down the street in search of the car. It was nowhere in sight. The chauffeur gasped with amazement — and alarm. He had left it standing directly in front of the door, and now it was gone.

"It is suggested, M'sieur," said the polite LaChance, "that you walk to the corner beyond, turn to the left and there you will find the car in plain view. It was removed by two gentlemen soon after you condescended to honor us with a visit of inspection, and thereby you have escaped much unnecessary attention from the curious who always infest the vicinity of police offices." He saluted them gravely and returned at once to the corridor.

Following leisurely in the wake of the hurrying servants, Robin and Bedelia proceeded down the narrow street to the corner indicated. They were silent and preoccupied. After all, who was to be thanked for the timely escape, his God or hers?

And here it may be said that neither of them was ever to know who sent that brief, effective message to the magistrate, nor were they ever to know the nature of its contents.

The men were examining the car when they came up. No one was near. There was no one to tell how it came to be there nor whither its unknown driver had gone. It stood close to the curb and the engine was throbbing, proof in itself that some one had but recently deserted his post as guardian.

"The obliging man-hunters," suggested Robin in reply to a low-voiced question.

"Or your guardian angel, the great Gourou!" she said, frowning slightly. "By the way, Mr. Schmidt, do you expect to be under surveillance during your stay at Interlaken?"

There was irony in her voice. "Not if I can help it," he said. "And you, Miss Guile? Is it possible that two of the best detectives in Paris are to continue treading on your heels all the time you are in Europe? Must we go about with the uncomfortable feeling that some one is staring at us from behind, no matter where we are? Are we to be perpetually attended by the invisible? If so, I am afraid we will find it very embarrassing."

They were in the car now and proceeding at a snail's pace toward the Arc de Triomphe. Her eyes narrowed. He was sure that she clutched her slim fingers tightly although, for an excellent reason, he was not by way of knowing. He was rapturously watching those expressive eyes.

"I shall put a stop to this ridiculous espionage at once, Mr. Schmidt. These men shall be sent kiting — I mean, about their business before this day is over. I do not intend to be spied upon an instant longer."

"Still they may have been instruments of providence today," he reminded her. "Without them, we might now be languishing in jail and our spotless names posted in the Place de l'Opera. Bedelia Guile and Rex Schmidt, malefactors. What would your father say to that?"

She smiled — a ravishing smile, it was. His heart gave a stupendous jump. "He would say that it served me right," said she, and then: "But what difference can it possibly make to you, Mr. Schmidt, if the detectives continue to watch over me?"

"None," said he promptly. "I suppose they are used to almost anything in the way of human nature, so if they don't mind, I'm sure I won't. I haven't the slightest objection to being watched by detectives, if we can only keep other people from seeing us."

"Don't be silly," she cried. "And let me remind you while I think of it,— you are not to call me Bedelia."

"Bedelia," he said deliberately.

She sighed. "I am afraid I have been mistaken in you," she said. He recalled Gourou's advice. Had he failed in the test? "But don't do it again."

"Now that I think of it," he said soberly, "you are not to call me Mr. Schmidt. Please bear that in mind, Bedelia."

"Thank you. I don't like the name. I'll call you ——"

Just then the footman turned on the seat and excitedly pointed to a car that had swung into the boulevard from a side street.

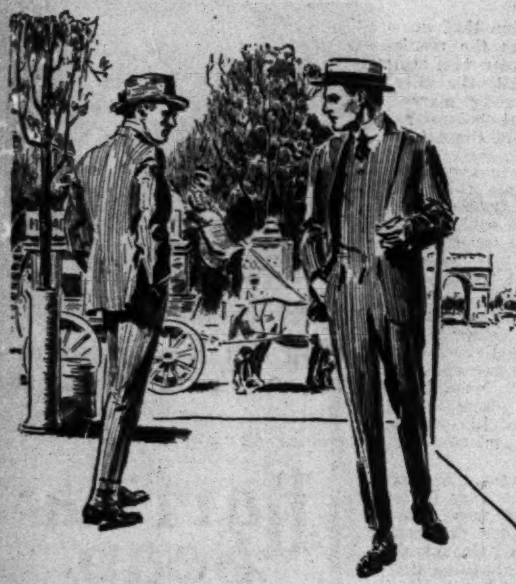
"The man-hunters!" exclaimed Robin. "By jove, we didn't lose them after all."

"To the Ritz, Pierre," she cried out sharply. Once more she seemed perturbed and anxious.

"What are you going to call me?" he demanded, insistently.

"I haven't quite decided," she replied and lapsed into moody silence.

RETROSPECTIVE — Prince Robin of Graustark, traveling about the world, arrives in the Catskills to visit the Truxton Kings. W. W. Blithers, self-made multimillionaire and doting father of an only daughter, Maude, prematurely decides on the Prince as a son-in-law. He knows that Graustark is financially embarrassed as a result of the Balkan wars, and with the Blithers millions in mind he confides his domestic ambition to his wife. Blithers calls at the King villa and meets the Prince. He decides to lend Graustark $16,000,000, and departs for New York to confer with Count Quinnox, the Graustark Minister of War. Meanwhile it is decided to give a ball at Blitherwood in honor of Prince Robin. Maude does not attend the ball, and Mr. Blithers, meeting the Prince the next day, apologizes and invites him to dinner and to be his son-in-law. Maude writes her parents that she and her former governess are going abroad, she under an assumed name, and expect to book passage on the Jupiter. Coincidently Prince Robin plans his return to Graustark, and sails under the name R. Schmidt, to avoid publicity. He meets a mysterious Miss Guile on board and is infatuated. She discovers that he is the Prince of Graustark. He wonders who she can be. Meanwhile they arrive in Paris and she disappears. The newspapers publish a denial by Miss Blithers of her engagement to Prince Robin. He gets a letter from Miss Guile inviting him to take her to tea. They motor to St. Cloud and are arrested for speeding, but the judge mysteriously dismisses the case.



The look he gave Robin was one of combined amazement and concern

Her nervousness increased as they sped down the Champs Elysees and across the Place de la Concorde. He thought that he understood the cause and presently sought to relieve her anxiety by suggesting that she set him down somewhere along the Rue de Rivoli. She flushed painfully.

"Thank you, Mr. Schmidt, I — are you sure you will not mind?"

"May I ask what it is that you are afraid of, Miss Guile?" he inquired seriously.

She was lowering her veil. "I am not afraid, Mr. Schmidt," she said. "I am a very, very guilty person, that's all. I've done something I ought not to have done, and I'm — I'm ashamed. You don't consider me a bold, silly ——"

"Good Lord, no!" he cried fervently.

"Then why do you call me Bedelia?" she asked, shaking her head.

"If you feel that way about it, I — I humbly implore you to overlook my freshness," he cried in despair.

"Will you get out here, Mr. Schmidt?" She pressed the button and the car swung alongside the curb.

"When am I to see you again?" he asked, holding out his hand. She gave it a firm, friendly grip and said:

"I am going to Switzerland the day after tomorrow. Good-bye."

IN A SORT of daze, he walked up the Rue Castiliogne to the Place Vendome. His heart was light and his eyes were shining with a flame that could have but one origin. He was no longer in doubt. He was in love. He had found the Golden Girl almost at the end of his journey, and what cared he if she did turn out to be the daughter of old man Blithers? What cared he for anything but Bedelia? There would be a pretty howdy-do when he announced to his people that their Princess had been selected for them, whether or no, and there might be such a thing as banishment for himself. Even at that, he would be content, for Bedelia was proof against titles. If she loved him, it would be for himself. She would scorn the crown and mock the throne, and they would go away together and live happily ever afterward, as provided by the most exacting form of romance. And Blithers? What a joke it would be on Blithers if he gave up the throne!

As he approached the Ritz, a tall young man emerged from the entrance, stared at him for an instant, and then swung off at a rapid pace in the direction of the Rue de la Paix. The look he gave Robin was one of combined amazement and concern, and the tail end of it betrayed unmistakable annoyance,— or it might have been hatred. He looked over his shoulder once and found Robin staring after him. This time there could be no mistake. He was furious, but whether with Robin or himself there was no means of deciding from the standpoint of an observer. At any rate, he quickened his pace and soon disappeared.

He was the good-looking young fellow who had met her at the railway station, and it was quite obvious that he had been making investigations on his own account.

Robin permitted himself a sly grin as he sauntered into the hotel. He had given that fellow something to worry about, if he had accomplished nothing else. Then he found himself wondering if, by any chance, it could be the Scoville fellow. That would be a facer!

He found Quinnox and Dank awaiting him in the lobby. They were visibly perturbed.

"Did you observe the fellow who just went out?" inquired Robin, assuming a most casual manner.

"Yes," said both men in unison.

"I think we've got some interesting news concerning that very chap," added the Count, glancing around uneasily.

"Perhaps I may be able to anticipate it, Count," ventured Robin. "I've an idea he is young Scoville, the chap who is supposed to be in love with Miss Blithers — and vice versa," he concluded with a chuckle.

"What have you heard?" demanded the Count in astonishment.

"Let's sit down," said Robin, at once convinced that he had stumbled upon an unwelcome truth.

They repaired to the garden and were lucky enough to find a table somewhat removed from the crowd of tea-drinkers. Robin began fanning himself with his broad straw hat. He felt uncomfortably warm. Count Quinnox gravely extracted two or three bits of paper from his pocket, and spread them out in order before his sovereign.

"Read this one first," said he grimly.

It was a cablegram from their financial agents in New York City, and it said: "Mr. B. making a hurried trip to Paris. Just learned Scoville preceded Miss B. to Europe by fast steamer and has been seen with her in Paris. B. fears an elopement. Make sure papers are signed at once as such contingency might cause B. to change mind and withdraw if possible."

Robin looked up. "I think this may account for the two man-hunters," said he. His companions stared. "You will hear all about them from Gourou. We were followed this afternoon."

"Followed!" gasped Quinnox.

"Beautifully," said the Prince, with his brightest smile. "Detective, you know. It was ripping."

"MY GOD!" groaned the Count.

"I fancy you'll now agree with me that she is Miss Blithers," said Dank forlornly.

"Cheer up, Boske," cried Robin, slapping him on the shoulder. "You'll meet another fate before you're a month older. The world is absolutely crowded with girls."

"You can't crowd the world with one girl," said Dank, and it was quite evident from his expression that he believed the world contained no more than one.

"I had the feeling that evil would be the result of this foolish trip today," groaned Quinnox. "I should not have permitted you to ——"

"The result is still in doubt," said Robin enigmatically. "And now, what comes next?"

"Read this one. It is from Mr. Blithers. I'll guarantee that you do not take this one so complacently."

He was right in his surmise. Robin ran his eye swiftly over the cablegram and then started up from his chair with a muttered imprecation.

"Sh!" cautioned the Count,— and just in time, for the young man was on the point of enlarging upon his original effort. "Calm yourself, Bobby, my lad. Try taking six or seven full, deep inhalations, and you'll find that it helps wonderfully as a preventive. It saves many a harsh word. I've ——"

"You needn't caution me," murmured the Prince. "If I had the tongue of a pirate I couldn't begin to do justice to this," and he slapped his hand resoundingly upon the crumpled message from William W. Blithers.

The message had been sent by Mr. Blithers that morning, evidently just before the sailing of the fast French steamer on which he and his wife were crossing to Havre. It was directed to August Totten and read as follows:

"Tell our young friend to qualify statement to press at once. Announce reconsideration of hasty denial and admit engagement. This is imperative. I am not in mood for trifling. Have wired Paris papers that engagement is settled. Have also wired daughter. The sooner we get together on this the better. Wait for my arrival in Paris." It was signed "W. B."

"There's Blitherskite methods for you," said Dank. "Speaking of pirates, he's the king of them all. Did you ever hear of such confounded insolence? The damned——"

"Wait a second, Dank," interrupted the Count. "There is still another delectable communication for you, Robin. It was directed to R. Schmidt and I took the liberty of opening it, as authorized. Read it."

This was one of the ordinary "petit bleu," dropped into the pneumatic tube letter-box at half-past two that afternoon, shortly before Robin ventured forth on his interesting expedition in quest of tea, and its contents were very crisp and to the point:

"Pay no attention to any word you may have received from my father. He cables a ridiculous command to me which I shall ignore. If you have received a similar message I implore you to disregard it altogether. Let's give each other a fighting chance."

It was signed "Maude Blithers."

CHAPTER XVII.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER.

MR. BLITHERS received a wireless from the Jupiter when the ship was three days out from New York. It was terse but sufficient: "Have just had a glimpse of Prince Charming. He is very good-looking. Love to mother. Maude."

He had barely settled into a state of complete satisfaction with himself over the successful inauguration of a shrewd campaign to get the better of the recalcitrant Maude and the incomprehensible Robin, when he was thrown into a panic by the discovery that young Chandler Scoville had sailed for Europe two days ahead of Maude and her elderly companion. The gratification of knowing that the two young people had sailed away on the same vessel was not in the least minimized by Maude's declaration that she intended to remain in her cabin all the way across in order to avoid recognition, for he knew her too well to believe it possible that she could stay out of sight for any length of time, fair weather or foul. He even made a definite wager with his wife that the two would become acquainted before they were halfway across the Atlantic, and he made a bet with himself that nature would do the rest. And now here

THE BLUE HERON

By Bliss Carman

Drawing by Paul Bransom

I SEE the great blue heron
  Rising among the reeds,
And floating down the wind
  Like an idle sail
With the set of the stream.

I hear the two-horse mower
  Clacking among the hay,
In the heat of a July noon,
  And the driver's voice
As he turns his team.

I see the meadow lilies
  Flecked with their darker tan,
The elms and the great white clouds,
  And all the world
Is a passing dream.

Boy's! Your Future is determined by Your Play

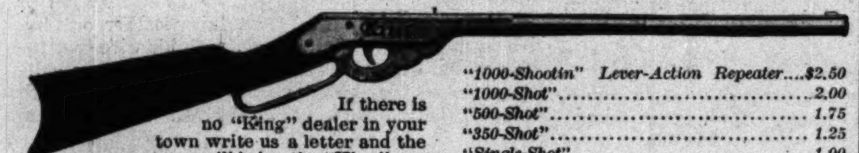
KING AIR RIFLES

THE King provides the right kind of play. It teaches clean, manly habits. It makes you accurate and develops your mind, eye and hand. It teaches the value of precision and self reliance.

Your father knows that "the boy's play makes a man's pay." This is why he is willing for you to have a King of your own. Remind him. And you want it because it is the best Air Rifle, and will give you endless fun and genuine sport. It is a man's gun, in size, shape, finish, the way it shoots and everything but destructiveness.

The builders of the King are doing more than making the world's best Air Rifles. They are making healthy, happy, normally developed boys; "pals" of fathers and sons. Maybe your father never told you, but he knows that nature put two irresistible hungers in you. One for food and the other for play. Ask him if this is not true. Insist on the King.

The boy who plays with a King Air Rifle, will make a better Business Man.



If there is no "King" dealer in your town write us a letter and the postman will bring the "King" you want by parcel post, at the retail price. Write for our free book on King Air Rifles and be an expert on the subject.

The New Silk-Faced Holeproof Hose

Here, now, is the hosiery for men and women that combines long wear with the style of silk hosiery, and it sells at the same price as good cotton hose—50 cents a pair for men's and 75 cents a pair for women's.

Holeproof Silk-Faced Hosiery is made of the finest Japanese Silk, ingeniously knit over a strong, sheer, invisible body of Sea Island Cotton. This gives the appearance of pure silk and much longer wearing quality than is possible in pure silk hose. Three pairs are guaranteed to wear without holes for three months. If any of the three pairs fail in that time we will replace them with new hose free.

Try these new Holeproofs, madam. Get them for your husband and your sons to try.

Try the regular cotton Holeproofs, too, for men, women and children. Six pairs are guaranteed six months.

came the staggering suspicion that Scoville's hasty departure was the result of a prearranged plan between him and Maude, and that, after all, the silly girl might spoil everything by marrying the confounded rascal before he could do anything to prevent the catastrophe.

He even tried to engineer a scheme whereby young Scoville might be arrested on landing and detained on one pretext or another until he could reach Europe and put an end to the fellow's vain-glorious conniving.

But after consulting with his lawyers he abandoned the plan because they succeeded in proving to him that Maude certainly would marry the fellow if she had the least ground for believing that he was being oppressed on her account. The cables were kept very busy, however, for the next twenty-four hours, and it is certain that Scoville was a marked man from the moment he landed.

Newspaper reporters camped on the trail of Mr. Blithers. He very obligingly admitted that there was something in the report that his daughter was to marry the Prince of Graustark, although he couldn't say anything definite at the time. It wouldn't be fair to the parties concerned, he explained. He gave away a great many boxes of cigars, and not a few of the more sagacious reporters succeeded in getting at least three boxes by interviewing him on as many separate occasions without being detected in the act of repeating. Then came the disgusting denials in Paris by his daughter and the ungrateful Prince. This was too much. He couldn't understand such unfilial behavior on the part of one, and he certainly couldn't forgive the ingratitude of the other.

INSTEAD of waiting until Saturday to sail, he changed ships and left New York on Friday, thereby gaining nothing by the move except relief from the newspapers, for it appears that he gave up a five-day boat for one that could not do it under six. Still he was in active pursuit, which was a great deal better than sitting in New York twiddling his thumbs or looking at his watch and berating the pernicious hours that stood between him and Saturday noon.

"There will be something doing in Europe the day I land there, Lou," he said to his wife as they stood on deck and watched the Statue of Liberty glide swiftly back toward Manhattan Island. "I've got all the strings working smoothly. We've got Groostock where it can't peep any louder than a freshly hatched chicken, and we'll soon bring Maude to her senses. I tell you, Lou, there is nothing that makes a girl forget her lofty ideals so quickly as the chance to go shopping for princess' gowns. She's seen the Prince and I'll bet she won't be so stubborn as she was before. And if he has had a good, square look at her,—if he's had a chance to gaze into those eyes of hers,—why, I—well, I leave it to you. He can't help getting off his high horse, can he?"

Mrs. Blithers favored him with a smile. It was acknowledged that Maude was the living image of what her mother had been at the age of twenty.

"I hope the child hasn't made any silly promise to Channie Scoville," she sighed.

"I've been thinking of that, Lou," said he, wiping his brow, "and I've come to one conclusion. Scoville can be bought off. He's as poor as Job and half a million will look like the Bank of England to him. I'll——"

"You are not to attempt anything of the kind, Will," she cried emphatically. "He would laugh in your face, poor as he is. He comes from one of the best families in New York and——"

"And I don't know where the best families need money any more than they do in New York," he interrupted irritably. "'Gad, if the worst families need it as badly as they do, what must be the needs of the best? You leave it to me. It may be possible to insult him with a half million, so if he feels that way about it I'll apologize to him with another half million. You'll see that he won't be capable of resenting two insults in succession. He'll——"

"He isn't a fool," said she significantly.

"He'd be a fool if he refused to take——"

"Are you losing your senses, Will?" she cried impatiently. "Why should he accept a million to give up Maude, when he can be sure of fifty times that much if he marries her?"

"But I'll cut Maude off with a dollar if she marries him, so help me Moses!" exclaimed Mr. Blithers, but he went a little pale just the same. "That will fix him!"

"You are talking nonsense," said she

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It if your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye trouble because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye trouble. They neglect their eyes because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that everyone should use.

5 grains Optona (1 tablet).
2 ounces water.

Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Optona system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription very easily. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.

sharply. He put his fingers to his ears somewhat earlier than usual, and she turned away with a tantalizing laugh. "I'm going inside," and inside she went. When he followed a few minutes later he was uncommonly meek.

"At any rate," he said, seating himself on the edge of a chair in her parlour, "I guess those cablegrams this morning will make 'em think twice before they go on denying things in the newspapers."

"Maude will pay no attention to your cablegram, and, if I am any judge of human nature, the Prince will laugh himself sick over the one you sent to Count Quinnox. I told you not to send them. You are not dealing with Wall street. You are dealing with a girl and a boy who appear to have minds of their own."

He ventured a superior sniff. "I guess you don't know as much about Wall street as you think you do."

"I only know that it puts its tail between its legs and howls every time some one points a finger at it," she observed, scornfully.

"Now let's be sensible, Lou," he said, sitting back a little farther in the chair, relieved to find that she was at least willing to tolerate his presence,—a matter on which he was in some doubt when he entered the room. There were times when he was not quite certain whether he or she was the brains of the family. "We'll probably have a wireless from Maude before long. Then we'll have something tangible to discuss. By the way, did I tell you that I've ordered some Dutch architects from Berlin to go——"

"The Dutch are from Holland," she said wearily.

"——to go over to Growstock and give me a complete estimate on repairing and remodeling the royal castle? I dare say we'll have to do a good deal to the place. It's several hundred years old and must require a lot of conveniences. Such as bath-rooms, electric lights, steam heating appar——"

"Better make haste slowly, Will," she said, and he ought to have been warned by the light in her eye. "You are taking a great deal for granted, aren't you?"

"It's got to be fixed up some time, so we might just as well do it in the beginning," said he, failing utterly to grasp her meaning. "Probably needs refurnishing from top to bottom, too, and a new roof. I never saw a ruin yet that didn't leak. Remember those castles on the Rhine? Will you ever forget how wet we got the day we went through the one at——"

"They were abandoned, tumble-down castles," she reminded him.

"There isn't a castle in Europe that's any good in a rain-storm," he proclaimed. "A mortgage can't keep out the rain and that's what every one of 'em is covered with. Why old man Quiddox himself told me that their castle had been shot to pieces in one of the revolutions and——"

"IT IS time you informed yourself about the country you are trying to annex to the Blithers estate," she said sarcastically. "I can assist you to some extent if you will be good enough to listen. In the first place, the royal castle at Edelweiss is one of the most substantial in the world. It has not been allowed to fall into decay. In fact, it is inhabitated from top to bottom by members of the royal household and the Court, and I fancy they are not the sort of people who take kindly to a wetting. It is not a ruin, Will, such as you have been permitted to visit, but a magnificent building with all of the modern improvements. The only wettings that the inmates sustain are of a daily character and due entirely to voluntary association with porcelain bath-tubs and nickel-plated showers, and they never get anything wet but their skins. As for the furnishings, I can assure you that the entire Blithers fortune could not replace them if they were to be destroyed by fire or pillage. They are priceless and they are unique. I have read that the hangings in the bedchamber of the late Princess Yetive are the most wonderful in the whole world. The throne chair in the great audience chamber is of solid gold and weighs nearly three thousand pounds. It is studded with diamonds, rubies——"

"Great Scott, Lou, where did you learn all this?" he gasped, his eyes bulging.

"——emeralds and other precious stones. There is one huge carpet in the royal drawing-room that the Czar of Russia is said to have offered one hundred thousand pounds for and the offer was scorned. The park surrounding the castle is said to be beautiful beyond the power of description. The——"

Millions of human dynamos—all the world over—get their energy from Quaker.

For this is the vim-food. As a source of vitality, all the ages have found nothing else to compare with it. It is laden with the elements that minds and muscles need.

Quaker is this king-food in its most delicious form. It clothes in fairy raiment this giant grain. You who decide the home meals should see that every worker starts every day on Quaker.

Quaker Oats
A Luscious Form of Vim-Food

Our part is to make this food inviting. Nature has done the rest.

All its vim-producing power is there when it comes to us, but not the Quaker flavor.

Then we do this:

We pick out just the big, plump grains. Thus we get but ten pounds of Quaker Oats from a bushel.

We treat those grains by dry heat, then by steam. In these ways we add to the flavor. Then we roll them into these big, white, luscious flakes.

Quaker Cooker

We have made to our order—from pure Aluminum—a perfect Double Boiler. It is extra large and heavy. We supply it to users of Quaker Oats, for cooking these flakes in the ideal way. It insures the fullness of food value and flavor. See our offer in each package.

The result is a food which has won the world by its exquisite taste.

A hundred nations send here for it now. We ship it over seas and deserts to people who want this flavor.

It is next door to you—at your nearest store.

You get it by merely saying "Quaker". And it costs no extra price.

Get it always. This is the food folks need most. Make it the food they want.

"I asked you where you got all this information. Can't you answer me?"

"I obtained all this and a great deal more from a lady who spent a year or two inside the castle walls. I refer to Mrs. Truxton King, who might have told you as much if you had possessed the intelligence to inquire."

"Gee whiz!" exclaimed Mr. Blithers, going back to his buoyant boyhood days for an adequate expression. "What a wonder you are, Lou. But that's the woman of it, always getting at the inside of a thing while a man is standing around looking at the outside. Say, but won't it make a wonderful home for you and me to spend a peaceful old age in when we get ready to lay aside the ——"

He stopped short, for she had arisen and was standing over him with a quivering forefinger leveled at his nose,—and not more than six inches away from it,—her handsome eyes flashing with fury.

"You may walk in where angels fear to tread, but you will walk alone, Will Blithers. I shall not be with you, and you may as well understand it now. I've told you a hundred times that money isn't everything, and it is as cheap as dirt when you put it alongside of tradition, honor, pride and loyalty. Those Graustarkians would take you by the nape of the neck and march you out of their castle so quick that your head would swim. You may be able to buy their prince for Maudie to exhibit around the country, but you can't buy the intelligence of the people. They won't have you at any price and they won't have me, so there is the situation in a nutshell. They will hate Maudie, of course, but they will endure her for obvious reasons. They may even come to love and respect her in the end, for she is worthy. But as for you and me, William,—with all of our money,—we will find every hand against us—even the hand of our daughter, I prophesy. I am not saying that I would regret seeing Maude the Princess of Graustark—far from it. But I do say that you and I will be expected to know our places. If you attempt to spend your declining years in the castle at Graustark you will find them reduced to days, and short ones at that. The people of Graustark will see to it that you die before your time."

"Bosh!" said Mr. Blithers. "Mind if I smoke?" He took out a cigar and began searching for matches.

"No," she said, "I don't mind. It is a sign that you need something to steady your nerves. I know you, Will Blithers. You don't want to smoke. You want to gain a few minutes of time, that's all."

HE LIT a cigar. "Right you are," was his unexpected admission. "I wonder if you really have the right idea about this business. What objection could any one have to a poor, tired old man sitting in front of his daughter's fireside and—and playing with her kiddies? It seems to me that ——"

"You will never be a tired old man, that's the trouble," she said, instantly touched.

"Oh, yes, I will," said he slowly. "I'm rather looking forward to it, too."

"It will be much nicer to have the kiddies come to your own fireside, Will. I used to enjoy nothing better than going to spend a few days with my grandfather."

"But what's the use of going to all this trouble and expense if we are not to enjoy some of the fruits?" he protested, making a determined stand. "If these people can't be grateful to the man who helps 'em out in their time of trouble,—and who goes out of his way to present 'em with a bright, capable posterity,—I'd like to know what in thunder gratitude really means."

"There isn't any such thing as gratitude," she said. "Obligation, yes,—and ingratitude most certainly, but gratitude,—no. You are in a position to know that gratitude doesn't exist. Are you forgetting the private advices we already have had from Graustark? Does it indicate that the people are grateful? There are moments when I fear that we are actually placing Maude's life in peril, and I have had some wretched dreams. They do not want her. They speak of exile for the Prince if he marries her. And now I repeat what I have said before,—the people of Graustark must have an opportunity to see and become acquainted with Maude before the marriage is definitely arranged. I will not have my daughter cast into a den of lions, Will,—for that is what it may amount to. The people will adore her, they will welcome her with open arms if they are given the chance. But they will have none of her if she is forced upon them in the way you propose."

"I'll — I'll think it over," said Mr. Blithers, and then discovered that his cigar had gone out. "I think I'll go on deck and smoke, Lou. Makes it stuffy in here. We'll lunch in the restaurant at half past one, eh?"

"Think hard, Will," she recommended, with a smile.

"I'll do that," he said, "but there's nothing on earth that can alter my determination to make Maude the Princess of Groostork. That's settled."

"Graustark, Will."

"Well, whatever it is," said he, and departed.

He did think hard, but not so much about a regal home for aged people as about Channie Scoville who had now become a positive menace to all of his well-ordered and costly plans. The principal subject for thought just now was not Graustark, but this conniving young gentleman who stood ready to make a terrible mess of posterity. Mr. Blithers was sufficiently fair-minded to concede that the fellow was good-looking, well-bred and clever, just the sort of chap that any girl might fall in love with like a shot. As a matter of fact, he once had admired Scoville, but that was before he came to look upon him as a menace. He would make a capital husband for any girl in the world, except Maude. He could say that much for him, without reserve.

He thought hard until half-past one and then went to the wireless office, where he wrote out a message in cipher and directed the operator to waste no time in relaying it to his offices in Paris. His wife was right. It would be the height of folly to offer Scoville money and it would be even worse to inspire the temporary imprisonment of the young man.

But there was a splendid alternative. He could manage to have his own daughter, abducted — chaperon included,— and held for ransom!

The Strategy of Paula

It was a hilariously happy party.

Paula had not returned when Mrs. Challoner entered her apartments; but she was too full of her own concerns to note the delay; and when a moment later she found a small sealed parcel directed to her lying on her dressing-table, she was even less susceptible to the lateness of the hour. The white paper disclosed a cream kid box, around which a sealed envelope was fastened with an elastic band. She opened it and read: "A medal for the best little chaperone at large." It needed no signature. There was no mistaking that handwriting. Mrs. Challoner opened the case. From a delicate platinum chain swung a glittering diamond plaque.

"The very idea!" she exclaimed. "The impertinence!" She thrust it back, laughed again, and swung it over her neck, watching "the medal" sparkle on the black velvet of her dress.

PAULA softly entered. There was a look of trepidation in her eyes, of guilt in her face. Indeed, the hour was quite unexplainably late, but the chaperone greeted her absently.

"Run and dress quickly, dear. We dine and go to the play with Mr. Loomis and Mr. and Mrs. Gaines."

Paula's was truly a lightning change. It seemed only a moment when she rejoined Mrs. Challoner, to be subjected to the promised "looking over,' which Mr. Loomis did very thoroughly; and as they moved through the coffee-room on their way to dinner, he announced a disquieting decision.

"Little chaperone," he whispered, "that Paula girl of yours is ten thousand years older than you are!"

Mrs. Challoner turned inquiring eyes.

The big man laughed. "You're a babe, and she's your nursie — Oh, that's all right; you needn't be peeved; but your Uncle Dudley's wise."

The "little chaperone" felt vaguely unhappy; but the feeling wore off in the exhilaration of the moment. They took in the Empire, enjoying themselves, and attracting quite as much attention as the performance.

"And now," announced their host, as the curtain descended, "Romano's for us — none of your Ritzes and things. It's me for the look in at the professional beauty show. Guess we can put their eye out. What do you say?"

They said "Yes" quite readily, all except Paula, who blushed, hesitated; there was something pathetically girlish in her protest.

"Romano's — Oh, no, do you think?"

Benjamin Loomis revolved slowly toward her.

"I guess," he grinned, "a chaperone, a married couple, and an old chap like me, can manage to appease Mrs. Grundy. No? Let's be going."

With much stir they found a table in the famous after-theater restaurant; the somewhat dingy simplicity of whose interior is atoned for by the night-blooming series of stage beauties. Mrs. Challoner looked about her with quickened curiosity. She was not disappointed. Leading lights shone at every angle.

Paula, after a hasty survey of the room settled herself demurely, looking neither to the right nor left, as, beginning with pink shrimps and champagne, Mr. Loomis began to order through the menu. Momentarily her glances were directed toward the door.

All at once there was a craning of heads, a general turning. A group of late comers was being escorted down the room.

"Ah!" exclaimed Mr. Loomis, "there's Mabel Delorme, the American girl who's made such a hit here in musical comedy, by Jove! Why didn't I think to get tickets for tonight?"

Mrs. Challoner turned, frankly staring with the rest of the crowd. Then her mouth and eyes opened simultaneously, her lorgnette dropped unheeded. With a blank look she turned to Paula, who was studying the pattern of her plate with suspicious concentration. The party passed them, laughing and chaffing, and were seated at a table just beyond. No wonder Mabel Hasbrook's face had seemed familiar! No wonder! And the Bim person, doubtless her leading man, was there in attendance, with two other women and three men. So this, then — Mrs. Challoner controlled herself with difficulty, and drained her glass of champagne. When her eyes cleared again, and she could bear to gaze at the Hasbrook party, she discovered the gaze of the Bim person fastened with adoration on her charge. Mrs. Challoner sat speechless, as in an evil dream, the dreadful moments passed. Suddenly the lights winked out and up again, the first warning to the revellers that the closing law must be obeyed. There followed a hurried settling of checks, and a general rising, amid the usual buzz of objections and regrets. A moment later and the throng was moving toward the door. Paula became unaccountably separated from her party. A gross person had elbowed her aside; several gross persons followed suit. Strangely enough, Bim found himself at her side. He bent down, searching her face earnestly.

"You will let me come for you tomorrow, won't you?" he begged.

PAULA looked up at him, her great eyes swimming, her tender mouth quivering. "Oh, I'm afraid," she murmured. "You see, my chaperone has found out tonight who Mabel is — on the stage, you know; and I'm sure she'll forbid me. At home, they're so prejudiced. I — I didn't even tell mother, when I wrote her, 'that I'd met a schoolmate' — and — I suppose it was awful of me; but I'm so fond of Mabel."

Bim said something under his breath. His hungry eyes were on the lovely upturned face at his shoulder.

"But," he protested, "why should that bar me?" (Continued on page 223)

Which Will You Keep—

"Acid-Mouth" or Sound Teeth ?

You can't have both "acid-mouth" and sound teeth. They don't go together.

"Acid-mouth" gradually but surely eats away the enamel and lets decay strike into the soft interior of the tooth. In time you won't have a sound tooth left—unless you remove the cause of the trouble.

The sure way to counteract "acid-mouth" is by the regular daily use of

PEBECO
TOOTH PASTE

Pebeco is the scientific dentifrice designed to neutralize the mouth acids formed by food-ferment. By doing this it removes what authorities claim is the chief cause of tooth-decay.

Use ⅓ of Brushful

Pebeco also cleans and whitens the teeth, purifies the mouth, drives out bad odors and tastes, and leaves a feeling of clean freshness that nothing else can equal. The delightful tingle of its taste is a revelation.

You are invited to find out whether you have "acid-mouth," as 9 out of 10 people are said to have. If you have "acid-mouth," Pebeco is a necessity.

Send for Free Ten-Day Trial Tube of Pebeco and Acid Test Papers

The Test Papers will show you whether you too have "acid-mouth" and how Pebeco counteracts it.

Pebeco originated in the hygienic laboratories of P. Beiersdorf & Co., Hamburg, Germany, and is sold everywhere in extra-large size tubes. As only one-third of a brushful is used at a time, Pebeco saves money as well as teeth.

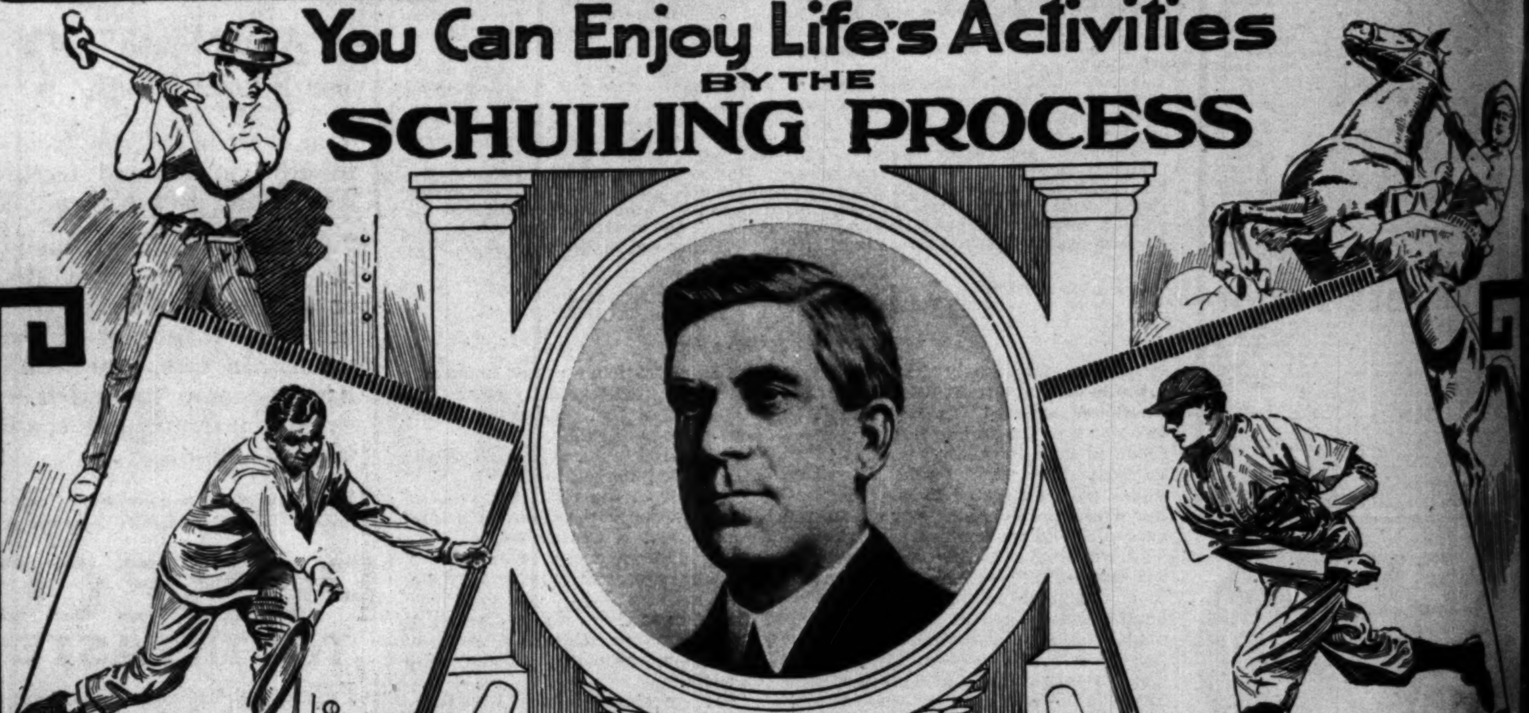
The Man Who Lets You Laugh At RUPTURE!

You Can Enjoy Life's Activities BY THE SCHUILING PROCESS



A. H. SCHUILING
Manager and Director of the Schuiling Rupture Institute, Inc.

LAUGH at rupture? Laugh at being harnessed up in a cruel, ill-fitting truss with steel springs gouging into your flesh and elastic bands pinching and squeezing and making life miserable? Laugh at the prospect of a dreaded and dangerous surgical operation? Laugh at being compelled to give up many of life's most pleasurable activities and to move about with the greatest care for fear the contraption you are wearing will slip out of place, allow the rupture to come down and then cause you torture that no words can describe?

Viewed from these and similar experiences, which nearly every rupture victim has endured, this most distressing affliction is no laughing matter, I'll admit. But to-day such suffering is unnecessary. Mr. A. H. Schuilling of Indianapolis, Ind., has found a wonderfully simple means of not only holding ruptures with perfect ease and comfort under any and all conditions, but of actually enabling it to heal in an astonishingly short space of time. It is through his unique device and the remarkable success he has had with it that Mr. Schuilling has earned the title: "The man who lets you laugh at rupture."

Severe Tests Prove Wonderfully Successful

Mr. Schuilling's device is known as the Schuilling Rupture Lock, and while new in the sense that comparatively few sufferers have up to this time heard of it, it is by no means an experiment. In fact, it has been tried and tested in many of the severest and most difficult cases imaginable, as well as in hundreds of ordinary cases, and the results have been all, if not more, than even Mr. Schuilling and his associates had hoped for.

As an example of the rigid tests that have been made, Mr. Schuilling submits written reports from persons in every walk of life, including a western ranchman who rides and "breaks" wild horses, a railroad man, a blacksmith, a plasterer, a number of farmers, mechanics and others whose rough and strenuous work requires great physical strain and exertion and therefore is extremely difficult for a ruptured person to perform.

In these reports results heretofore almost unheard of are described. The ruptures are said to be held firmly in place under any and all conditions with perfect ease and comfort. Many persons from sixty to eighty years old, who say they suffered from rupture for many years declare the ruptured openings entirely healed while wearing the new rupture lock.

Some Interesting Experiences Described

Mr. John L. Johnson, a druggist of La Fountain, Ind., makes this statement: "I was ruptured for a good many years. I never could find any truss or appliance that would hold my double rupture or give me an hour of comfort, altho I sold trusses in my drug store and was acquainted with all makes. One day I was advised to try a "Schuilling Rupture Lock," which I did. That settled it, for it was the very thing I had been looking for.

"I now declare to the world that I am a cured man. When people come to my store for trusses I tell them to order a Schuilling Rupture Lock, as I do not handle any more trusses or appliances. Do as I did and get cured."

Another interesting experience is related by Mr. Geo. H. Higgins, 1431 Robinson Rd., Grand Rapids, Mich., who says: "For fifteen years I went around the best I could with two ruptures, at times so painful I was forced to take to my bed. I was advised to try a Schuilling Rupture Lock, which I did, and in one year I was completely cured on both sides, health restored, feeling strong and active as a man of twenty. Now beginning 65 years of age, I can climb a telegraph pole with any of the boys if I want to."

Here is what Miss Agnes Brunton, Dayton, Washington, says: "I received The Schuilling Rupture Lock on the 14th of February, 1914, and have felt fine ever since I put it on. I owe my thanks to the Schuilling Company for what they have done in curing me."

Vern Loring, whose address is R. F. D. No. 58, Caledonia, Mich., is a farmer. He must work in the wheat fields, climb hay ricks, climb the ladders in his barns, all of which he was able to do easily after placing himself under the care of Director Schuilling, and he testifies that he was cured after wearing the rupture lock for nine months.

S. J. Bryant is one of the respected old citizens of Garland, Kans., and reports that he cured himself after wearing a rupture lock for two months and then gave it to a lady friend of his wife's, to whom it is giving great satisfaction.

Has Many Advantages Over Old Methods

The new lock is very light in weight and so constructed that binding, gouging or "gaulding" the flesh, or any undue pressure of pads into the ruptured openings, is entirely avoided. It is so small that there is no possibility of it being detected through the clothing. It is entirely free from any buckles or fastenings that could scratch or rub the flesh and is worn day and night.

Another, and perhaps one of the greatest features of Mr. Schuilling's lock, is that when once adjusted to the needs of the wearer, it is a physical impossibility to accidentally throw it out of place by any action of the body and some of the most interesting testimony that Mr. Schuilling has collected are the statements of persons who tell of various tests made to see if they could displace it by twisting, pulling, straining, running, jumping and lifting.

Month's Trial, Book On Rupture and Full Particulars Are Offered Free

Mr. Schuilling and his associates who have established the Schuilling Rupture Institute at Indianapolis are among the most prominent business men of that city. They are very anxious to place the facts concerning this most remarkable device in the hands of every rupture sufferer in America and have prepared an interesting book, "How to Cure Rupture," which is sent entirely free to all persons interested.

In addition, Mr. Schuilling also offers free a month's trial of the Schuilling Rupture Lock to any sufferer who will agree to put it on and wear it for that length of time to prove what it will do.

The following coupon is appended for your convenience. Fill it in and mail it to-day.

No money is required to secure the facts in detail and particulars regarding Mr. Schuilling's free trial offer, and in view of the truly wonderful results that are being accomplished for others, it would seem well worth while for any sufferer to write even though past experience may have caused despair of ever finding a cure. Science is daily producing wonders that yesterday were deemed impossible.

The Strategy of Paula

Paula turned away.

"You will be tarred with the same brush," she said sadly. "I met you with Mabel. She's seen you here tonight. I know I won't be allowed ——"

Again she lifted her eyes to his, eyes so full of regret, yet so full of promise. He caught his breath and his heart beat painfully. Out went the lights again. For fully ten seconds they were plunged in night. In that moment he bent and kissed her full on the lips; and it was as if all the thrills of all lovers had been melted and run together for that one instant.

"Paula," he said, and his voice shook with feeling, "I am coming for you tomorrow with the car at ten." He bowed with the courtly grace of one saluting his Queen of Love and Beauty.

It was Mr. Loomis' firm hand that reached and caught his little guest, and drew her toward the entrance, where the others waited.

"Nifty young chap, that," he said genially. "The chaperone didn't see who you were talking with either."

Paula gazed at him tremulously.

"I'm afraid Mrs. Challoner won't ——"

But she got no further. The party had secured their taxis, and Mr. Loomis, the last to enter, was addressing a question to the starter, and receiving an answer that evoked a chuckle.

They reached the Savoy in portentous silence, but Mrs. Challoner was too weary and distressed to take up the cudgels that night.

MORNING found Mrs. Challoner ready for the fray, and dressed with an eye to dignity. It also found Paula in her motor hat and coat, quietly leaving her room, after a solitary breakfast. She had been gone but a moment when Mrs. Challoner entered and immediately noticed tne absence of the automobile accessories from the open hanging closet. She flew to the door leading to the corridor, and was just in time to see her charge disappear in the elevator, which, in its next descent carried her in hot pursuit. In the lobby she paused, and, looking about anxiously, descried Paula near the reading room entrance — with the discredited Bim. Anger and resentment added sudden inches to her stature. She descended upon the culprits, her face all stretched to speak in no uncertain tones of reprimand.

"Paula!" she exclaimed.

The girl turned with a little frightened cry. Instinctively and with an air of protection, Mr. Bim swung toward the girl.

"Paula!" Mrs. Challoner began again.

An exclamation behind her in Vi's familiar voice, petrified her into stony silence.

"Why, Cyril! what in the world are you doing here!"

"I have the honor to be engaged to Miss Folsome. Paula, this is my sister, Lady Cuthbridge."

"Your sister! — Lady Cuthbridge! Then — why — I didn't know! —"

He grinned. "'Bim's'" just a pet name," he said, "for Harold Deneland Middleton, Lord Ormond of Cavanagh, and — Vi's brother — I —"

"But where did you meet him?" Lady Vi's curiosity got the better of her manners.

"With Mabel —" Paula began.

"With the future Lady Wroxham, Countess of Mordon," answered Bim.

"Oh!" came the chorus of surprise.

"Delighted — congratulations!" the great, warm voice of Benjamin Loomis sounded. They turned to find him standing behind them, with the chuckle that seemed to be habitual. "I'm going to kiss the bride," he announced. "You overdid the surprise act, you minx. You," he whispered as he bent close to her blushing cheek, "knew perfectly well who he was, and — you knew the right hunting-ground all right."

No one had overheard, but Paula glanced about with apprehension.

He studied her quizzically, and she could not meet his eyes. Still laughing, Benjamin Loomis turned to Mrs. Challoner, to whom animation was slowly returning.

"Little Chaperone," he rumbled kindly, "somebody owes you another medal."

Hiking with the Champions

But when Griffith left Cincinnati, and Hank O'Day took charge of the team, what a difference! What did Hank know about temperament? All the experiences he had ever had with it came when, as an umpire, he had been interviewed by Messrs. McGraw and Chance, these gentlemen questioning on several occasions his direct ancestors.

When Alameida arrived in Cincinnati in 1912, ready to go south for spring training, O'Day was in charge of the Reds. Much like a visiting prince, the wealthy young Cuban, lackeyed by a negro boy, engaged one of the most expensive suites in a leading hotel. Alameida had his coffee served in bed every morning. Hank came around to call on him one day, the Cuban having shown no disposition to call on Hank.

"Will you have some coffee?" invited Alameida.

"Naw," grunted Hank. "I take my coffee for breakfast."

A neighboring clock had struck the noon hour.

"Who's that?" inquired Hank, pointing to the little negro boy.

"That's my servant."

"Your what?"

"My servant," replied Alameida indifferently. "He travels with me and takes care of my clothes and makes me coffee in the morning."

Hank insisted that the boy be sent back to Cuba and Alameida sulked through the whole training season because he had to eat his breakfast sitting up instead of lying down. He got over it, though, and at the time of the following occurrence was playing a sensational game at third base. Miracle of miracles, Cincinnati was leading the National League race! Hank was dreaming of the pennant.

The scene is laid in the Cincinnati railroad station. Enter Alameida. He opens a gold cigar case.

"My favorite cigars! I have none! I must buy them here, for they do not keep that brand in St. Louis."

"But," someone protested, "you haven't time before the train leaves."

For answer Alameida strolled slowly up the platform wagging one of the little bamboo canes that George Cohan made famous. It was a very leisurely stroll, Latin and temperamental. The train left — and left Alameida behind. When O'Day learned what had happened, he imitated perfectly an Irish volcano. A day later Alameida strolled into the dining room of the Planters Hotel in St. Louis, bowed very gracefully to Hank and took his seat. It happened that the Reds had lost that day, and that Alameida's absence was responsible, the substitute third baseman having fizzled.

"What became of you last night?" inquired Hank, with a sullenness that suggested how much was yet to come.

"I had no cigars," explained Alameida with the conventional Latin shrug. "You cannot expect me to play good ball, without my own brand to smoke. They do not sell them in this city, so I had to get them in Cincinnati."

By the time he was able to talk coherently, Hank growled:

"I don't expect you to play ball anyhow. You will leave to-morrow for the Birmingham club of the Southern League."

"Very good, Meester O'Day," said Alameida, using a gaudy silk handkerchief to finish the polishing of a pink finger nail. "Do you know, can a fellow buy my cigars there, in this Birmingham?"

Ball players do not wrangle with each other off the field. If there is mutual dislike it is kept hidden. I am reliably informed that when the Boston Americans won their first World Championship, Parent and Ferris on opposite sides of second base played for three years without speaking to each other except when necessary in a game. Such feuds to-day are hidden. Everything is for the good of the team and the good of the game, the quiet decent behavior of nearly all ball players off the field, being significant.

3-IN-ON

Let this wonder-working oil help at household duties that ha always required too much time and effort.

Make a Dustless Duster with 3-in-One. Moisten about a half yard of cheese cloth wit 3-in-One and wipe furniture as you ordinarily do. The oi dampened cloth takes up the dust and at the same time gives bright, new look to everything it touches. Shake cloth out of doors when filled wit dust. Wash in soap and water and renew with 3-in-One occasionally.

A Floor Polish Mop is made just as easily. Any mop will do. Pour 3-in-One on mop and let stand until thoroughly permeated. Now see how quickly you can renew hardwood and painted floors without raising dust or tiring yourself out.

Fine For Polishing Furniture Wring out a cloth in cold wat Pour on a little 3-in-One. Wip furniture, wringing out cloth fr quently. Dry and polish with soft, woolen cloth or piece o cheese cloth. This will restore new look and bring out the lovel wood grain. Do but a small part at a time, always rubbing with grain of wood.

3 IN

3-IN-ONE OIL

The Oil For Sewing Machines because it keeps the bearings clean and practically frictionless. Dust never collects in bearings oiled with 3-in-One. Indeed, if applied to a machine already clogged and heavy with poor oil, 3-in-One works out the old accumulation and restores free running. Has sufficient viscosity to remain in bearings and give great wear. Never dries out. After oiling machine, use 3-in-One to polish case. 3-in-One contains no acid or grease. 3-in-One is the one superior lubricant for all household mechanisms—locks, bolts, clocks, electric fans, lawn mowers, ice cream freezers, talking machines, etc.

Brightens the Bath Room Nothing equals 3-in-One for keeping bright and spotless nickeled spigots, faucets, soap dishes and towel racks. Far better than a scratchy, scouring cake that cuts away the silvery finish and shows brass underneath. Fine, too, for removing spots and stains from enameled woodwork and parquet flooring in any part of the house.

3-in-One Prevents All Rust and Tarnish on faucets, nickeled parts of stoves and ranges, household tools and telephones. Keeps bright and clean, black iron ornaments, door escutcheons, push buttons, metal storm door fixtures and everything metal indoors or out. Use it on chandelier, gas jet and gas range keys to prevent leaking and sticking. Also to clean mirrors, window glass and cut glass.

3-in-One is sold in hardware, drug, grocery, housefurnishing and general stores. 1 oz. bottle, 10c; 3 oz., 25c; 8 oz. (½ pt.), Household size, 50c. Also in patent Handy Oil Cans that fit any machine drawer, 3½ oz., 25c. If your dealer does not carry these cans, we will send one by parcel post, full of good 3-in-One, for 30c.
